BAPTISTS LEAVE TOWN.

State Delegates Conclude Their Business and Go Home.

ANNUAL SERMON BY REV. SAGEBEER

He Urges the Preaching of Doctrinal Sermons, and Protests Against Pulpit Story-Telling — Important Business at the Closing Sessions.

The session of the Baptist convention held yesterday afternoon began at 2. The unfinished programme of the morning was at once taken up.

The denominational interests in the State were reported by Rev. W. G. Russell of Camden, who described briefly the different Baptist institutions of New Jersey.

Rev. J K. Manning of Red Bank was appointed a committee to nominate two guests for the home for aged ministers in West Farms, N. Y.

The first address of the afternoon was that of Rev. C. H. Dodd, pastor of the Peddie Memorial Church, Newark, on "The Orientation of Denominational Life." He spoke of the need of brotherly love in the Baptist Church. The younger element and the older people of the church should be brought together. The deacons of the church should not think themselves out of place in the meetings of the younger people. That they do, Mr Dodd said, is shown by the lack of interest shown at commencements and on other occasions. The Baptist young people were an important part of the Christian Endeavor Society. While the speaker realized the good the Endeavor movement accomplished he thought the turning of more attention to the Baptist Young People's Unions would do much toward bringing an increased fraternal feeling into the church.

Rev. J. T. Dickinson of Orange made a brilliant address on "Baptist Loyalty, or a Right Denominational Devotion". He said he favored the establishing of a Baptist church in every town in New Jersey, no matter how many churches of other denominations there were. He explained the qualities of the church which made it a necessity in every community. Loyalty for the denomination demanded the founding of churches all over the State.

Mr. Horr resigned the chair to Vice-president Sembower.

A report of the balloting in the election of officers showed that of 168 votes 164 had been cast for the ticket published in The Daily Press of yesterday. There were present 256 delegates and four visitors. These reports were duly received.

Five-minute speeches were made by representatives from the new churches in Arlington, Phillipsburg and Tuckahoe, and by Wm. Wallace of the Afro-American Association.

Three rallies were then held, the topic being "Our Interest and Place in State Mission Work". It was proposed that all be held in the church, but it was finally decided that pastors and deacons should alone remain in the church under the leadership of Rev H. F. Stillwell of Freehold. The women went to the lecture room and were led by Mrs. D. Dewolf of Newark. H. J. Ronalds was the leader of the young people's rally which was held in the rear room of the basement.

Many Plainfielders from other churches attended the closing session of the convention last evening It opened with a praise service of 15 minutes, conducted by J. A. Birkholz, who led the singing at the Christian Endeavor Convention in Cleveland.

Reports from the three rallies held in the afternoon came next, that of Mr. Stillwell on the meeting of the pastors and deacons being the first presented. At this rally Rev. C E. Lapp of Newark had told of his recent investigation of the saloon business in his city. He had found it difficult to interest his people in the work because they were either directly or indirectly interested in the liquor business, some of them owning buildings in which were saloons. The other rallies were reported as enthusiastic, helpful gatherings.

The annual sermon was preached by Rev. Joseph E. Sagebeer of Flemington. The text was John XVII: 17, "Sanctify them through Thy truth". It was a powerful, thorough discourse. Religion, said the speaker, was a state of mind finding expression in worship. Doctrine was essential to religion. People sometimes differed on the relations of creed and character. Some thought if a man lived righteously he was entitled to the rewards of heaven whether he had professed religion or not, while others thought that a man's misdeeds would be excused if he was formally a Christian.

To these people, thought Mr. Sagebeer, there seemed to be two conflicting statements in the Bible about the duties of a Christian. Christ told his Disciples that caring for the poor and hungry was an essential of salvation, and again we are told that believing on Christ is to be rewarded with everlasting life. But both commands should be obeyed.

The church has failed in missionary effort. Its work abroad is utterly incommensurate with the needs of the world. The trouble was that the New Testament commands were not carried out properly. The seed should be the doctrine, then human character would be the harvest. What church would not exchange its story-telling pastor for a sterling doctrinal preacher. It was with true doctrine that the people were to be sanctified.

After the sermon Secretary Cook announced the appointment of the following committees:

Denominational Interests — R. M. Luther, Henry Cross, E. W. Stone. E. M. Lightfoot, S. Giffard Nelson, Lemuel Moss, M. P. Fisher.

Resolutions—J. A. Chambliss, W. H. Hillier, W. T. S. Lumbar.

Obituaries—J. C. Buchanan, J. J. Davies, E. E. Jones, Frank Fletcher, C. Lothrop, Peter Gibb, W. E. Cornwell.

Auditing — Robert T. Seagraves, J. Frank Shull.

Arrangements for next anniversary—Rev. Dr. A. G. Lawson and the officers of the convention.

An evangelistic conference was then conducted by Rev. Dr. N. B. Randall of Summit. Several spoke of what they would do after returning from the convention. Rev. J. L. Watson of Mt. Olive made a closing prayer and the convention was adjourned till the meeting next year in Camden.

After the numerous amendments made yesterday the important points of the rules were left as follows: The annual meeting of the convention is on the last Tuesday in October, the fiscal year closing September 30. The name is "The New Jersey Baptist Convention". The officers are elected annually by ballot. They include, besides the regular officials a vice-president from every association in the State. The board of managers consists of thirty members, ten of which are elected every year for terms of three years. No missionary of the convention is eligible to a place on the board of managers. All the pastors of churches in the State are ex-officio members, and the others are delegates from the churches, each representing a net membership of 100 or fraction thereof. The board fills its own vacancies. The standing resolutions were not renewed.

The report on foreign missions given by Rev. F. C. A. Jones of Newark in the morning was talked about in recess and referred to in speeches all the afternoon and evening. The opposition to Mr. Jones based their idea on the verse "By their fruits ye shall know them". As he said in defending his stand afterwards, he objected very strongly to methods of distributing money among the missionaries that are now being practised. The man who sends home reports of his work in which it is shown how many thousands have been converted is apt to be supported in proportion to the size of the figures. It was wrong to estimate the value of foreign missionaries by the number of conversions. It would be more in line with Christian spirit to judge men by their faithfulness. In consequence of the present practice men were going into the wilderness, telling the heathen of Christ, baptizing them and then leaving without giving them any aid in starting a Christian life.

Mr. Pratt was the first to present conflicting ideas. He said that the report was entirely out of keeping with the purpose for which the committee had been appointed. It told simply what one man thought about the matter. It contained stinging reflections on the missionary work of the Baptists and was altogether unworthy of adoption. He was surprised to hear such a report from Mr. Jones. He wished to have the report returned to the committee. On the other hand Dr. Eaches said that he himself was orthodox and that he believed as Mr. Jones did. His speech did much to bring about the adoption of the report.

The complete figures of the treasurer's report were:

The clergymen of Plainfield must be reaping a rich harvest. Thursday's papers of that city contained accounts of no less than seven weddings which took place Wednesday.

AGAINST PARTY TRAITORS.

An Earnest Voter's Plea for Loyalty to the Democracy.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS: In your issue of Tuesday, the 30th inst., there appeared a communication signed "Veritas", quoting certain paragraphs which appeared in The Daily Press and the Elizabeth Herald, and commenting on the same.

"Veritas" says that in 1887 John T. Dunn was instrumental in defeating the whole Democratic ticket with the exception of Crowell of Rahway, and holding that John T. Dunn should expect nothing else from the hands of the Democrats of Union County but defeat.

From the trend of the remarks made by "Veritas" n't that at one time he may have been a Democrat, but has got to that point commonly known as "on the fence", ready to "flop" from one party to the other if things do not go just the way he thinks that they should.

Holding it to be true, which is yet to be proved, that John T. Dunn is guilty of the charges made by "Veritas", I do not think that it is the true spirit of Democracy that if one man proves a traitor to the party another should do likewise.

"Veritas" also brings up the postoffice question as a reason for "calling down" our present Congressman. I think it poor policy for the friends of any of the postoffice aspirants to work against the party for the simple reason that they were disappointed in the appointment of postmaster.

"Veritas" quotes John T. as saying that "all connected with the Democracy who fail to cast their ballots for him are traitors to their party". I hold, and I trust that every true Democrat will do the same, that John T. is right, and in all elections, personal animosity should be laid aside and exertions made to elect men best suited for the positions for which they are nominated.

Let "Veritas", if he is a Democrat, come out on Tuesday next and vote the straight Democratic ticket, and not do wrong, and perhaps lose the Democratic majority in Congress, by proving traitor to the party, simply because he thinks that some one else has

YOUNG DEMOCRATIC VOTER.

Mrs. Randolph Will Read a Paper.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—Please correct the statement in your issue of yesterday that Mrs. Julia Ward Howe is to speak at the next meeting of the Monday Afternoon Club. Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph of this city will present the paper on that occasion and the club will have the pleasure of listening to Mrs. Howe on the 19th inst.

WILHELMINA C. MILLER.
President Monday Afternoon Club.
Plainfield, Nov. 1.

Hallowe'en Pranks.

A party of young men who are said to be residents of this city raised a two-seated carriage to the roof of Peter Seader's barn on Race street some time between 12:30 and daybreak this morning. The heavy fishstand in front of George Lewis's store on Somerset street was carried to the yard in the rear of French's mill. A saloon sign "Soup Today" was placed on a barber shop. Gates innumerable were unhinged and hidden.

More Fire Boxes.

During November a fire-alarm box will be placed at the corner of Liberty and Second streets, and another near the High School. It is probable that a box will soon be put in on East Front street somewhere between Somerset and Richmond streets.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTEBOOK.

The regular weekly drill of the cadet corps, postponed from last Tuesday, was held this morning in the period immediately following recess. The companies were drilled by the respective commanders, and not divided into squads as usual.

The regular football practice will be held this afternoon. It looks as if we would not be able to meet the Leal's School eleven after all as it has about disbanded owing to the loss of so many players.

The class of '95 had a class meeting immediately after school to make arrangements for the class Thanksgiving Day spread. A committee of arrangements was balloted for and the following were elected: Miss Valentine Chandor, chairman; Henry B. Drake, Thomas D. Blair.

A committee consisting of Charles B. Morse, Miss Helen A. Hazen and John V. Beekman, Jr., was appointed to select a design for a class pin. NINETY-FIVE.

ASH-BARREL FIRE.

BOROUGH ALARM SOUNDED FOR PARK PLACE BLAZE.

The Flames Were Creeping Along the Wood Pile to the Floor Above—Speedily Extinguished.

Hot ashes in a barrel started a fire in the cellar of John N. Gulick's house, 15 Park place, at noon today. The smoke gave warning and the flames were extinguished before they spread from a heap of kindling wood to the beams above.

The ashes were placed in the barrel early this morning. It was not until 1 this afternoon that the top of the barrel began to burn and the kindling wood which was piled near it caught fire. The smoke then poured out of the cellar windows. Mrs. Gulick was upstairs at the time and noticed the smoke at the same time that several persons on the place discovered it.

William Van Winkle ran from across the street and started to put out the flames with pails of water. Edward Terry ran to Julius J. Stahl's store and Foreman Stahl pulled Box 142. Thomas McGann took out the hose wagon with his gray team, Driver Seader being away at work.

When the firemen arrived at the house they found that Mr. Van Winkle had succeeded in putting out the fire. The beams on the right side of the ceiling of the cellar were slightly charred, but fortunately the flames had not reach the space between the siding and the inner wall. After Chief Fairchild had examined the cellar thoroughly for stray sparks the recall was sounded. Seader came up then with his team. He had been at work at the head of Grove street and had not heard the alarm.

NETHERWOOD NO MORE.

A Post Cart Now Rattles Over the Heights with Suburban Mail.

Letter-Carrier Demarest began today his Netherwood rounds. He has a jaunty horse and cart, and makes quick delivery.

On the closing of the Netherwood office the retiring postmaster sends The Press a souvenir money order for one cent, and writes:

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—I today send you the last money order issued from this postoffice previous to its closing.

I am very truly yours, the first, last and only Democratic Postmaster of Netherwood, N. J. C. J. NOEL 16 Candles, 16 Guests.

A merry Hallow E'en party in celebration of the sixteenth birthday of Miss Florence Norbury, daughter of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Superintendent, was given at her home on North avenue. There were 16 candles, and 16 guests, counting the hostess, so each got an illuminated slice of the cake of honor.

Those present were Ethel and Minnie Wilde of Newark, Percy Butterworth of Newark; Clara Armstrong, Mamie Renogar, Francis Thorne, Joseph Lane, Charles Runyon, Henry Runyon, Clarence Sutphen, Maurice Sutphen, Authur Alburtis, Ernest Millark, Ivan Pearson and Jack Stelle.

The gifts were beautiful and costly. A sumptuous repast was served by Caterer Stephenson. After supper the party set out for a Hallow e'en ramble, and the rest of the evening was enjoyably spent in games and dancing. The guests left for their homes at 3:40, thoroughly delighted with their night's pleasure.

Chrysanthemum Dance.

The Chrysanthemum Circle of the West End had an enjoyable Hallow E'en dance in the Fanwood Club house last night. Dancing to Sam Frazee's music lasted until after this morning.

Those present were the Misses May and Maggie Flanagan, Katie and Sarah Carney, Maggie and Nodie Casey, Kittie Daly, Mary Galbraith, Mamie Casey, Julia Fields, Fannie Rafferty, Miss Powers, Miss Burns, and John Gallagher, Charles Ward, John Hibbitts, John and Garrett Powers, John Keeley, Joseph Gavin, Daniel Sheen, Mr. Cannon, Mr. Mulligan, and James Casey of New York.

Hallow E'en Surprise.

Maxwell Honeyman of Duer street was given a surprise party by his mother last evening. Hallow E'en games and tricks were played, after which refreshments were served to the gay young people. Among those present were the Misses Bertha Thorn, Maud French, Edna French, Bessie Valiant, Beatrice Emmons, Lilian Glenn, Florence Barnes, Maud Honeyman; George Smith, Volney F. Green, Herbert Moore, Henry B. Drake, John VanWinkle, Everett Peck.

A Meeting Between.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe's lecture before the Monday Afternoon Club will not take place until Nov. 19, whereas the club's next meeting will be held Nov. 5. This correction is asked because it is feared that the previous statement may lead to confusion on the part of members and of outsiders who wish to hear Mrs. Howe.

The Parks Ought to Have Had That Second Game.

The Park Club five-men team rolled two good games last night with the New York Athletic Club, on the latter's alleys. The last game was close and exciting, but despite Sandford's great score and Thiers's good backing, the game was lost by 15 pins. Lyman set the team a good pace in the first game, which the boys refused to follow:

DEMOCRATIC COUNTY RULE.

The Union County Clerkship Has Always Been Democratic, and a Howling Financial Success.

(From The Elizabeth Herald.)

Union County always has been Democratic, and the fruits of that doctrine, manifested through Democratic officials, are excellent results to contemplate. While Elizabeth, Rahway and other embarrassed and embarrassing municipalities show pecuniary relations of a shaky nature, Union County bonds, Union County credit and reliability in the financial world have ever been of the gilteedge variety. The county has, almost without exception, been in the hands of Democratic freeholders, Democratic county collectors and other county officials of that political persuasion, and we know and the people know what has been the consequence.

The county's bonds are A1 securities that command a premium, investors are partial to them and bankers look upon them as they do upon wheat in demand or corn that is needed. Just contrast the county's credit with Elizabeth's and Rahway's reputation among moneyed men and banking institutions for the proof of our utterances. Democratic county rule has always been a howling financial success, and honest people would fain have more of it. An efficient County Clerk of rigid integrity and undoubted capacity is an important part of Democratic county furniture, and William M. Oliver fills the bill like a purling rill. See?

EVENTS IN NEW YORK.

WHAT PEOPLE AT THE METROPOLIS ARE TALKING ABOUT.

Watches and Jewels Devoted to Religion. The Cad a New York Product. Brooklyn's Latest. The Girl who Kisses. Miscellaneous Matters of Interest.

New York has the reputation of being a wicked town, and it is probable that about every one of the statute and moral laws is broken during the week at least once in the metropolis, but with its wickedness it has some spasms of goodness. At a recent meeting of the Christian Missionary Alliance, during the closing services, one of the most dramatic events ever chronicled in the religious history of the country followed an address made by Miss Louisa Shepard, an evangelist. Miss Shepard spoke of the fact that during the Prussian war the Emperor called upon the Prussian women for assistance and they sold their jewelry and took instead an iron cross. "Now," Miss Shepard said, "if these women were willing to give up their jewelry for their country, surely we ought to do as much for the cause of religion." She had hardly finished her statement when a man got up and laid a handsome gold watch upon the altar. Then a man took a diamond pin from his neck scarf and put it by the watch. These acts started a little deluge of gifts, and all through the house women arose and brought rings and men brought watches until the altar was filled with watches, jewels and miscellaneous ornaments. It is said that the men who gave watches will have in place of the gold watches iron ones with the works of the gold watches contributed, inside. The donors of the rings will have instead of the iron crosses. New York, maybe, is wicked, but it can also be stirred to do notable acts for religion.

A critic asserts that the "cad" is purely a metropolitan product. There may be, it is said, "bucks" and "bloods" elsewhere, but the cad is the peculiar product of New York. "He never reads anything save the 'Daily Crimes' or the latest erotic novel—the immortal Addison is dull and insipid, while the essays of Lamb and Macaulay are lost on him entirely. If reared in a hogshead and fed through the bunghole he could hardly have less appreciation of the classics of the language which he attempts to speak. Instead of seeking the company of intelligent people, these 'silken sons of dalliance, nursed in pleasure's flowery lap,' hang upon the spirits of pleasure-loving actresses, who cozen them out of flowers and diamonds, and enjoy the champagne suppers which they supply. Aping everything English, and hating everything American, the cad grows up an object of contempt; and as he hurries down the stream of dissipation he stands for all that is asinine and stupid." This is a harsh indictment, but the first-class cad comes very near deserving it. You may be sure no watch or ring of his ever went upon an altar, or was charmed away from him by any one working for high purposes.

Another scandal has been unearthed over in Brooklyn by the New York Tribune, which asserts that the Soldiers' Arch, for which $450,000 has already been appropriated, is a work which is full of frauds and mismanagement. It is asserted that for a period of five years after the work was begun, no minute book was kept, and it is further stated that many of the papers were missing, that big sums were paid for excavations and unnecessary columns, and that there were other irregularities. Notwithstanding all its churches, Brooklyn seems to have about as many assorted sins in official life as any municipality in the country.

The cable cars, the trolley, the carelessly driven trucks and express wagons, and the other dangers that menace the dwellers in this metropolis seem to be enough for any ordinary man to stand, but there has recently developed a new terror, a woman who goes through the streets kissing every man she can get hold of. The kisser is about 35 years old, rather large, and any small man who comes her way stands a very poor chance of escape. She made a big record the other day in Broadway by kissing the men on the street and on the cars until a policeman pulled her in, but the men are not yet safe for she is likely to start on a new campaign any day. Men who come to the metropolis should look out for her.

The late A. T. Stewart devoted a large sum of money to build a hotel for women. It was built, but never was much used by women, and is now a general hotel. The trouble seems to have been that it was too expensive and too fine; and it also appeared to lack skilled direction. Another building for the exclusive use of women is projected—one that shall be handsome and fireproof, and centrally located. Miss Janet Lewis, a prime mover in the scheme, is confident of success.

The theory that there is gold in New Jersey, crops up at regular intervals in that sandy little commonwealth. A few days ago a man who was digging a well near Rahway, that town of murders and mysteries found what he believed to be a stratum of gold, and the excitement which had attended several previous discoveries of nothing has been repeated. It is just about as likely that there is gold in paying quantities in New Jersey, as it is that the whole State is underlined with gold pavement at the depth of eighteen hundred and ninety-four feet.

When the schedules of the earthly assests and liabilities of Mr. Oliver Summer Teall, the young man with an unlimited supply of fads and a perennial activity, were footed up and filed, the following startling disclosure was made: Liabilities $110,936, nominal assets $210,150, actual assets $6.74 cash. There has not often been a greater disproportion between the nominal and actual assets of a bankrupt. Even in this, Ollie distinguished himself.

There are some wide-awake practical jokers in the City of Brooklyn, even if it is considered dull. Not long ago an advertisement appeared in one of the New York papers, stating that Fred Richartz, of Brooklyn, wanted twenty-four baseball players, twelve male and twelve female, to play in the southern circuit. As a matter of fact Mr. Richartz did not want any such thing, and the advertisement was put in revenge for one of Mr. Richartz's jokes, in which was a letter of introduction to a young lady whose color proved to be, on investigation, decidedly dark.

One of the minor crusades of greater New York is managed by women, who are endeavoring to improve the play bills by having removed from them the objectionable pictures used to advertise some of the theatrical entertainments. The crusade is progressing with considerable enthusiasm, but so far the results have not been very important.

NONSENSE VERSES.

If you will kindly help me, please,
I shall be very glad;
For I don't go to school, you know,
I'm such a little lad.

There's several things I can't explain,
That's why I ask of you
To tell me what you learn from books,
What makes the sky so blue?

Why don't green peas in peanut shells
Out in our garden grow?
And why should poppies have that name
If "pop" they cannot go?

Why do not chestnut horses come
From off th' horse chestnut tree?
And why are table leaves so big
While tree leaves are so wee?

Why is it that a white man's told
So often that he's green?
Why is it that boys should never talk,
But only just be seen?

Why aren't dumb waiters sometimes dumb,
As they had ought to be?
They're horrid, noisy, squeaky things
It's always seemed to me.

And why should little pitchers have
Their ears so very great,
When all I've seen have but a mouth?
What is the earth's true weight?

What makes the clouds stay in the sky
Instead of falling down?
Are matches used to light the stars?
Why don't the fishes drown?

If you will just answer these for me,
You will be very kind.
And when you've done there are lots more
A-preying on my mind.

THE MARSHMALLOW PARTY.

A New and Seasonable Entertainment for Young Folks.

A marshmallow party is the latest thing just now, and they are easily gotten up and inexpensive. The first thing to be done is to have a fire built; if the house has an old New England fireplace, wide and roomy, so much the better. If the cottage is by the sea, driftwood makes a lively fire, and the fireplace should be piled high with dry logs; no lamps or candles are permissible, the sole illumination being that from the blazing wood.

The participants gather around the wide hearth, sitting on stools, chairs or on the rug. A big box of marshmallows, the usual kind from the confectioner's is provided and set on a low table near the mantel. A bundle of straight, thin sticks—laths will do—should be in readiness; these are usually whittled by the boys while the fire is burning up. They are slender sticks about two or three feet in length, with one end quite sharply pointed; a marshmallow is speared upon this point and held in front of the ruddy coals; this should not be attempted until there is a good bed of live coals, as the flame is apt to smoke the marshmallows; they are toasted until they become a delicate brown and are eaten in primitive fashion from the stick.

A more conventional way is to lay them in a deep dish or bowl as they are done. This dish is set upon the hearth in order to keep the contents warm. When the confection is all toasted the dish is placed upon a table and the dainty contents is consumed, sometimes with the accompaniment of punch and cake, but oftener alone. Marshmallows so prepared are delicious.

If the party is held in the house, the company generally tell ghost stories after the feast is over. Told by the flickering firelight, these stories sound especially weird and awesome, wise hostesses encouraging the telling of them. In this way the guests entertain each other, and every one will admit that there is nothing more fascinating than the telling of ghost stories. After the harrowing tales have been recounted the listeners are generally hungry, so toward midnight supper is provided. The marshmallow party is very popular with young people.

Had No Desire to be Great.

Congressman John Allen, of Mississippi, on one occasion was stopping for dinner at the house of one of his constituents, in which there was a son and heir about 8 years old. He had been introduced to the statesman, and then took up his station at his mother's knee.

"Now," she said to him, "if you are a good boy and study your lessons you may be a great man some day."

"How great?" he inquired, boy-like.

"You may be a member of Congress, as Mr. Allen is."

The boy looked Mr. Allen over carefully.

"Well," he said, when he had finished his survey, "if they all look like that I reckon I ain't so perticklar about bein' too good."—Detroit Free Press.

Gingerbread for the Kaiser's Sons.

During the German Emperor's visit to Thorn he received a deputation of the confectioners of the town dressed in picturesque costumes, who presented him with a house made of gingerbread, which was so heavy that it had to be carried by four men. The house is four feet high and seven feet wide, and weighed three hundredweight. The walls, roof and windows are entirely of gingerbread and sugar, and the Emperor was so delighted with his present that he at once ordered it to be sent to his sons at Potsdam.—London Sunday Times.

HE LOOKED GREEN, BUT

He Was Not as Verdant as He Looked. Why He Was Not Wedded.

Crossing the Cumberland River one morning in the rope ferryboat which prevailed on those waters, I passed the time talking to the gawky young mountaineer who did the Charon act in that locality. He was about 20, and to my experienced eye, was, as I judged men, quite as green a specimen as I had come upon.

"Are you married?" I asked, after a few minutes.

"No, mister."

"Not married? Why, you are old enough to be."

"I reckon I am."

"Well, you ought to be. It is the only proper condition for a man, and every man owes it to himself and to society to take a wife. It settles one in life and brings about him those hostages of fortune which are bound to make a better citizen of him, as well as a better man."

I knew I was talking over his head but I was enjoying it if he wasn't.

"Are you married?" he asked

"Well, no," I hesitated, "I am not. I tried to be, but the woman in the case objected."

He was still for a moment.

"Mister," he said then: "you reckon you are the only feller in the world that ever happened to meet up with one uv them objectin' kind uv women?"

Later, when I told him good-by and shook hands with him in sympathy, I didn't think he was so green as he looked.

It was at the church fair proper,
And his nickel down he laid,
But after he'd drained the glass he said:
"It needs some lemon-aid!"

CHRISTIANS IN A SYNAGOGUE.

Assisting Jewish Priests to Dedicate a Shrine in Cleveland.

Our enterprising Jewish contemporary, the Tidings, prints a report of the ceremonies at the dedication of the new and grand synagogue in Cleveland, and it is not going too far to say that some of the things told of in the report are wonderful. Is it not a wonder that a half dozen of the Protestant ministers of Christianity united with the rabbi of the synagogue before the Jewish shrine in delivering discourses of exultation at the dedication of the edifice erected for the service of the Congregation Tiffereth Israel?

The ceremonial services at the altar were conducted by an eminent young member of the rabbinate, Rabbi Moses Gries, assisted by Rabbi Moses Machol and the cantor. The six denominations of Protestant Christianity were represented by the six clergymen, who took part in the proceedings of the occasion. One of these clergymen was an Episcopalian; and the others were a Presbyterian, a Methodist, a Congregationalist, a Disciple, and the pastor of the Epworth Memorial Church. It was immediately after the singing of S'u Sh'orim in the synagogue, that Rabbi Gries offered them a welcome, in which he expressed his opinion that the time is coming when all God's people will be in close fellowship. Hereupon followed a deliverance by the Rev. Dr. Cyrus S. Bates (Episcopalian), who complimented Rabbi Gries in a way which must have been highly acceptable, then spoke of the magnificence of the new synagogue, moralized for a while, and closed by saying: "Because there happens to be a difference between the faith of the Jew and that of the Christian, this is no reason why mutual love should not prevail."

The Rev. Charles S. Mills (Congregationalist) exclaimed: "As Jews and Christians worship one God, the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, we should unite for the spreading of the truth in America, and for the solution of the problems which confront us." And the others followed in the same strain. Thus pleasantly and pleasingly spoke the six Protestant clergymen in the presence of the two rabbis, before the altar of the Jewish edifice erected in Cleveland, by the Congregation Tiffereth Israel.

It seems that the thing here told of deserves to rank among the wonders of the nineteenth century.

Poor Maids of Honor.

Maids of honor in attendance on Her Majesty get $1,000 a year. They have little or nothing to do besides making themselves agreeable, but the pinching and struggling to dress up to the position is said by modistes who know what they are talking about to be very hard work. It is an unwritten law that the same toilet shall not appear in Her Majesty's presence more than twice. The Queen has as much love for old clothes as any one in Petticoat lane, but her Court is always dressed right up to the nines. A maid of honor has no board bills to pay or servants to tip, and apparel is 50 per cent. cheaper in London than New York, but even under those happy conditions and with the perquisites from trade and the favors from royalty she doesn't have enough money at the end of the year to buy gum.

GOSSIP ABOUT AN EMPEROR.

William of Germany Influenced by a Pretty Baroness.

In a breezy article on European affairs, the Marquise de Fontenoy says of the young war lord of the German Empire:

It has all along been feared that Emperor William, with his unlimited confidence in his own strength of mind and of principle, would prove himself as soft as wax in the hands of any really clever, designing and beautiful woman. Until a few months ago the women with whom he was brought into contact failed to quite to the graces of intellect those of physique. The beautiful women were stupid and only the unattractive ones clever.

At length the Emperor seems to have met his fate in the person of the very lovely and remarkably clever wife of the Baron Kosciol-Koscielski, one of the leaders of the Polish party in the Prussian House of Lords and perhaps the most popular among his countrymen of all Polish poets and playwrights.

The mastery which the beautiful Baroness has obtained over the Emperor is so great that it was even publicly commented upon by Prince Bismarck in the speech which he made the other day when he stated that "the Polish influence augments always in the measure that some Polish family obtains more or less influence at court. I need not think of that of the Radziwills, and to-day we have exactly the same state of affairs." The Prince's allusion to the Radziwills is a reference to old Emperor William's grand passion for that lovely Princess Elise Radziwill, whom he was at one moment on the point of marrying and to whom he remained devoted throughout her lifetime.

Popular rumor, especially court gossip, which was wont to endow the relations of the old Emperor toward Princess Radziwill with a certain amount of romance and even poetry, is less kind in this respect to his grandson and does not hesitate to attribute the Empress' sudden arrival at Koenigsberg and her equally precipitate departure as well as her conference with her mother-in-law to the jealousy which her husband's attentions to the fair Pole had aroused.

NAPOLEON'S LOVES.

THE GREAT CAPTAIN WAS INCONSTANT EXCEPT TO AMBITION.

His Bad Treatment of Desiree Eugenie Clary. Several Proposals Before Josephine de Beauharnais Accepted Him. Desiree's Revenge.

Up to the age of 26, it appears that Napoleon had never conceived a serious affection for any woman. With the exception of Mme. Turreau, the wife of a delegate of the Convention to the Army of Italy in 1794, women seemed to have paid but scant attention to the little, pale, thin officer, who was always badly dressed and regardless of his appearance. His early love affairs when investigated resolve themselves into trivial flirtations or valgar adventure.

While at Marseilles, however, in the beginning of 1795, Napoleon played at love with Mme. Joseph Bonaparte's sister, Desiree-Eugenie Clary, then a pretty girl of sixteen; she believed his attentions to be serious. Sixty-five years later the rough drafts of her letters to him were found among her effects; they show that at the time she entertained for him an ardent and sincere affection.

"Oh, my friend," Mlle. Clary wrote in one of these letters, "take care of yourself for my sake, for I could not live without you; guard as sacredly as I shall the promise which binds us, for were it broken, I should die."

For some time after Bonaparte's arrival in Paris in May, 1795, he sent affectionate messages to Desiree, and urged his brother Joseph to have a date fixed for the wedding, but eventually the fascinating capital which he had entered with a worn-out uniform, leaky boots, and a suite composed of a couple of hungry aide-de-camps, interposed itself and its captivating women between him and the little Marseillaise. "In Paris alone," wrote Napoleon, "live women capable of holding the helm. A woman should live six months in Paris to learn what is her just due, and where her rightful domain." A few days later he wrote: "The women here, who are certainly the most beautiful in the world, play a great role in all the affairs of life."

It is certain that the young officer, who had nothing except his hand to offer, tendered that freely, first to Mme. de Permon, then to Mme. de la Bouchargie; later to Mme. de Lesparda, and finally to Mme. de Beauharnais, who took him at his word. During all this time he never wrote to Desiree Clary, who, at last, having heard of his marriage, lifted her voice in complaint, but so gently that it sounds like the strain of an Æolian harp. "You have broken my heart," she said, "yet I am weak enough to forgive you everything. You are married, and I have no longer the right to love and think of you; the only consolation which remains for me is to be assured of your belief in my constancy; then I long for death, for life is a burden, now that I may not consecrate it to you. I cannot accustom myself to the thought that you are married—it is too hard, too bitter. I will prove to you that I am more faithful to my engagement than you to yours, and though you have broken the chain which united us, I shall hold it binding; I shall never marry. I wish you every happiness and all prosperity in your marriage, and I hope that the woman you have chosen will make you as happy as I had meant to do, and as you deserve; but in the midst of your happiness, remember poor Eugenie, and pity her sad fate."

Forgetfulness was foreign to Bonaparte's nature, and the memory of this love which he had inspired was always a tender point with him; throughout his life he strove to right the wrong and win forgiveness. Desiree, on her part refused several offers, but eventually accepted Gen. Bernadotte. The news of this marriage reached Bonaparte at Cairo, and, although Bernadotte was his enemy and the union displeased him, he wrote most kindly to Desiree, wishing her all happiness.

When he returned from Egypt, the first person to solicit a favor was Mme. Bernadotte, who asked him to stand godfather to her infant son. Intuitively she knew that a son was the one thing lacking to complete Napoleon's happiness, and, as if to spite Josephine, whom she hated, and whom she always spoke of as the "old woman," Desiree boasted of her maternity. Bonaparte granted her request, and with Ossian's martial ballads in mind, named the baby Oscar.

Years later, he said: "Bernadott's becoming a Marshal of France, Prince of Pontecorvo, and King of Sweden was all owing to his marriage with my first sweetheart." It was for her sake that he pardoned her husband's disloyalty during the empire, forgave him after Auerstaedt, Wagram, and Walcheren, condoning military mistakes which were probably something worse than blunders, coming as they did on top of a flagrant conspiracy in which Bernadotte, Fouche, and Talleyrand, in complicity with the Royalists, brought into play the same tactics by which, in 1814, the return of Louis XVIII. was effected.

Although Mme. Bernadotte herself would never appear at court, for she detested Josephine and the entire Beauharnais family, and was at no pains to conceal her dislike, Napoleon showered gifts upon her. He presented her with priceless Sevres vases and Gobelin tapestries, and it was for her that he reserved one of the three magnificent fur pelisses which the Emperor of Russia presented to him after Erfurt; it is certain, however, that his friendship was entirely disinterested.

PAIN BANISHED SLEEP.

A RHEUMATIC TELLS A WONDERFUL STORY.

Less Than Half a Bottle of Munyon's New Remedy Restored Him to Health.

James Buckley, 215 Washington street, Newark, N. J., says: "I have been suffering from rheumatism for a number of years. The pains were exceedingly severe and I could not sleep nights. The remedies I obtained did me little or no good, nor did the doctors whom I consulted. This had gone on, each recurring attack being more painful and prolonged than the previous one. I could not get relief until I commenced taking Munyon's Rheumatism Cure. Less than one-half a bottle drove all the rheumatism out of my system and I am as well and strong as I ever was in my life. I consider the remedy a wonderful one and take pleasure in recommending it."

Munyon's Rheumatism Cure is guaranteed to cure rheumatism in any part of the body. Acute or muscular rheumatism cured in from one to five days. It never fails to cure sharp, shooting pains in the arms, legs, sides, back or breast, or soreness in any part of the body in from one to three hours. CATHERINE HARRISON, WITCH.

A Paper on the Early Witch Lore of Connecticut.

Dr. C. J. Hoadly read a paper on "Catherine Harrison, Witch," at the meeting of the Connecticut Historical Society from which we extract:

Catherine Harrison was a house servant before her marriage, and one of the daughters of the house where she worked made oath that she was a "notorious liar, a Sabbath breaker and a fortune teller." The depositions said she had caused sickness to some people, death to others, had an unholy influence over animals, had been seen to appear as a calf and change back to her own shape, and that her form or face had frequently appeared at people's bedsides and other unlikely places. At this trial she was not convicted. She was arrested again in May, 1669, and again committed to jail. At the following term of court she was indicted, pleaded not guilty, and was tried before a jury. This jury then failed to agree, and she was remanded to jail until court should convene again in the fall. At that term the jury rendered a verdict of guilty, but the court was not satisfied. It obtained an expert opinion on witchcraft from some ministers, and still not being satisfied, referred the matter to the general court. She remained in prison until May, 1670, when the general court released her on the payment of the "just fees" of the trial and on condition she should leave the State.—Hartford Times.

A Black Eye for Aluminum Ships.

The Navy Department has just completed a test of aluminum as a material for ship boats. Two sheets, each one-sixteenth of an inch thick, have been immersed for three months at the Norfolk navy yard. One was pure aluminum and the other aluminum, slightly alloyed with nickel. The pure plate was thickly covered with large barnacles, and was more or less pitted by the action of the salt water. The alloyed plate was encrusted with smaller barnacles and was badly corroded. This piece was as injuriously affected as a combination of iron and copper would have been with the same exposure. In the opinion of naval experts it will not be advisable to build aluminum boats if they are intended to remain any length of time in the water, though, on account of its lightness, it may be advantageously used for metal work exposed to salt water only occasionally. The use of aluminum cannot be recommended near salt water under any circumstances.

Vermont's Deserted Farms.

Deserted farms in Vermont, it is said, will be unknown in a year or two more. Hundreds advertised three years ago as abandoned and for sale at almost any price are now yielding abundant crops. The tide of immigration has turned and the demand for desirable places exceed the supply. The attractions of Vermont as a summer home are becoming better understood each year, and many city men are buying and improving farms for a summer residence of only a few months. The outlook for Vermont's agricultural future is promising.

A BLUE SILK.

"George!"

"Yes."

"When you are in the city to-day I want you to do something for me."

"What is it?"

"Only a little shopping. You will be near Cooper's, won't you? Well, just run in there and order ten yards of this sample sent at once to me."

"Which sample? Let me see."

"It's that mauve with the white spots."

"Why don't you take the light blue with the rosebuds?"

"That's better suited for demi-evening. I need mine for afternoon and occasional Sunday wear."

"I say, sis."

"Well?"

"That blue is the most exquisite thing I ever saw in the way of silk. Get it, too."

"I don't need it."

"Then I shall have my revenge."

"How?" and she laughed merrily.

"By marrying the first girl I see dressed in it."

"George, what a silly you are!"

An hour or two later, George's business completed, he bethought him of his sister's commission, and, crossing the street, entered the dry goods palace of Cooper, Hale & Co.

"What will you have, Mr. Vincent?" said one of the floor walkers, bowing obsequiously as George entered.

"The silk counter," George answered, briefly.

In a moment he stood before a counter overhung and draped with the latest novelties in silk, while a shop girl smilingly asked what he wished.

He did not reply promptly, for his eyes had wandered to the other end of the counter where an elderly lady, with soft, gray hair drawn against the cheeks was crinkling the blue and rosebud silk in her gloved fingers with the knowing air of an old shopper.

"This is what I am to get," he said, drawing the sample book from his pocket. "Ten yards to be sent to Miss Margaret Vincent, 321 Filbert avenue."

George laid down a bill and in the interim of waiting for the change found himself again noticing the elderly lady.

"Only nine yards!" he heard her exclaim. "What a pity, and my daughter has so set her heart on this particular blue and rosebud. Anyway, you may send it. It can have a plain front. The address is—" He unconsciously stretched his ears. "It was not for the old party then, after all."

"Your change, sir."

It was the third time the shop girl had said it and now she raised her voice under the impression that George was deaf.

The elderly lady turned and looked at George.

"What a pity so young a man is deaf," she said, though in a low tone.

"Yes, ma'am, it is," replied the shop girl, as no one else seemed addressed.

George smiled. He had heard, but he would not resent the charge under the circumstances.

It was just after dinner that the express delivered the package from Cooper's. Margaret sprung to open it. With a little cry of dismay:

"George!"

"What now?"

"Why, it isn't the mauve at all, but the blue and rosebud. I think you are dreadfully provoking."

George whistled a long note of surprise.

"They mixed the orders," he said, "and sent you the daughter's instead."

"What daughter's?"

"A nice elderly lady's. She was getting it at the same counter when I was getting yours."

"Ah!" it was a very intelligent "ah."

"How would it do," he ventured, "to get the address and send it right to the daughter"—his face colored slightly—"from here."

"That wouldn't do at all," answered Margaret, "but never mind, I'll make it all right without bothering you any more. It shall go back to Cooper's in the morning and of course 'the daughter,' who has mine, will return it to Cooper's and they will send it to me at once."

For some reason this plan did not seem to fully delight her brother.

"I—I thought," he said, "you might get 'the daughter's' address, you know, and"—

Margaret looked at her brother keenly for an instant, then laughed roguishly.

"What nonsense! Still, I will get the address. I can manage it, I am sure."

"How?"

"That is my affair, isn't it?"

"I suppose so," and he dropped the subject, sure it was in good hands.

Two weeks went by and no allusion had been made to the address.

"George," said Margaret one Wednesday morning, "don't you think I need a change?"

"Oh, yes, I suppose so," he answered.

"That is just what I am thinking," she asserted. "So I'm going to Howell's sanitarium for a week or two."

"Why on earth to that prosy place?"

"Oh, because. And you'll come down Saturday evening to spend Sunday, won't you?"

"I fancy not. It's too dull."

"But, George, dear, there's a great deal of dress there—evening dress," and she glanced at him quizzically. "Besides, I'll give you that address you wanted."

"Give it to me now."

She shook her head obstinately.

"I'll come," he said, as meek as a lamb.

And Saturday evening he went, getting in on "the nine o'clock." Margaret met him at the door in a white evening gown.

"There's a hop on," she said.

"Ah, then excuse me."

"No, no," and she pulled him forward, hat and all. "Allow me to present you to 'the address' you wanted, my school friend, Jennie Wells. This is her mother, Mrs. Wells, here for her health."

"Really, Margaret, you are as explanatory as a guide book," and Jennie held out a fair, ringless hand.

"Ah! Yes, you are the deaf young gentleman I noticed at Cooper's," and Mrs. Wells shook his hand. "Can it be cured?"

George did not answer. He was noticing Jennie. In the blue and rosebud silk, soft throated and lily armed, with her brown hair and dancing eyes, she made a lovely picture.

"George isn't the least bit deaf," said Margaret to her mother, as they trailed off together.

"Indeed!"

It was wonderful how soon after that George opened his pocket diary and showed Jennie the blue and rosebud sample hidden there. Mrs. George Vincent has now laid that gown away in lavender.—Chicago News.

AND HE SUCCEEDED.

WHAT A DETERMINED WILL UNDERTOOK TO DO.

He Found Something That Very Much Astonished Him—And Was Wise and Smart Enough to Make the Most of It.

Are you ever troubled with rheumatism? If so, you know what it is to suffer and you would like to get well. It is a disease which infects the blood, and is liable to appear at any time in different parts of the body.

It often goes to the heart, which makes it a very dangerous disease. Winslow A. Litchfield, Eeq., a well-known man of Chelsea., Massachusetts, has long been a fearful sufferer from rheumatism. He is superintendent of the Garden Cemetery, and resides at 52 Chester Ave.

He tried all manner of remedies without benefit, but at last found something that surpised him in its power to cure this disease. He is so pleased at his remarkable cure that he writes the following letter:

"For several years I have been troubled with that awful disease, rheumatism. I was in a very bad way, suffering tortures, from the rheumatic pains and could get nothing to help me. I tried many remedies and doctors but got no benefit.

"It affected my whole general health, and I was greatly worried for fear I should never get well. I determined to kee on trying and to recover if possible. By the advice of a relative who had used Dr. Greene's Nervura blook and nerve remedy, and been cured, I began using it.

"From the very first I felt a great improvement and the pain grew steadily less. In a short time I could sleep well and the pain left me. I am satisfied that Dr. Green's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is a splendid medicine, and that it will do all it is advertised to. It cured me and I take great pleasure in recommending it to all sick and suffering persons."

Rheumatism is one of the most painful and dangerous diseases if neglected. The joints often become terribly swollen, causing the greatest agony.

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy cures it. It is the surest and most positive cure known. If you have rheumatism or any form of blood or nervous disease, take this wonderful remedy and you will get well. Try it and see for yourself. It is the discovery and prescription of that famous physician, Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th Street, New York, the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic disease. He can be consulted free, personally or by letter.

MC'CARTHY'S BRIDE.

CISSY LOFTUS WEDS YOUNG JUSTIN MCCARTHY IN EDINBURGH.

A Runaway Marriage Between a Concert Hall Singer and the Son of the Famous Writer and Parliamentary Leader. The Marriage Created a Sensation.

Justin Huntley McCarthy, son of the Nationalist leader, and his wife, Cissy Loftus, a London concert hall singer, arrived in New York not long ago on the American line steamship Paris. On Wednesday, August 30, the couple were married in Edinburgh by the Sheriff. As both are Catholics, and the services were civil, a second religious ceremony was necessary. On the day before, Miss Loftus, who was charming the music hall habitues by her imitations of Bernhardt, Yoette Guilbert and other stage notables, sent a note to her manager stating that she had a severe cold and could not appear.

Before the manager could reach her lodgings and plead with her to put off having inconvenient colds, she and McCarthy were on their way to Edinburgh and the Sheriff. The marriage created a sensation, and Mrs. McCarthy received an ovation on her return to London. Everybody was pleased except her mother, who shared her income. She threatened to sue McCarthy.

"Young Justin," as he is known, is 37 years of age, while his wife is said to be 18. McCarthy is a blond, with a pink and white complexion. He expects, he says, to become associated with Daly in some theatrical ventures, while his wife may go on the stage in one of his companies, playing ingenue parts.

McCarthy is a clever journalist and writer. He has been engaged in newspaper work since boyhood. His latest work was on William Waldorf Astor's Pall Mall Gazette. For ten years he represented Newry in Parliament, but retired because he grew tired of being a statesman. His most successful play is "The Candidate." Having a mastery of several languages, he has been employed by Daly as translator and adapter of plays.

Cissy Loftus, who was christened Marie Cecilia Loftus, is the daughter of an English music hall singer. She was educated in a Lancashire convent, and, it is said, was not allowed to visit a theatre until she was 15 years of age. Her talents, however, were cultivated, and when a manager saw her imitations, which sometimes surpass the original, she was at once engaged. Success was almost instantaneous, and she became the rage in London.

She is a women of average height, with regular features and an attractive manner. Her conversation is pleasing, and she speaks with an accent which will enrapture the anglo-maniacs who may meet her.

A Full Grown Appetite.

"Don't you find that the drinking habit grows on you?" asked the curious investigator.

"Lord, no," cheerfully answered Mr. Lushforth. "I reached the limit long ago."—Indianapolis Journal.

THE RIVALS.

A beautiful evening in southwestern Texas. The short Southern twilight was settling down over the broad prairie; the horizon blazed with sunset light; the air was full of the scent of flowers; no sound was heard but the light wind's rustling and the hum of numerous insects.

Standing on the piazza of John Robert's mansion were two persons, both young and well favored. The man was speaking in a pleading voice, the girl listening with a frown on her lovely face.

"But why will you not be my wife?" said the young man, in impassioned tones.

"Because I do not love you, Senor Moreno, and I am promised to another," she returned, bravely meeting the glance of his passionate eyes.

"You care more for some one else than you do for me," he said bitterly. "And who, may I ask, is that happy man?"

"Arthur Forbes, my father's overseer."

"What! that Yankee adventurer? And does the wealthy Mr. Roberts sanction the engagement of his daughter—his only child—to one of his hired servants?"

"We have not told him yet; but—"

"Ah! you have not told him! Well, when you do, I think he will order the Yankee off the ranch. Your father's overseer, indeed! Miss Lucia Roberts should mate with one of her own station."

"And so noble and chivalrous a gentleman as Senor Thomas Moreno appears to think himself should attend more to his own affairs, and meddle less with things that do not concern him," hotly replied Lucia.

"But this does concern me, for I intend that you shall be my wife."

"Then your intentions will fail!"

* * * * * *

The impetuous senor, in his effort to secure the hand of the girl who had refused him, offended her father, and the two quarreled, the quarrel ending in a threat of revenge on the part of Senor Moreno. And this was not the only quarrel of Mr. Roberts, he had another with his daughter when she told him of her love for Arthur Forbes. He passionately told her she should never again see Forbes, who was then on a distant part of the ranch, and the next day they started for Rio Grande city, where Lucia was to be left with her aunt.

The following night the overseer, who had no intimation of his lady love's removal, was on his way to Mr. Roberts's house, where he discovered half a dozen horses tethered in a small grove near the dwelling. The night was cloudy and quite dark, yet he detected the forms of three or four men standing in the path before him. Advancing with caution, and holding his pistol so that he could readily use it, Arthur crept forward, carefully scanning every object, but with his attention centered upon the men. He had advanced but a few steps when he saw two of them lift from the ground what appeared to be the form of a human being wrapped in a dark blanket. Springing forward he levelled his pistol, commanding them to stop. The word had scarcely passed his lips when he received a blow from behind which rendered him senseless.

It was past midnight when Forbes regained consciousness. Making his way to Mr. Roberts's house, he roused the servants and told them what he had witnessed in the grove. Great was their excitement when it was found that neither Mr. Roberts nor his colored man servant, Jim, who had also accompanied Lucia to Rio Grande City that morning had returned.

"Mr. Roberts has been abducted by bandits, and if he is not rescued will be held for ransom," said Arthur. "I must go to the camp and rouse the men at once."

An hour later Arthur Forbes, accompanied by twenty stalwart cowboys, was riding across the prairie on the trail of the abductors.

* * * * * *

Dragged from his horse, beaten, bound hand and foot, blindfolded and tied on a horse, Mr. Roberts was driven all night and nearly all the next day across the prairie, without food or drink. At the end of that time he was taken from the horse and the bandage removed from his eyes. Two of his captors conducted him to a rude log cabin where they left him.

Exhausted by his terrible journey, Mr. Roberts was about to throw himself on the hard floor when the door was opened again and a man entered the hut.

"Senor Moreno!" the rancnman cried, hope reviving in his heart. "You have followed—you have come to save me!"

"Not so fast, Mr. Roberts," Moreno replied, a sinister look on his handsome face. "Why should I succor the man who so recently gave me a blow?"

"Then may I ask your business here?"

"I want your daughter."

"Villain!" he cried. "I would sooner see my daughter dead, and die a thousand deaths myself than give her to you, an outlaw—a bandit!"

* * * * * *

The sun was just disappearing below the western horizon as Arthur Forbes and his men entered the hilly, wooded country that borders the Rio Grande. A thick column of smoke rising from a pine thicket about three-quarters of a mile ahead of them, showed where the outlaw's camp was situated.

After midnight, when the outlaws had sunk into a profound slumber, he ordered the attack. The cowboys advanced stealthily, and were almost within the camp before they were discovered by the sentinel, who gave the alarm.

But it came too late. Arthur's men rushed forward with cheers, and were among the robbers before they were fairly awake. The latter hurriedly seized their weapons and made what resistance they could; but it was ineffectual. The struggle was sharp and brief. Many of the outlaws were killed, and the rest fled precipitately. Among the latter was Moreno.

Arthur, as soon as the battle was over, called a few of his men and went in search of Mr. Roberts. They soon found him, and he was at once released from his unpleasant quarters.

The cowboys determined to remain in the outlaws' camp during the remainder of the night, and start for home the next morning. One of them told Mr. Roberts what had taken place at his ranche the previous night. He listened until the story was finished, then rose and went to where Arthur was standing with his back against the trunk of a tree, gazing into the fire.

"Arthur," said he, grasping the young man's hand, "I have learned all that you have done for me. You have proved yourself a brave fellow and a friend that one can rely upon. Now what shall I give you as a reward?"

The full answer to this involved a fine wedding, at which Lucia Roberts was given by her father into the keeping of the young man who had rescued him. And a beautiful, happy bride she was.—Waverly Magazine.

is a virtuous vice. The world is better for it. It makes men ambitious—and it makes women careful of their personal appearance. It doesn't take much money to keep well-dressed now-a-days. The Six-Day Serials begin in The Press today. Keep your eye on Page 8.

The New York Evening Post compliments The Daily Press on its new departure and pleasantly gives credit to its publisher and editor.

Counselor Isaac L. Miller writes: "I beg to congratulate you on the appearance of The Press and the enterprise shown in the conducting of your paper."

The President today appointed James F. Connelly collector of internal revenue for the Fifth District of New Jersey. Senator Smith recommended the appointment.

The Elizabeth Journal, announcing that the Plainfield Daily Press has been enlarged to eight pages and made several other improvements, says "it is a progressive paper, even if it does continue to be Democratic."

Congressman John T. Dunn told The Press today that his prospects were good all through the district. Careful canvassing found every section except Plainfield giving him heartiest support. He will have something to say to Plainfield through The Press tomorrow.

That Senator Hill is still drawing to his support for the sake of Democracy the Cleveland men, is again proved by the reference of an Ogdensburg paper to the fact that at the big mass meeting in that city Saturday, U. S. Consul Demarest sat alongside the Senator on the Opera House stage.

WHAT DO YOU THINK!

Here's a Man Trying to Entice the Farmer Orator to Be a Republican.

(Editor McBride in The Elizabeth Journal.)

"He said he had gone to hear old man Horr speak, and he had felt just as mean ever since as though he had been caught stealing chickens.

Every time he had attended a Republican meeting he came away a better Democrat.

The above extracts are from Farmer Orator Martine's speech before the recent Democratic meeting, as reported in the Herald. It is a pleasure to quote Mr. Martine, for he is a gentleman and a scholar. When therefore, he says, that after hearing Hon. Roswell G. Horr he felt as mean as though he had been stealing chickens, he meant it. Not that the Farmer Orator had ever stolen chickens. He didn't mean that. He does not speak experimentally. What he meant was that the arraignment of his party by Mr. Horr was enough to make any Democrat feel ashamed that he belonged to such a party. And it is no wonder, moreover, that every time Mr. Martine attends a Republican meeting he comes away a better Democrat. This is progress. By and by he will get to be so good a Democrat that he will be too good for his party. He may not have the moral courage to say he is a Republican, but he will be almost good enough to be Republican. Mr. Martine is already a much chastened Democrat. He is too good for his party, and his party knows it. That is the reason his party has defeated him every time he has aspired to office. Twice it has defeated him for Senator, and once for Assemblyman. And in several of the conventions in which his name was 'flung to the breeze', so to speak, his party has "torn the tattered ensign down". Yes, it is true, Farmer Martine is becoming a better Democrat every time he attends a Republican meeting, and a more chastened Democrat every time he runs for office. If he only knew how to take his betterment and his chastening he would do what thousands of other Democrats are doing: he would become a Republican.

Use it in Time.

Catarrh starts in the nasal passages, affecting eyes, ears and throat and is in fact, the great enemy of the mucous membrane. Neglected colds in the head almost invariably precede catarrh, causing an excessive flow of mucous, and if the mucous discharge becomes interrupted the disagreeable results of catarrh will follow, such as bad breath, severe pain across forehead and about the eyes, a roaring and buzzing sound in the ears and oftentimes a very offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles.

The Candidates to Speak.

A Democratic mass-meeting will be held this evening in the Lyceum Theatre, Elizabeth. Among the speakers will be: Charles E. Hooker, Congressman John T. Dunn, William M. Oliver, candidate for county clerk, and Clauss, Cook and Green, candidates for the Assembly.

—A large number of Republican voters met their candidates at their headquarters last evening. All shook hands informally, and brief speeches were made. Congressional nominee Fowler urged votes for himself and the County ticket.

—The German-American Insurance Company, through J. C. Pope & Co., has settled with Kalman Rothberg of Somerset street for $659.95, the loss on stock, fixtures and furniture. Mr. Rothberg was represented in the adjusting of the claim by Justice Newcorn.

ORDER OF THE GARTER.

Its Alleged Ballroom Origin a Piece of Legendary Romance.

The origin of the order of the Golden Fleece is, like that of our own garter, shrouded in mystery, says the London Telegraph. Very few modern archaeologists attach any credence to the vulgar tradition, wholly unsupported by any authority, that, at a court ball given by Edward III. a lady, supposed to be the countess of Salisbury, dropped her garter, and the king, taking it up, and observing some of his courtiers to smile, as though they thought he had not obtained this favor merely by accident, exclaimed in a loud voice: "Honi soit qui mal y pense."

There is another opinion which traces the origin of this order, which, according to the learned Selden, "exceeds in majesty, honor and fame all the chivalrous orders of the world," to Richard Coeur de Lion having, upon the occasion of some warlike expedition during his wars in Palestine, chosen a leather-thonged garter as the distinctive mark of his partisans. Yet another theory ascribes the foundation of the order to the fact that Edward, at the battle of Crecy, issued his garter as a signal for battle, which, proving successful, determined him to institute the order in memory of the event.

Both these opinions are to a certain extent feasible, and the first is materially fortified by the well-known historic fact that, when the Crusaders captured St. Jean d'Acre in a nocturnal assault, the knights of the Christian army were ordered to wear a strap of white leather bound round the leg under the left knee in order to distinguish them from the infidels.

Paris, Nov. 1.—Victorien Sardou's new Greek drama "Gismonda" was brought out with great success at the Renaissance theatre last evening. Sarah Bernhardt, who had the title part, enjoyed a great personal triumph. She was supported strongly by M. Guitry in the leading male part of Asmerio.

REMARKABLE CURES

Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.

I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR. PETER G. EYCK, OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:

For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

PETER G. EYCK,
Bissell, Hunterdon Co., N. J.

SAYS SHE WAS HYPNOTIZED.

Singular Story Told by a Brooklyn, N. Y., Girl.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 1.—In the city court yesterday the cases of Jasper Smith, of Brooklyn, and W. H. Keyes, of Jersey City, came up. They are charged with enticing from home Elizabeth Freleigh, a 16-year-old Brooklyn girl.

The case against Keyes was nolled as his presence was found to be entirely accidental. The girl claims that Smith hypnotized her and that she took jewelry from her mother and performed other criminal acts while under his influence.

The case against Smith will be pushed to the extreme and will involve a more serious charge before he is sentenced.

A SINGULAR PHENOMENON.

Queer Sounds Issuing from Underground on the Shores of the Red Sea.

A singular phenomenon occurs on the borders of the Red sea at a place called Nakous, where the intermittent underground sounds have been heard for an unknown number of centuries. It is situated at about half a mile's distance from the shore, whence a long reach of sand ascends rapidly to a height of almost three hundred feet. This reach is eighty feet wide and resembles an amphitheater, being railed in by low rocks. The sounds coming up from the ground at this place occur at intervals of about an hour. They at first resemble a low murmur, but before long there is heard a loud knocking, somewhat like the strokes of a bell, and which, at the end of five minutes, become so strong as to agitate the sand. The explanation of this curious phenomenon given by the Arabs is that there is a convent under the ground, and these are the sounds of the bell which the monks ring for prayers. So they call it Nakous, which means a bell. The Arabs affirm that the noise so frightens their camels when they hear it as to render them furious. Scientists attribute the sounds to suppressed volcanic action—probably to the bubbling of gas or vapors underground.

WANT TO BE FIRST.

That Is the Way With the Average Individual in a Crowd.

Some twenty thousand people assembled to fight for the doubtful honor of being the first to cross the new Tower bridge on the morning on which it was opened to the public. I wonder, says a London Sketch writer, who was the enthusiastic citizen who came in first, and whether any photographer was present to give his personality to posterity.

I remember what a rush there was when Holborn viaduct was thrown open, and I have in my possession a photo of the first omnibus that was driven over it. The coachman was one Thomas Grayson, who was presented by his passengers with a gold-mounted whip in honor of the event, the date of which was November 8, 1869, and the bus was a City Atlas, the noble animals which drew it on this auspicious occasion being a white and a bay. Mr. Grayson, I remember, made a good thing by selling the photographs of himself and his vehicle. He was a cheery, jolly-looking driver, and, for aught I know, may still exercise his honorable calling, but it is many a year since I sat beside him and enjoyed his cheerful conversation.

AN AMERICAN QUEEN

AND HER FOUR DAUGHTERS.

A Scene on the 3 O'clock Express Between Boston and Worcester, Mass.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

It was a pretty sight.

The passengers turned around in their seats to better note the something unusual.

A noble looking woman had entered the car, followed by four daughters, ageing from fifteen to twenty years. The mother had one of those good and wholesome faces that one so rarely sees, but that men and women always admire. The daughters had the same healthy, wholesome look. They were well born, well cared for, and, without doubt, never suffered from any of the ills that curse many women.

Mothers owe a duty to their daughters that in too many cases is neglected.

Nature has provided a time for purification, and if the channels are obstructed, the entire system is poisoned and misery comes.

Mrs. Chas. Hines of Duncannon, Pa., a woman of large experience, in speaking of a mother's duty, says: "Watch carefully your daughters' physical development.

"Mothers should see that nature is assisted, if necessary, to perform its office, and keep their daughters well informed as to matters concerning themselves."

Irregularities, from whatever cause, are sure indications of organic trouble. With irregularities come disturbance of the stomach and kidneys.

Violent headaches often attack the victim, pains shoot everywhere. Extreme irritability follows quickly, and then utter despondency overwhelms the already overburdened life. Unless the obstruction is removed at once, your daughter's whole future will be darkened.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will accomplish the work speedily It is the most effective remedy for irregular or suspended action known.

DRAYTON DIVORCE SUIT

The Defendant Will Fight Her Husband to the End.

Denies All His Allegations of Unfaithfulness—Says She Never Had Criminal Intimacy With Hallet Alsop Burrowe, or Other Men. Charges Mr. Drayton with Cruelty.

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 1.—Almost at the last moment, when she could do so under the agreement of her counsel Mrs. J. Coleman Drayton yesterday afternoon filed her answer to her husband's suit for divorce.

The statutory limit for the filing of the answer had long since expired, but was extended through an agreement between Alva A. Clark, of Somerville, who appears for J. Coleman Drayton, and Richard V. Lindabury, of Elizabeth, who acts as Mrs. Drayton's counsel in this state.

The limit would have expired on Nov. 1, and when there was no sign of her answer forthcoming yesterday morning it was concluded by those who have been watching for it that it would never appear, and that the husband would obtain his divorce without trouble.

In the afternoon Mr. Lindabury filed the answer. The case will now be fought to the end unless some agreement be reached by the interested parties.

Mrs. Drayton's answer is brief. Mrs. Drayton denies that she left her husband while they were temporarily sojourning in London in January, 1892, but avers that he left her, being moved thereto, as she believes, by cruel and unjust suspicions as to her martial fidelity.

Mrs. Drayton makes denial specifically of all her husband's charges, saying that she was never guilty of adultery with Hallet Alsop Borrowe or with any other person or persons whatsoever, either in New York, London, Bernardsville or any other place. She says the charges are "A most unfounded and cruel imputation."

On the contrary, she avers the truth to be that she has always since her marriage with her husband faithfully regarded her marriage vows, and has been true and faithful to his bed and her obligations as his wife.

The next step in the case is the filing of the plaintiff's replication, which must be done within thirty days. After that the testimony will be taken by either one of the vice-chancellors, or a master appointed by the chancellor.

The final decree by this court is appealable to the court of errors and appeals and if the parties to the suit choose they can keep the case in the courts for several years.

SHIPWRECK AND ADVENTURE.

The Involuntary Voyage of H. W. Smith Almost Around the World.

New York, Nov. 1.—H. W. Smith, of Oakland, Cal., has just landed in New York after having an involuntary voyage almost around the world. He sailed last January from Victoria, B. C., in the sailing schooner Lewis Olsen. Early in March they came into the Japanese seas and began their hunting. One day in a heavy fog, Smith, with two other men, having gone out in one of five small boats which were lowered, lost their bearings, and a heavy storm coming up, were unable to return to the schooner. The small boat was cast upon Bonin island and only Smith was saved. The natives, at first hostile, finally introduced him to the governor, who procured passage for him to Nagasaki, Japan. Thence, with various vicissitudes, he made his way to Shanghai, Aden, Port Said, Boston and Fall River to New York, where he is looking for work to pay for his further journey home.

ONLY TO SHAKE HANDS.

An Old Man Walks from Alabama To Greet the President.

Washington, Nov. 1.—The white house had an interesting visitor yesterday. He was an old man from Alabama and had walked all the way to Washington from his home in that state to see the president. He told the ushers at the white house that he had walked from Georgia to this city during the administration of President Hayes and had shaken hands with him. There was nothing of the crank about the old man, and he was told to come to-day when an effort would be made to let him see Mr. Cleveland. "If I can do that," he said, on leaving, "the folks down home will think I'm the biggest man in Alabama."

The old man added that he had no favors to ask from the president, but merely wished to pay his respects.

Killed by a Casting.

Elizabeth, N. J., Nov. 1.—John Maitland, a moulder, 35 years old, married, and residing at 9 Passaic avenue, Newark, was instantly killed in the Worthington Pump works at Elizabethport. A heavy plate casting was being hoisted onto a car by a derrick when the hook of the hoisting chain broke, letting the casting fall on Maitland's head, crushing his skull into a pulp.

One of Jefferson Davis' Captors.

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 1.—Charles T. Cowden, who, disguised as a woman, made one of the cavalry party which captured Jefferson Davis, died of heart disease here yesterday, aged 52. He was once a member of the council of this city and owned considerable property. He was one of the Nevada pioneers.

Death Rate in New York State.

Albany, Nov. 1.—The bulletin of the state board of health for September says there were 9,523 deaths reported, an average daily mortality of 317, as against 311 in September, 1893. There were eight deaths from smallpox in New York city and one at Port Jervis. One case is reported from Evans, Erie county.

Will Bet $50,000 on Hill

Washington, Nov. 1.—Mike Dwyer, who is here attending the races at St. Asaph announces that he will bet $50,000 at the odds of 2 to 5 that Hill will be the next governor of New York.

AN AUTOPSY UPON A GORILLA.

Gumbo Was Forty Years Old, and Died of Consumption.

Boston, Nov. 1.—An autopsy was held upon the body of Gumbo, the gorilla, who died Tuesday. Prof. Franklin Dexter, of the Harvard Medical school, and Prof. Councilman, formerly of Johns Hopkins university, of Baltimore, now professor of pathology at Harvard, conducted the examination.

Consumption was found to have been the cause of death. The doctors decided that Gumbo was about forty years old, and that he had had the germs of tubercular consumption of the slow variety, which is a disease the Simiadae are peculiarly subject to in this climate.

One discovery was that of a sort of pouch or bag in the chest, in front of the lungs and connected by means of an independent valve with the trachem, or windpipe. This is undoubtedly the organ employed by gorillas in making their peculiar roar.

The brain weighed seventeen ounces. In its structure it bears a striking resemblance to the human brain, being somewhat broader at the base and narrower at the top, and, of course, exhibiting a far less number of convolutions. The brain will later be subjected to a variety of delicate tests and a minute microscopic scrutiny.

The doctors found a lot of minor points to interest them and it will be a fortnight before they get through. Prof. Dexter and his assistants intend to make an exhaustive comparison between the gorilla and a human being, and will then publish the results. In life Gumbo measured five feet six inches in height, and in health weighed 168 pounds. His arms were each four feet in length and his muscles of the texture of wire rope.

SWINDLED HIS FRIENDS.

Prof. Raymond, of Boston, Trusted with Much Money by His Dupes.

Boston, Nov. 1.—Prof. G. Albro Raymond, proprietor of the College Lafayette, school of languages, No. 307 Columbus avenue, has left town and there are a number of persons looking for him. Just how much money he owes to his French friends in Boston it is hard to determine, but the amount it is said was well up into the thousands. Chef Biahli, of Obers' restaurant, who used to board with Raymond, is perhaps the heaviest loser, for it is said that during the seven years of his acquaintance with Raymond he has given him over $4,000 to invest for him. He trusted Raymond so implicitly that he never asked for a receipt and does not know where his money went. It is said that one of his notes for $350 with three indorsements that are claimed to be forgeries, was brought to light. The affair has created the greatest kind of a sensation among the French population in Boston. Prof. Raymond was a well-known figure in the French restaurants and clubs. He is a big man of good appearance and dressed well. The professor went to New York about three weeks ago to see some of his relatives and while there, one of his creditors, a cigar manufacturer ran across him and put him in jail, he was there for a couple of days when some of his friends got him out. Raymond came back to Boston after that but left town again a week ago.

ROBBED THE GOVERNMENT.

Violators of the Lottery Law and Thieves Arrested.

Washington, Nov. 1.—Chief Postoffice Inspector Wheeler has been informed from St. Louis that Wm. H. Stevenson and J. Brooks Johnson of the Guarantee Investment company were arrested there for violating the United States lottery law. These gentlemen are prominent lawyers and had deposited $100,000 in bonds as security, believing the business to be legitimate.

Col. Wheeler has also received a telegram from St. Louis informing him of the arrest of Barnhart Thomas and Wm. Wilson for a postoffice robbery. They were held for the grand jury; John Strader was arrested as an accomplice.

Also another telegram from St. Louis of the arrest of Joe and Charles E. Biddingfield, late postmaster and assistant at Roberts, Ark., for the misuse of postage stamps and sending in falsified business reports.

In a Net of Live Wires.

Elizabeth, N. J., Nov. 1.—Jacob Locksinger, a lineman in the employ of the Suburban Electric Light company, got tangled up in the wires on top of a pole near Elizabethport station yesterday. The man apparently got an electric shock which hurled him from his perch on the pole, and he fell among the network of wires attached to it, where he hung for five minutes howling with pain before he was extricated by a man who climbed the pole and cut the wires. The lineman was severely burned about the hands, but to the astonishment of the spectators, was able to walk away when he reached the ground, which he did without saying a word.

Fifteen Insane Persons Drowned.

Stockholm, Nov. 1.—An insane asylum at Joonkospring, a town of Sweden eighty miles from Bothenburg, was discovered to be on fire yesterday and before they could be got out of the burning building fifteen of the inmates were either suffocated or burned to death.

112 Uersons Perish at Sea.

Collieries Resume Work.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Nov. 1.—All the collieries in the Wyoming region will resume work on full time. The large operators in theis city and valley are of the opinion that this go-as-you-please plan will be of short duration, as the market will be glutted very soon.

OUR THANKSGIVING DAY

A Proclamation Issued by President Cleveland.

Thursday, the Twenty-ninth of November, Appointed and Set Apart as the Day To Be Observed with Thanksgiving and Prayer by All the People of the Land.

Washington, Oct. 31.—By the President of the United States of America.

A PROCLAMATION.

The American people should gratefully render thanksgiving and praise to the Supreme Ruler of the Universe who has watched over them with kindness and fostering care during the year that has passed; they should also with humility and faith supplicate the Father of All Mercies, for continued blessings according to their needs, and they should by deeds of charity, seek the favor of the Giver of every good and perfect gift.

Therefore, I, Grover Cleveland, president of the United States, do hereby appoint and set apart Thursday, the twenty-ninth day of November instant as a day of thanksgiving and prayer to be kept and observed by all the people of the land.

On that day let our ordinary work and business be suspended and let us meet in our accustomed places of worship and give thanks to Almighty God for our preservation as a nation, for our immunity from disease and pestilence, for the harvests that have rewarded our husbandry, for a renewal of national prosperity and for every advance in virtue and intelligence that has marked our growth as a people.

And with our thanksgiving let us pray that these blessings may be multiplied unto us, that our national conscience may be quickened to a better recognition of the power and goodness of God, and that in our national life we may clearer see and closer follow the path of righteousness

And in our places of worship and praise, as well as in the happy reunions of kindred an friends, on that day, let us invoke Divine approval by generously remembering the poor and needy. Surely He who has given us comfort and plenty will look upon our relief of the destitute and our ministrations of charity, as the work of hearts truly grateful and as proofs of the sincerity of our thanksgiving.

Witness my hand and the seal of the United States which I have caused to be hereto affixed.

Done at the city of Washington on the first day of November in the year of Our Lord, eighteen hundred and ninety-four, and of the independence of the United States the one hundredth and nineteenth.

W. Q. Gresham, Secretary of State.

TO MAKE FLOUR SCARCE.

Northwestern Millers Want To Cut Down the Total Output.

St. Louis, Nov. 1.—A report has been in circulation among local millers that northwestern millers had arranged a plan whereby the total daily output of the combined flour mills of the country shall be curtailed. By this means it is hoped to materially improve the general market. Many big millers in St. Louis have received a circular, signed by the northwestern millers, asking their views as to the advisability of shutting down all mills from Dec. 10 to Jan. 1, inclusive, which, it is said, will reduce the output about 2,500,000 barrels.

So far as could be learned local millers are not favorably disposed towards the scheme, which, in their opinion, has only been arranged to help the millers of the northwest, and would be of little benefit to millers in this section.

Big Deal in Land.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Nov. 1.—Two thousand acres of land in the vicinity of the big packing house started here four years ago have been transferred from the Sioux Falls Packing company to the Northwestern Packing company. Senator Pettigrew who had been prominently connected with the enterprise, sold out. The new promoters are J. H. Lord, of Boston, and A. J. Pettingill, of this city, who are handling the matter for a eastern syndicate. Options and liens to the amount of $150,000 have been purchased which indicates that the buildings will go up. The deal involves $285,000.

Lacked Necessary Evidence.

Washington, Nov. 1.—The treasury department has been relieved from deciding whether Chinese seamen could land temporarily in this country by the departure from Baltimore of the Ping Suey, the vessel manned by Chinese sailors. Attorney General Olney, who had been asked for an opinion on the subject, had deferred the matter for lack of the necessary information and will not now consider the case, unless the Ping Suey puts into some other American port and the same question arises.

Killed By a Burglar.

Butler, Pa., Nov. 1.—Last night two masked burglars entered the residence of John Kouse, of Forward township, and demanded his money. He replied that he had none and grabbed a poker to defend himself, when one of the burglars shot him through the heart, killing him before his wife and daughter. Kouse was 60 years old. The burglars have not been arrested.

The Falcon Given Up as Lost.

St. Johns, N. F., Nov. 1.—The Peary steamer Falcon, from Philadelphia for this port, which has been out four weeks, was officially given up for lost. The steamer Swallow, from Labrador, reports that she encountered very heavy gales along the coast. She also reports that nearly all the fishing craft have left.

New Jersey's Finances.

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 1.—Yesterday marked the closing of the fiscal year in the treasury department of New Jersey. The balance on hand as reported by Comptroller Hancock is $986,855.91, which is the largest balance held at the close of any fiscal year in the history of the state. The increase over last year's balance is $262,817.79.

KEEP THEM OUT—all those germs, the seeds of disease, that are trying day and night to get a foothold in your system. You can't do it, unless your liver is active. That is all you have to depend upon, to keep them out of your blood.

The very best medicine for the liver and the blood, is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Take that when you're getting thin, when you have pimples or eruptions, when you've no appetite and feel "run-down" (these are warning signals)—and you'll save yourself from serious illness.

WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION: Gentlemen—My wife, of whom I wrote you, is another woman as far as her health is concerned; since taking your "Golden Medical Discovery" and "Pellets," she says she feels better than she has for years. She has gained twenty-five pounds in three months.

A LITTLE TOO GENEROUS

Chairman Babcock Laughs at Faulkner's Claims.

Says It Is Ridiculous for the Democratic Congressional Committee Chairman To Predict That the Republicans Will Lose Wisconsin or Illinois in the Coming Election.

Washington, Nov. 1.—Chairman Babcock of the republican congressional committee was at his desk this morning after a ten days' campaigning tour in his own district in Wisconsin. Mr. Babcock laughed heartily over what he termed the generous claims made by Chairman Faulkner of the democratic committee concerning Wisconsin, Indiana and Illinois.

"Why," said Mr. Babcock, "I may as well claim Arkansas for the republicans as for Mr. Faulkner to claim Wisconsin. It is an old saying that you have to go away from home to learn the news, and this is news to me. It is the first time I have heard any democrat with courage enough to claim that state. The republicans will have an overwhelming victory in Wisconsin. The question the democrats are endeaving to decide for themselves is whether they shall be content to remain away from the polls or shall they emphasize their indignation by voting the republican ticket. The republican organization is perfect while the democrats are disgruntled and disheartened. The only campaign the democrats are making is in the nature of an attack on our candidate for governor.

"The claims of Mr. Faulkner for Indiana are simply ridiculous, and there are no reasonable grounds upon which to base them. We will certainly carry the majority of the districts in that state. The least claim I heard made for Illinois among the republicans was that we would carry the congressional delegation with fourteen out of the twenty-two. The populist vote in the large manufacturing centres is, of course, an unknown quantity, but we have the satisfaction of knowing that where it takes away one republican vote it takes at least two or three from the democrats. From the best information obtainable in Chicago, I learn that the republicans hope to carry that city by at least 10,000. We do not agree with our friends, the enemy, that they have captured the seat in the senate now occupied by Senator Cullom. There will be a surprise in Illinois for the people this year."

GEORGIA'S SENATORIAL FIGHT.

Candidates Address the Legislature Nightly.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 1.—The nomination of United States senator by party caucus will be a new feature in Georgia politics. The presence of fifty populists in the legislature makes this necessary. The seat vacant is that of the late Senator Colquitt filled temporarily by Hon. Patrick Walsh. The candidates before the legislature are Hon. A. O. Bacon, Hon. H. G. Turner, Hon. L. F. Garrard and Hon. Patrick Walsh. Deadlock is almost certain to ensue in caucus, in which event Speaker Crisp is likely to stampede it. Four announced candidates have been addressing the legislature nightly since Friday night, when Walsh spoke; Monday night it was Bacon, Tuesday night it was Garrard and last night it was Turner. All have had large audiences. Walsh, Bacon and Garrard have all declared themselves advocates of the free and unlimited coinage of silver at 16 to 1.

Mr. Turner declared his adhesion to President Cleveland's entire programme. There is some talk of bringing Governor Atkinson into the the race in case of a deadlock.

Fisticuffs in the Court Room.

Baltimore, Nov. 1.—Opposing counsel in a will case had a fistic encounter yesterday in the court of common pleas. Edward I. Clark said that some of the evidence was at variance. Jos. W. Bristor took exception to the remark, and became excited. The lie was passed and the two men came together. Bristor made a pass at Clark who retaliated with a smash in the face. Friends interposed before more damage was done and the case was continued, friends of the beligerents sitting between them throughout the balance of the session. Judge Phelps will probably take a hand in the matter when the case is concluded.

Miners Find a "Gold Cure."

Ishpeming, Mich., Nov. 1.—A report comes from the Ropes gold mine here that at the bottom level a spring has been struck which supplies a strong stream of highly-colored water, being nearly as yellow as gold and plainly holding considerable of that precious material in its solution. It is very palatable and ice cold. Several of the men working in that level have been in the habit of freely drinking this water and it was noticed that as they drank the desire for alcoholic stimulants died within them.

Princeton-Pennsylvania Football.

Philadelphia, Nov. 1.—It was finally decided that the Princeton-Pennsylvania game on Nov. 10 shall be played on the Fair grounds at Trenton. The Pennsylvania Railroad company is putting the grounds in condition for the game and although the wet weather has retarded the work, it is hoped that the new sod laid will have taken hold of the earth by Saturday week and the ground will be in a fit state to play on.

New Board of Law Examiners.

Albany, Nov. 1.—The court of appeals appointed the following to constitute the new state board of law examiners: Austin Fox, New York, for one year; William P. Goodelle, Syracuse, two years; Franklin M. Danaher, for three years. Their salaries are $2,000 a year each.

BLESS PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND.

Mr. and Mrs. Ruff Were Restored By It to Perfect Health!

"There is no doubt that the life of most women at the present day is a complex one," say the Ladies' Home Journal, "and in the large cities the demands made upon time and strength are legion. No wonder so many fall by the way."

Even women of the privileged classes know what fatigue means, and the weariness resulting from overtaxed nerves, that is more intense and more depressing than anything known to tired muscles.

When frequent headaches and neuralgia give warning that the nerve tissues are not being fully repaired after hard work or auxiety, further mischief will be avoided by feeding the brain and nerves with the wonderful nutriment, Paine's celery compound.

Nature is a gentle mother and soothes while she strengthens.

Paine's celery compound builds up the body according to nature's plan.

The human machine must have fuel. This grand invigorator and strengthener is able to restore the delicate nerves to robust health by feeding them rapidly and abundantly with the peculiar elements they find it so difficult to extract for themselves from the ordinary hearty diet. A great nerve doctor, famous in two continents, says that any woman whose nervous strength is at all depleted must either take time to rest at any cost or replace the wornout tissues with Paine's celery compound.

A woman should never be too tired to smile.

Paine's celery compound is today busy it its mission to homes everywhere in the land, making sunshine, hopeful faces, and ready smiles where there was sadness and the weary looks of despair.

Mrs. Jennie A. Ruff, whose portrait is given above, writing from her home in Sebewa, Mich., says:

"My husband has had a stomach trouble for over a year, from which he suffered the tortures of a daily death. He could eat scarcely anything, and what he did eat soured on his stomach and caused him to bloat so terribly that life was only a burden. He tried physicians to no avail, and as I was taking Paine's celery compound, he thought he would try it. In a short time he was surpised to find that he could eat anything with no bad effects; the bloating is all gone and his stomach is in good condition

"I had suffered for years with periodical spells of sick headache; pen cannot describe what I suffered at such times. For the last two years I noticed that my nervous system was getting all out of order; I had no appetite and was getting to be a mere shadow of my former self. I was nervous, weak, could not rest nights, and felt gloomy and low spirited. Before I had taken one bottle of Paine's celery compound I began to feel like a new person, and now, after taking six bottles, I am enjoying perfect health. I have not had a spell of sick headache in over a year. My nerves are all right, my sleep is like that of a healthy child and I feel more like one than like a woman of thirty. I do all my own work and bless Paine's celery compound for what it has done for me and mine.

"We have used in our family 12 or 15 bottles of Paine's celery compound. Doctors' bills are now unknown in our family."

STEADILY GROWING WORSE.

The Czar's Heart Weaker—Hardly Able To Recognize Relatives.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 1.—This bulletin was issued from Livadia at midnight:

"The emperor took very little nourishment to-day. The inflammation of the left lung continues. The emperor's breathing is impeded, his pulse is weak and the general weakness is greatly increased."

Vienna, Nov. 1.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Neue Freie Presse says in a dispatch published in the evening edition:

Dr. Zacharin and Prof. Leyden have had violent quarrels, each accusing the other of giving the czar improper treatment. When Prof. Leyden's opinions were accepted Zacharin declared that he would return at once to Moscow. Gen. Ticherevin forbade his leaving Livadia, threatening to detain him by force if necessary. Prof. Wywodzeff, a specialist in embalming, has been summoned to Livadia."

The quarrel between the czar's doctors is reported to be due to Zacharin's brutal frankness in telling the czar of his condition. Leyden reproached Zacharin with discouraging the patient. Zacharin replied angrily with a fling as to foreign interference, and an open rupture was the result.

Later dispatches from St. Petersburg say that the czar has grown worse steadily, that his heart is weaker than at any previous time, and that he is hardly able to recognize his relatives.

The officers of the czar's Austrian regiment have been ordered to be ready to act as a deputation at the czar's funeral.

The following account of the czar's illness is published in the Official Messenger:

"The disquieting symptoms which which manifested themselves at Spala became less marked in the early days of his majesty's sojourn at Livadia. The emperor was able to attend divine service after arriving there and was also able to drive out. Then symptoms of weakness appeared, with failing appetite, loss of sleep, weakening of the heart's action, increase of albumen and swelling of the extremities.

"On Oct. 19, there was a return of the emperor's appetite, and on Oct. 20 he was able to obtain the necessary rest and sleep, which produced a notable increase in his strength and a reduction of the albumen. The same day the queen of Greece arrived, and the Protopresbyter, Father Ivan of Cronstadt, who offered up prayers for the emperor, also reached Livadia. He then received holy communion, which succeeded in tranquilizing his mind. On Oct. 22 the emperor prayed with Father Ivan.

"Princess Alix of Hesse-Darmstadt arrived that evening and by order of the emperor she was received ceremoniously with a guard of honor and with the military band playing. The meeting of the emperor with Princess Alix, whom he had long been craving to see, strongly excited the patient, in spite of the joy which the meeting caused him, and his physicians feared the effect of this excitement. But the night passed favorably. There was continuous oedema of the feet on Oct 26, which hindered free movement."

"During all this time the emperor, in spite of his suffering, did not neglect state business, but at the urgent instance of his physicians he handed over documents relating to current affairs and reports requiring considerable examination to the czarewitch. His majesty, however, decided the most important cases and signed the state papers."

As each bulletin is posted thousands of persons fall upon their knees and pray for his majesty's recovery. The theatres throughout Russia were almost deserted last night, and in the small audiences not a single military or naval uniform was to be seen.

It is announced upon semi-official authority that all the reports that the marriage of the czarewitch and Princess Alix will take place immediately are without foundation.

Miners Buried Alive.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Nov. 1.—A number of miners were engaged in reopening an abandoned slope at the Espy Run mines near Hanover, a few miles from this city, for the purpose of making it an air way to a new colliery adjoining, known as the Bliss colliery. While the men were removing the debris that had accumulated there for some years, the roof began to cave-in and before they could reach a place of safety two of them, Walter Jones and William Buckland, were caught in the fall and buried beneath tons of rock and coal. Their dead bodies were recovered last night, horribly mangled.

Montclair Man Missing.

Montclair, N. J., Nov. 1.—William Jacobus, son of a prominent merchant of this place, has been missing since Monday night, when he attended the annual parade of the Montclair fire department, taking his father's horse and carriage with him. He had been an inmate of the Keely institute, and was discharged as cured some time ago, but, it is said, has been drinking rather freely of late. No trace of his whereabouts has been discovered.

WHAT WILL CHINA DO?

Japan's Attitude After the Fall of Pekin.

Japs Think That the People Would Be Better Off Under the Mikado's Rule Than Under That of Their Old Masters—Foreign Missionaries Defended by a Native Paper.

Washington, Nov. 1.—Late mail advices at the legation show that the Japanese are considering what terms they shall make with China after the fall of Pekin. It is sugested that the Japanese army occupy the captured districts; that the Chinese being the worst governed people in the world, will be the easiest to bring under a foreign yoke. "The Chinese under the mild and civilized rule of Japan would," it is said, "soon learn that they would fare better than under their old masters. That would assuredly be the case in respect of material prosperity, and an improvement in such an important matter would in itself satisfy them."

One of the native papers, Jogaku Zaschi, comes to the defense of the foreign missionaries in Japan, who have been criticized by some of the other journals. It is contended that the methods of propagandism employed by the missionaries are not in harmony with the manners and observances of Japan, so that the money spent by missions is practically thrown away. Jogaku Zaschi combats this argument and says that the work of the foreign missionaries has not proved inefficient, but has only failed to come up to the ideal mission work expected of them by the people. The six hundred and fifty foreign missionaries in Japan, expend in one way or another, two million yen annually, which is a frightful source of profit to the nation at large.

The Japan mail, referring to the fear expressed in the United States that the war between China and Japan may lead to a scarcity of the raw material of silk, says there need be no apprehension on this score as the supply will be fully equal to the demand, if the new and improved machinery that is being acquired and erected, be any guide to the probable output for the United States.

Boatswain Whelan, of the American ship Dirigo, which was lying at Kobe Oct. 1, was stabbed by a seaman named Peterson. Whelan was the aggressor, and Peterson acted in self-defense. Peterson was arrested and Whelan, it is thought, will recover.

One of the Japanese papers prints an account of Lieut. Matsumura's personal narration to the emperor of the recent naval engagement. The article closes by saying that the emperor was much pleased with the narrative which was delivered in the most artless and straightforward manner, as if telling the story to a friend, rather than addressing his sovereign. "The emperor," it says, "frequently broke out into broad smiles during the course of the story."

A private letter written by a prominent Japanese official at Tokio, received at the legation states that notwithstanding this is the season of typhoons in eastern waters, none have yet appeared; that the crops in the agricultural districts are abundant, and the people prosperous, and that the war feeling at fever heat. This sentiment he likens to the "burning of a house which continues forever."

JAPAN WILL BE VICTORIOUS.

An English Missionary Tells of the War in the East.

Chicago, Nov. 1.—"I have just been over the road from Moukden to Shan Kwan, and it is as perfect as ever. Not only that but the road affords every facility for the passage of troops in winter from Korea to the great wall near Pekin. The victory of Japan is a foregone conclusion," said the Rev. Maurice J. Walker.

Mr. Walker has been stationed in north China by the English government for the past nine years and passed through Chicago on his way to London to make his report. The Rev. John K. Robson, a missionary from Tienkin, accompanied him. They left Pekin about a month ago. Speaking of the war, Mr. Walker said:

"Japan was obliged to engage in foreign warfare to prevent a repetition of the revolution of 1871 in her own domain. For years she has been carefully preparing herself; not only that but she has carefully laid out her campaign in China. For over a year draughtsmen and photographers have traversed every part of the country until the topography of China is better known in Tokio than Pekin. The Japanese commanders know that the correspondents make a mistake when they say that winter will close the campaign. I have been over the road at Moukden at all seasons of the year. It is impassable only in fall and spring. In winter it is in perfect condition. If the Japanese can cross the mountains before cold weather and capture Moukden, which is the key to the whole situation, victory is theirs. The five hundred miles of good road from Moukden to the great wall at Shan Kwan can be covered in a month.

"The real fighting of the war will be along the line of one of the most beautiful shelving beaches in the world, that stretches for a hundred miles between Shan Kwen and Lan Ho. The Chinese are massing there, building forts and preparing to attack both by land and sea. The Japanese have advanced from Seoul to Ping Yang, and from Ping Yang to beyond the Yalu river in a marvelously short space of time. The next battle will be in China. As if by a prearranged programme while the army is moving up to Moukden, the navy is approaching the great objective point of both forces—Lan Ho. Already Port Arthur has fallen and once the Japanese capture Chee Foo harbor they control the situation. The contract for goatskins from America means that the Japanese will brave the cold of a winter campaign.

"Li Hung Chang realizes the dangers of a winter campaign and will now make his headquarters at Loo Tai, on the only line of railroad leading out of Pekin. There, between Lan Ho and the capital he will personally conduct a defensive campaign."

OLD MOSINEE TOM.

[Copyright, 1894, by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.]

In the late fifties the Wisconsin valley above Portage was a wilderness. The lumbermen who trailed their way up the river passed through tamarack swamps so thick a deer could scarcely penetrate them, and over dry ridges clothed with splendid pine without underbrush, clean as a park and of inestimable value.

Old Mosinee mountain rose out of the wide, green reach of the valley, dark with his robe of pines. All about was forest land untouched by the ax, almost untraversed by the pioneer's restless foot.

But year by year the loggers pushed northward, seeking points where the pine trees could be felled into the river, or where skidways could be constructed to make hauling unnecessary. The whole river had been ransacked and every favorable river point stripped of its timber before the movement back into the forest began. From short hauls and heavy timber the movement was toward long hauls and smaller timber. Each year the attack widened as well as lengthened its battle line against the pines.

Two young boys from La Crosse county in 1859 pushed up the river to "Ginny Bull falls," and being attracted by old Mosinee mountain planted their camp at its foot and set about preparations for winter. They were beyond any other camp so far as they knew, and when they blazed out a trail in September they had before them a great deal of stern labor.

They had hay to cut in the marshes, wood to clear out and shanties to build. They were sturdy young fellows, of that indomitable sort raised up in America to do such work in face of everything.

Holland was a bridegroom of only three months' duration, and his wife was expected to be the cook for the camp when the snows came and work of logging actually begun. He was a tall, young fellow, with a broad, flat, but powerful, chest, very erect and active.

Miller, his companion, was a short man, inclined to be fat when food and sleep were plenty. He was forever grumbling, and yet was a great joker. He assumed great airs at times, and told how well he lived at home. This he did when it would embarrass the cook. He was, in fact, a comedian.

The work was hard, the fare monotonous, and his patience really gave out during a severe sickness which came upon him during October. He came to be about again, but he grumbled about Holland's cooking more and more.

"HANK, LOOK THERE!"

"I don't want to say anything against your cookin', Hank. It's good, what there is of it, but I'd like to have the boys turn up with Mrs. Holland and some grub."

"You don't want to see her any worse than I do, old man."

"Of course not."

"You ought to stand it if I can," Holland concluded.

Miller turned his slap-jack over twice before he cut it and began eating.

"Seems to me these things git leatherer 'n' leatherer every day. I may be mistaken."

He worked his jaws meditatively on the problem.

"All in y'r eye; they're right up to high-water mark. You're a little off y'r feed, I guess—Lampers down or something."

In secret Holland was a little bit worried about his partner. He changed the subject. "I heard a rifle to-day, Jack! Off to the north."

"Doc. Adams, I guess."

"No; the Doc. wouldn't be up here so soon as that. It's some other party."

Miller took little interest in this, but worked away stubbornly on his slap-jacks. Suddenly his jaws stiffened and his eyes distended.

"Hank, look there!"

Holland turned to the window, and saw the huge furry head, alert ears and pointed muzzle of a bear, wistfully looking in.

"The rifle," he whispered.

Miller raised his hand to feel for the rifle on the wall behind him, but the bear vanished so silently and swiftly it was hard to think there had been a bear there at all.

As Miller leaped for the rifle Holland flung the door open, and a broad path of light streamed out toward the forest, and in the midst of it was a huge rounded shadow, shambling swiftly away.

"Quick! There he goes, fire!"

Miller pulled up and fired at the vanishing shadow. And, like the echo of the shot, came another report from the edge of the clearing and a cry from a man beyond the circle of light.

"'Y gorry, we've got 'im. Bring a lantern."

Miller dashed in for the lantern while Holland waited for the voice to embody itself.

"I wish I had ol' Zip here, we'd have that feller shore's aigs," continued the voice, now getting near the house.

As the light from the shanty shone on him the stranger appeared a middle-aged man, very tall, with a ragged beard. He had a long and well-kept rifle in his hands.

"Did you fire, too?" asked Holland.

"I didn't dast t' fire when he was lookin' in the winder an' when he got down I couldn't see 'im till you opened the door. But we got 'im."

Miller appeared with the lantern and they all went out to the spot where the bear was last seen, but he was gone. There was blood on the ground, but not enough to trail him by.

"He's hit, but he's safe enough. If I had Zip, we'd tree him in fifteen minutes, but we might just as well give him up—without a dog," said the old man after a pause.

"All right," said Holland. "We was just eating supper. Come in an' take a snack."

"Don't care if I do," laughed the hunter.

"I didn't know y' was here till t'day," he said as he sat down at the table. "Jest made a camp m'self up here a couple o' miles and saw y'r smoke t'day; thought I'd come down and make y' a neighborly call!" He laughed again till his mouth gaped wide and his little twinkling eyes disappeared.

"Glad you did. Jack, slap in a couple o' dabs' o' that pancake mortar—this fellow seems to appreciate my cookin'."

"By the way," put in Miller, as he set a couple of huge cakes sizzling, "what's your name when you're at home? Mine is Miller."

"Mine's Tom Welsh, otherwise Mosinee Tom."

"I've heard of you," said Holland.

"As I was sayin', thinks I'll jest drop in on 'em. So I built a fire an' I says to Zip: 'Now Zip, ol' boy, you better hug that fire purty close 'r the wolves 'll pinch y'!—an' come down."

"Glad y' did," said Miller. "I'm feeling kind o' lonesome these days."

"Lonesome!" the old fellow laughed. "Why, young man I tramp from here to Lake Superior an' never see a human bein' from one month's end to another, and I don't know what lonesome means. O, of course, when it's handy I like to drop in this way an' have a little confab—but that ain't gittin' lonesome."

"O, it ain't, eh?" said Miller, ironically. "Well that's the way I feel when I get lonesome. How's that fr a mouthful?" he said, as he slid a huge cake into the stranger's plate.

"'Bout my size," cackled the old fellow, and he cut it into quarters and rolled it up like a quilt. In fact he kept Miller turning cakes till he cried out: "Look here, you must be holler clean to your boot heels."

Supper being over, they drew round the fire and lighted their pipes, and the old hunter told stories of the woods.

He knew the woods as the Indians do. He could map the whole land in the ashes of the hearth and he generalized shrewdly about the wild life.

"A good many yarns about bears an' wolves an' painters and links (panthers and lynxes) is all bosh. Bears an' links are mostly j-st as glad t' git out o' your way as you are to git out their way. They don't turn on a man unless their young uns are with 'em, or you corner 'em, or when they're mighty hungry. Most any critter 'll fight in a trap, but in a free space it's nacherl f'r em t' run off the minute they see a man. Same way with painters in daylight, or night either. They jest puck-a-chee when they see yeh."

"Ever had a tussle with 'em?"

"O yes, but I've never had 'em turn on me except when I began the fuss. Then they'll fight f'r dear life jest like a man will."

"How about wolves?" asked Miller, with a significant look at Holland, who had wolf stories to spare.

The old man's face grew grim and he drew several whiffs from his pipe before he answered:

"Wolves are different; they're vicious, no two ways about that. They mean fight—"

"Especially when a lot of 'em git together."

The old man went on:

"Wolves aint cowardly, as some folks say. They've got sense and judgment. They know how to size up the other fellow so'st not t' tackle a crowd they can't whip. They're all-fired smart, wolves is. They don't walk into any traps, but they'll eat a feller up quicker'n lightnin' when the chance is good. They don't walk into a trap and they don't bluster—they mean biz."

He sat with his pipe in his mouth, his hands over his knees and his eyes fixed on the fire. His voice began to take on a reminiscent tone.

The sound of the wind in the pines outside stirred through the silence with a somber note, and Holland stirred up the fire in the vast fireplace till it roared louder than the wind.

The hunter resumed after knocking the ashes out of his pipe and putting it away.

"I've been chawed by bears, and clawed by wildcats and catamounts; I've had a buck deer trampin' me into the ground; but I never had a wolf's tooth into me yet. When I do, I'm gone. They don't make no mistakes. When they take hold it's after takin' all the chances and calc'latin' t' win. Now, a bear 'll git blind crazy with a bullet, an' go in where he is sure to get used up; so 'll a painter 'r a wildcat; but your wolf, he knows better; he don't go into no such business; he jests limps off in the woods and swears vengeance."

Holland here related a story of a siege by wolves through which he had been. Long Tom listened with an occasional corroborative nod.

"That's jest it; they're sharks. Seems if they can smell a sick or wounded man ten miles. I used to live down in Portland when I was a boy, an' I know what a shark is. A shark is a wolf in the water. A wolf is a shark in the woods."

A curious look came on his face, and after a silence he said:

"If they ever set tooth in old Tom, he'll know his time has come to go."

"I should think you'd keep out of their way if you're afraid of them," said Holland, cautiously.

The old man straightened up. His face darkened with anger.

"Say, d' y' mean that?"

Holland saw his mistake.

"Set down. Set down! I didn't mean anything. Still you speak as if you kind o' dreaded them," he added.

"Wall, I do," the hunter confessed. "But I ain't afred of 'em. I know 'em. Know jest how to take 'em. I build a fire in front of my little shed, put a rifle handy and Zip at my feet and sleep sound's a baby in a cradle. If the fire gits low Zip growls and wakes me up and I throw on more wood.

"But some way I feel as if they'd git me yit. I'll make a mistake some day and then they'll pile on top of me an' that'll be the end of me. A pile of bones gnawed white. Jest such a pile as I've come across myself many a time in the woods." Spending his days alone in the somber shadows of the forest, he had grown superstitious like the sailors. Signs and omens filled up half his life. He traveled by signs and built his little open shed according to the moon and stars. The sound of the wind was in the sad droop of his voice.

"They killed my brother," he said, finally; "an' they'll git me."

He rose slowly. "Wal, I guess I'll pull out."

"O, don't be in a hurry."

"Ol Zip'll git uneasy."

"Better stay all night."

"O, no; couldn't think of it 'tall. Wolves would clean out my whole camp before daylight. Hark!" He lifted his hand. "They're on the rampage now. They always are before a storm." Afar off, blent with the rising snarl of the winds in the pines they could hear the clamor of wolves hurrying after some flying deer. The old man grasped his rifle.

"I'll get back to my dog."

"Hadn't one of us better go out with you?"

"No, I'm all right; I'm worryin' 'bout Zip."

Holland went with him to the clearing and said:

"Come and see us; our door is always open. Good-by. Good luck."

"Good luck," replied the old man, as he blended into the dense shadow of the forest.

Holland turned his face upward to the gray skies and felt fine flakes of snow beginning to sift down through the massive tops of the trees. Wolves were astir in the deeps of the wood, and a wildcat across the river was growling as he scrambled up or down the cliff.

He shuddered and looked back as he entered the warm-lighted shanty.

"I don't want his quarters to-night."

"By jingo, I should say not," said Miller.

Holland awoke in the midst of a dream of a man sinking in the snow, and crying help! For a few moments he could not tell where his dream left off and his waking began. All was dark in the room save the uneasy flicker of the dying firelight on the walls of the cabin. The wind was stronger without, steady and cold.

He sat up in bed to convince himself that he was in his cabin, and felt for Miller to reassure himself that he was not alone. He was about falling off asleep again when faint and far off, mingled with the sound of the storm outside, came the clamor of distant wolves and a long drawn cry:

"Help, he—e—l—p!"

He sprang to his feet and stood irresolute in the middle of the floor, not sure of his senses yet. He leaned to listen. It came louder. The clamor of yelping wolves drew nearer, and now unmistakably the wild cry of a man.

"Help! help! For God's sake open the door!"

Holland flung up the bar. The noise of beating feet was heard. He swung the door open, and with the speed of a desperate deer Long Tom shot across the clearing into the cabin, falling in a heap on the floor, while not a rod behind, their red tongues lapping, their eyes shining with greenish phosphorescent, terrifying glare, came a dozen wolves, tearing along in pursuit, and so savage and determined their hunger, if Holland had not swung the door in their faces, they would have plunged through the open door upon the exhausted hunter.

The old man rose from the floor insane with wrath.

"Give me your rifle," he snorted, when he could get his breath. "Let me get a chance at them."

He had stayed away too long. The fire had burned down, and the waiting wolves had sprung upon the faithful dog. They were gnawing his bones when the hunter arrived: At the sound of his rifle they scattered, but almost instantly turned upon him and he fled. He loaded and fired once more, and then backed away, holding them at bay with his clubbed rifle. In this way he backed all the way down the river bank, facing the snarling pack. As he neared the cabin he flung away his rifle and ran—only his marvelous speed saving him.

He wept like a child, and swore in his weeping as he thought of his faithful dog cowering there in the center of that circle of hungry eyes.

"To think I'd play him such a trick at last," he groaned, and swore, covering his face with his hands. "An' he trusting in me—sayin' to them hell-hounds: 'Old Tom'll be back soon an' you'll git out o' here!' An' all the time me settin' here smokin' an' havin' a good time—my God, it's awful! Its uncivilized to treat an old friend the way I treated that dog. Why, that dog has been with me more'n six years! He's been my only company, an' a better hunter—I can get along without that dog. My God, it's awful—awful—"

He would not go to sleep, but sat around over the fire until morning. He ate breakfast in the same gloomy silence, and then he rose.

"Wal—I'll be goin'."

"Better bring y'r things down and stay with us."

"No, I guess not. If I find my rifle I'll be all right—if I only—"

He was in a softer mood now and he couldn't speak of his dog.

Holland went with him to help him find his rifle. This he did without long search.

"Well, now, come in any time. Our latch string is always out. Come back to dinner, anyway."

"Thankee—I guess I'll have to go down to Ginny to git some ammynition."

"Well, good luck."

"Good luck," he answered; but his face was sorrowful to see.

They never saw him again. They heard of him in Ginny. He bought a new outfit and struck off into the forest alone.

A SOCIETY WEDDING.

Brilliant Ceremony in Crescent Avenue Church.

MISS MURRAY WEDS MR. SANDFORD.

Gorgeous Floral Decorations—A Fashionable Gathering—Dr. Richards Officiates at This and Another Similar Happy Event.

The Crescent Avenue Church was the scene of a largely attended society wedding last evening, the marriage of Miss Minnie B. Murray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Murray of Central avenue, to Joseph Webster Sandford, Jr., of West Seventh street.

The ceremony was performed at 7:30, Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards officiating for the second time that evening. The whole church, except the gallery, was crowded, many standing in the aisles at the sides The floral decorations at the church were perfectly magnificent and far exceeded anything of the kind ever before attempted in this city. The background was composed of arica lutescens and latania borbonica palms, pandanus dracenae, and other choice foliage plants. Among this background of green were fifty plants of the grand new chrysanthemum, Mrs. Alpheus Hardy. The pulpit also was decorated with these, making the whole effect very chaste and beautiful. These decorations were furnished and arranged by Miss Lincoln the florist, who displayed her usual good taste.

Miss Jessie Utter, the organist of the church, played the Lohengrin Bridal Chorus at 7:30 when the bridal party entered the church by the left aisle. The bride leaned on the arm of her father. Her gown was of heavy white corded silk with point Duchess lace and veil of tulle. Her maid of honor, Miss Augusta K. Murray, sister of the bride, was attired in Nile green and white striped silk. There were four bridemaids, Miss Pauline May Sandford and Miss Estelle Place, and two little girls Grace S. Brewster of New York and May Murray. Miss Place and Miss Sandford wore gowns of Nile green crepe while the girls wore white silk mulle with white satin ribbons and lace. All carried bouquets of white bridal roses and maiden-hair fern.

Albert A. Tilney was the best man. The ushers were Walter F. Murray, James E. Murray, Frederick K. Walz, Howard W. Beebe, George S. Beebe and Percy H. Stewart.

The groom entered from the left of the pulpit and joined the bride at the altar. Dr. Richar is used an impressive ceremony he had arranged for the occasion. Mr. Murray gave his daughter away with a dignified bow of consent. Then the organist commenced to play Mendlessohn's wedding march and to its strains the party passed down the right aisle and out of the church.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Murray, 804 Central avenue, a reception was given after the wedding. The house was beautifully adorned with pink and white chrysanthemums and roses. Nearly 300 guests from Plainfield and vicinity, New York and Brooklyn were present. Music was furnished by Austin of Brooklyn, and the caterer was Maresi of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Sandford left on the 10:10 train for the South in a special car furnished by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. After ten days they will return to Plainfield to live on West Seventh street.

CLAWSON-HOLMES.

Quiet Home Wedding of Two Well-Known Young People.

Dr. Frank T. Clawson of 437 West Sixth street, and Miss Augusta Holmes, daughter of the late Capt. A. D. Holmes of 238 East Fifth street, were married Thursday evening at the bride's home. Rev Dr. W. R. Richards of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church officiating.

Alfred E. Holmes and Dr. Marc L. Clawson, brothers of the bride and groom, were the only ushers and attendants of the couple, walking before them into the parlors to the music of the bridal chorus from Lohengrin, played by Miss Alice Coard.

A bell of cosmos was suspended from the ceiling and beneath this the couple stood. The rest of the decorations were largely smilax, foliage green and many kinds of cut flowers.

The bride's gown was heavy white corded silk, trimmed with duchess lace, and she wore a veil, and for an ornament the groom's gift, a diamond pendant.

A reception followed the ceremony. Russ of Elizabeth catered. The wedding gifts were displayed and were very handsome and of many kinds.

During the Summer Dr. Clawson has built a handsome house on West Seventh street and to this Dr. and Mrs. Clawson will return and then will begin housekeeping. They are now away on a long trip to the South.

Out in the Open Air.

The Saengerbund met last evening and arranged for an entertainment and ball Thanksgiving Eve. The play will be "Out in the Open Air," and the cast will include A. Wolff, P. Postler, Miss Freda Sutterlin, John Roetzer and Miss Ecke.

THE SOCIAL SEASON.

FINE LIST OF PATRONESSES FOR THE ASSEMBLIES.

Preparations Also for a Brilliant Fancy Dress Ball—A New Regime of Enthusiastic Women.

To those who concern themselves largely each fall about the festivities of the coming winter and the prospects of a gay season it will be welcome news that the list of patronesses of the assemblies has been made up and the dates of these charming dances, which are the mainstay of Plainfield's season, have been decided upon. The notices and invitations to subscribers will be out in a few days and people can begin planning other functions in relation to these important ones. Last year the assemblies were a success in spite of every obstacle that chance could place in the way. One after another the patronesses were thrown into mourning, leaving their places to be filled by invitation and as a natural result the dances suffered somewhat from so many changes. Mrs. Robert L. Burnett who with Mrs. Bloodgood originated the assemblies several years ago and to whom belongs the credit of having made the dances the indispensable feature of the season that they are is to be as heretofore, the most prominent of the patronesses; Netherwood will be ably represented by Mrs. Joseph W. Reinhart; from North Plainfield will be Mrs. William L. Saunders and Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, Jr., while Mrs. Louis G. Timpson and Mrs. Marion Ackerman make up this truly representative list. Never before have the different sets been so well represented as in this year's list, and the assemblies will undoubtedly be a greater success than ever, under the new regime of active and enthusiastic women.

The dates of the dances are all set before Lent, as Easter comes so late that it would be unwise to drag the list into April.

The dates are as follows:

December 17, January 1, January 22, and February 28.

John Moore will act as treasurer for this season.

In addition to these regular dances there is much talk of a fancy dress ball to be given between Christmas and New Year's. Nearly all the young married set is deeply interested in the scheme, which already has a long list of proposed patronesses. The development of the scheme will be watched with interest.

Tonight's Concert.

There has been a great deal of speculation as to what will be the financial outcome of the concert given for the benefit of the Camera Club at the Music Hall to night. The returns show that the advance sale has been very large, but when one glances at the names on the programme no experience is necessary to see that it has been arranged regardless of expense.

It is to the enterprise of Mr. Hulett of piano fame that all credit is due, not alone for his efforts to give Plainfield people a truly musical treat, but also for his public spirit in doing so without remuneration and at the same time setting the example for popular prices, by reducing the usual charges one-half. An unusually large audience is predicted, and they will doubtless show their appreciation by making the concert an enormous success.

Dunellen's Hallowe'en.

At the home of Charles Rickardson, Dunellen, Wednesday evening, there was given a Hallowe'en party. The house was artistically decorated with plants and flowers, and presented a beautiful appearance. A large number of guests was present from New York, Elizabeth, Somerville, Bound Brook and Dunellen. At midnight an elaborate supper was served, after which dancing was indulged in until nearly daybreak. Both young and old enjoyed themselves, and the closing will be one of pleasant recollections.

Effects of Hard Drinking.

Johanna Haley, homeless and dissipated, was sent to jail for 60 days by City Judge Coddington this morning. She was found intoxicated and helpless on East Front street last evening.

John W. Baird paid a $3 fine. When discharged by his employer, a woman who resides on East Front street, yesterday morning, he began to abuse her. Policeman Giese arrested him.

Patrick Cahill was drunk yesterday and paid a $10 fine in consequence when he sobered up this morning.

New Piano Warerooms.

Frederick Durand, late with F. M. Hulett, will have charge of the branch office of the Hallett & Davis Piano Company. The opening will take place tomorrow, and a privilege will be offered to inspect an elegant stock of high-grade pianos and organs, courteously exhibited by Mr. Durand personally.

Perennial Plainfield.

A cherry tree is in bloom on the farm of Mrs. John Wilson, Washingtonville, and a pear tree on the farm of W. H. Rogers.

A PANEL GAME.

PART OF A DOOR CHISELED AWAY BY A BURGLAR.

Early Morning Robbery at a Somerset Street Tailor Shop—Much Valuable Clothing Taken.

The tailor shop of George Bremmer on Somerset street, next to L. W. French's carriage factory, was robbed some time after 1 this morning. A quantity of valuable clothing was stolen.

The thieves entered by cutting out a thin yellow pine panel in the rear door. They crawled through this opening and were then in the single room which constitutes the shop. The lamp which had been left in the rear shed a dim light.

Two fine overcoats which a Dunellen man had left for repairs were taken, together with about nine pairs of trousers. The trousers belonged to suits which were being made and the coats and vests were therefore greatly depreciated in value. Two old coats, not very clean, were left on a table. One pair of trousers was dropped on the ground back of the building. They were found this morning close by two rough hand-made chisels, two inches in width. One was stamped with the name of "C. Congar."

The value of the cloth stolen cannot be correctly estimated as it is not known exactly how much was taken. The thieves may be found through the coats they left. In one of the pockets were pieces of coal which Mr. Bremmer thinks is an indication that the wearer of that coat was a coal train passenger. Chief Marshal Pangborn cannot investigate because of the rules which the North Plainfield council have passed to limit the power of the chief and the magistrate.

Muhlenberg Hospital.

Muhlenberg Hospital is in urgent need of money. The balance on hand at the time of the annual meeting in May last was soon exhausted, and, but few contributions having been received since that time, the Hospital is now in debt about $700. In addition to this the new heating apparatus, which has become absolutely necessary, will probably involve an outlay of about $800.

The Finance Committee appeal to the people of Plainfield for contributions to relieve the Hospital from its embarrassment.

An annual payment of $200 will endow a bed; a payment of $100 at one time will constitute a life member, and the annual payment of $10 a subscribing member. Some yearly contributors of from $10 to $100 each are already enrolled. A large increase in the income of the institution is, however, greatly needed.

Donations and annual subscriptions will be gratefully received by any member of the Finance Committee, or by the Treasurer, George H. Goddard, No. 205 East Ninth street, to whose order all checks should be drawn.

Plainfield, Nov. 1, 1894.

Another Hallowe'en.

The evening of Oct. 31 was enjoyably spent at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. W. Raison and Mr. and Mrs. T. Hendry, 343 East Third street. All kinds of games and dancing were enjoyed, and at 11 p. m. all adjourned to the dining room, where a magnificent spread awaited. Justice was done to all the good things that were provided.

Enjoyment was kept up with a lively spirit till the early hours of morning, when the party broke up by singing "Auld lang syne" and giving three cheers for the hosts and hostesses. The guests, numbering 30, were much indebted to Master Hugh Gray for his excellent services rendered on the violin.

Insolent Marauders.

Three drunken men went to the house of James Cashen on Grove street, near Greenbrook road, at 1 last night, and applied for lodging. Mr. Cashen refused to let them remain, and a fight followed.

The boldest of the three was a big Irishman. Mr. Cashen knocked him down and Chief Marshal Pangborn arrested him. The others ran away after the chief discovered who they were. The Irishman arrested was placed in the lock-up.

To Justice Crosley today the man said his name was Michael Reardon. He was sent to Somerville for 30 days.

Electricity.

A meeting for the organization of a branch of the National School of Electricity will be held at the Y. M. C. A. rooms at 8 p. m., Saturday. Dr. Horneby, the secretary of the school, will be present to give information regarding the course. He will be glad to meet any who are interested whether they anticipate taking the work or not.

VICTOR VANDERVEER.

HE IS GREETED AS PLAINFIELD'S COLORED MONTE SCOTT.

Crescent Wheelmen Assist in a Successful Meet of Cycle Enthusiasts.

The Victor Wheelmen held their first race-meet on the Crescent Oval yesterday afternoon. It was a success as far as sport was concerned, although the racing was slow and the attendance was small. The fastest mile was made in 2:59 1-5, and there were about 120 persons present. Still the riders were evenly matched and the finishes were not lacking in excitement.

The L. A. W. sanctioned the meet in the name of the Park Club, so the racing was legally under the auspices of the society people of North Plainfield. The mistake in giving permission for the meet occurred in the League's headquarters when Captain Jones's application was received on Park Club note paper.

The visitors were all colored except about twenty members of the Crescent Wheelmen who attended to act as officers and to give advice to the management on the strength of their season of experience in holding meets. The officials were: Referee—F. L. C. Martin; Judges—A. Woltmann, W. H. Rogers, Charles C. Lister; Starter—N. R. Titsworth; Clerks of the Course—William McCutchen, N. R. Titsworth.

All of the racers who started were young colored men from the vicinity of Plainfield except Else Vanderveer, John C. Diggs, J. W. Chavis and Marshall Cook of the Eagle Wheelmen, Newark. Of these the one whom the Plainfielders most feared was Diggs, who seemed to have a great reputation for speed.

The one-mile novice race was run in two heats. In the first were grouped Joe Bolden, Lewis Peterson, S. R. Springs, Bert Harvey and Marshall Cook. It was a slow race and Bolden was easily the best man of the lot. He rode first in 3:07 1-5, with Springs and Peterson behind him in the order named.

The second heat was made in quicker time by John Scott, Wm. Burton, Else Vanderveer, John Venable and Alfred Wilson. They finished in that order, the first man crossing the tape in 2:59 2-5

The final heat was won by Bolden, Burton second and Vanderveer third. Time 3:05 1-5. First prize, gold medal; second, derby hat; third, scarf pin.

The one-third mile scratch was ridden by Diggs, Bolden, Scott, Harvey, Peterson, Wilson and Burton. Bolden won in 52 seconds, with Diggs second and Peterson third. The first prize was a silver badge; the second a silver medal, and the third a scarf pin.

The starters in the two-mile handicap were C. Vanderveer scratch; Cook scratch; Chavis 70 yards; L. Vanderveer 30; Springs 60; Wilson 110; Peterson 150; Venable 180; Burton 200. It was plain that Wilson did not have sufficient handicap. The winner was C. Vanderveer, Chavis second and Burton third. The time was 6:03 1-5. The prizes were: First and second, silver medals, and third a sweater.

In the one-mile scratch there were seven starters—Bolden, Scott, Diggs, Peterson, Venable, Wilson, and Springs. They managed to ride with the winner, Diggs, finishing in 2:59 1-5. Bolden was the second man, with Scott third and Venable fourth. The first and second prizes were silver medals and the third a pair of stockings.

The most important of all the events was the five miles of handicap sprinting. Those who started were C. Vanderveer scratch; Diggs scratch; Bolden 50 yards; Scott 80; Springs 150; Wilson 240; Peterson 300; Venable 350; and Burton 400. Nearly all worked hard and remained in the usual bunch until the eleventh lap, when Vanderveer and Bolden shot out and ran away from Diggs. They finished in an exciting sprint in this order—Vanderveer, Bolden, Diggs. Time, 15:29. The prizes were a gold medal, a silver medal and a bicycle lamp.

This was the last race of the day, as it had been decided to omit the third-mile slow race. When Charley Vanderveer came in from his victory he was greeted by a crowd of friends and taken in triumph from the track, a colored Monte Scott.

The Chief a Good Shepherd.

Chief Marshal Pangborn found a two-year old boy on Somerset street near Park place yesterday afternoon at 4. No one in the neighborhood knew where the child lived, so the Chief took the little fellow in his arms and started on a search. He got on track of the home in an hour and found that the child belonged to Cornelius Ackerman of Vine street. Mrs. Ackerman had gone down town and the child had wandered out of the house.

Stopping the Leaks.

A chimney in the building on East Front street occupied by William L. Gavett's crockery store has been leaking lately, the smoke finding openings in the brick wall along Mail alley at the third story.

Seaman & Williams's men erected a large scaffold in the alley this morning and began to take out the bricks where the leak has been and make the wall smoke-tight.

THE POSTMASTERSHIP.

John T. Dunn at Last Tells His Story.

REPUDIATES THE CHECK LIE.

Asserts That Senator Smith Advised Him to Appoint Hetfield Because of the Endorsement of Judge Coddington, Councilman Frazee, and Other Influential Democrats—Scathing Denouncement of Those Who Let Their Personal Selfishness Wean Them from Their Party.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:

I am advised that a number of men masquerading as Democrats, in your city, are assailing me with the most villainous falsehoods in their attempt to justify their threatened action induced by their "knownothing" proclivities—A. P. A., I believe is what they are baptized now.

There were fifteen candidates for the Plainfield postoffice, each one deeming that he had the best right to the appointment, and in some instances, each one reflecting upon the character and fitness of his opponent, until I got weary and disgusted with the whole business, and was glad to escape the annoyance and importunity to which I was continually subjected.

There was not a single candidate who could claim any particular favor from me above another, and I was at liberty, so far as any party obligation was concerned, to select whom I pleased, as I had made no ante-election promises. I meant to find the man who would best administer the postoffice for the whole people, and I could not, consistently with my oath, give it as a beneficence to any one. I was not well acquainted with the political situation in Plainfield; indeed, I did not look for a politician to fill the place. It was my prerogative as well as my duty to name the man, and the cause upon which much angry discussion is based now is, "that I should have listened to the advice of this man in preference to that or that man in preference to someone else, and have acted through them even against my own convictions of fitness and duty".

Their basis for faultfinding is untenable and improper. "A public office is not a private snap." There was no man in Plainfield nor out of it who had a right to demand that I should make it so to benefit any man. I was under the obligation of my oath "to discharge my public duties in connection with my office as a member of this the Fifty-Third Congress conscientiously and without other consideration than that which I received in salary for my public service".

I tried to comply with the obligations of that oath, and am satisfied that in the selection of Mr. Hetfield, after more than two months deliberation, I made no mistake, so far as the conduct of the office is concerned, and I told all applicants from first to last that was what I wanted. Some of the men who were applicants for the office, and did not receive it, are going around lying about me and mouthing their malice and their woes, and exhibit them as "beggars do their sores" making themselves a disgrace and a discredit, not only to Democrats but to decent men of all parties.

They have invented and circulated a falsehood to the effect that Mr. Hetfield gave Judge W. A. Coddington a check for a thousand dollars. That Elias Pope saw it and told of it because he passed it through his bank, and urged that I must have received that check, or some portion of it, for the endorsement of Mr. Hetfield. Mr. Pope positively denies this; so does Mr. Coddington; and yet this villainous falsehood has been diligently circulated to smirch my character. From this malignant falsehood, born in the vindictive brains of disappointed aspirants for office, the Republicans of this district put a plank in their platform about "the sale of postoffices", showing that like desperate gamblers they were willing to take any chance, not caring whether they stabbed my character and through me that of my wife and my innocent children, so long as they thought they might accomplish a political result by the assassination of character.

Great God, what has the hunt for office come to, with some of the so-called Plainfield Democrats, when they can seek such dreadful ends in their mad and foolish disappointment! When they can resort to such a despicable and murderous course in their personal appeals to Democrats to strike down their own Democratic flag and their own standard bearer in his private character for personal revenge, merely because he did not have fifteen postoffices, instead of one. They cannot and do not say that I have not made an efficient Representative. The only thing seems to be that I did not have postoffices enough to go around.

Their conduct in the circulation of the grossest falsehoods and the vile malice since their disappointment is the most abundant and most indisputable evidence that they were not fit to hold any office, not even to be citizens of the United States. A liar is a coward, and a coward is a thief—if he finds opportunity he will prove it. The man who causelessly stoops to destroy private character for the sake of revenge is the worst kind of a thief.

I was Speaker of the House of Assembly of our State when more than five millions of dollars was at stake in the great water front steal at Jersey City in 1882, and a million and a half of dollars in Elizabeth, at the time when there was a saturnalia of corruption in Trenton, to carry the measures, and I could have had enough of this world's goods to leave New Jersey and live all my life without work, (not to vote for the measures, as they had enough of votes), but to allow the bills to come to a vote. I refused to do it, even when the lobbyists of corporations threatened to pass them over my dead body if I refused to advance them on the calendar and come to a vote. They never arrived at a vote, and New Jersey was saved from disgrace, and from the most monstrous steal that was ever attempted within its borders.

It is humiliating then in view of those facts, to have things walking erect and calling themselves men, circulating stories of petty larceny about me. It but proves that they themselves would be what they charge upon me in a like situation. Their malignant venom ought to prove to any sensible man, that had they proof upon which a dog could be hung, that I would have been called to account for what they charge, before now. No new laws are needed to punish such crimes as they allege, and I defy the rascals, who are themselves the guilty ones, and I ask the decent men of Plainfield, whatever be their political predilections, to punish their mendacity by voting for the object of their attacks.

It has been said that I was under obligations to Mr. Martine to make such appointment as he desired. If I was, I have discharged my obligation. He and I ran for the nomination two years ago. The contest was a friendly one between us. I won; he supported me loyally. I would have done the same for him had he been the successful candidate. This cannot be denied. I was the candidate for Senator against Mr. Livingston in the convention. He was selected, and there was no man who worked harder for his election than I did, and he never would have been elected were it not for my efforts, as Gov. Abbett will certify; he knows it. I did not seek to control his actions to be taken under his oath as a consideration for a duty performed. He it was who had to respond to the duty for which he was elected, not I, and I would not allow a friend of mine to be disgruntled because he might not see it to be his duty to accede to my request.

I wanted Mr. Martine to succeed me, and thought that the man who goes to Congress is better equipped when he has legislative experience than when he has none, and so desired his election to the Senate of our State last Fall. I spent my time and my money to elect him. My duties in Washington were arduous and exacting, and I could not spare a full day during the session.

For two weeks before election I left Washington each day by Congressional Limited express, at four o'clock, and reached home at eight-thirty. I immediately went on the platform for him, and for the whole ticket. I took the night train to return at twelve forty-eight, arriving at Washington at eight o'clock next morning and went to my committee work.

This was an expression of my devotion to Mr. Martine's interests, that neither he, nor any other man, was ever called upon to do for me.

It is then a poor requital for his friends to strike down their own banner, because I happen to be its bearer. It is a spirit of Democracy with which I am not familiar, and is a poor augury for the future success of our party in Union County.

The tirade of Veritas in your issue of Tuesday last to which you owe this letter, I pass by, because dogs that bark from their kennels are not dangerous. Let him come out and bark in the opening, and show whether he is a disappointed aspirant for office or not.

I will say, however, in passing, that I never opened my mouth against the ticket mentioned by him after the nominations were made, and that I did all that I could do to elect it, and voted the whole straight ticket as well as stood at the polls and urged others to do so. John Rabig, the Chief of our Fire Department at that time, and David B. Egbert were the poll men at my voting place and can testify to the fact. If you will look at the returns of last year, and see what was done in my voting precinct for Mr. Martine, you can learn that had the vote been proportionate throughout the county, he would have been elected by a thousand majority. What his friends will do in return remains to be seen.

It is true that before the nominations referred to were made, I warned my party against making them, more because I knew we could not elect the ticket than for any personal reason. Some men who went down on that ticket were my warmest personal friends. Mr. Forsyth and myself were neighbors, and I was absolutely devoted in my efforts to secure his election, but the ticket itself insured its own defeat, and had I cried

A CALIFORNIA HUNTRESS.

The Exploits of Miss. Eveline T. Parker With Rod and Gun.

If the young woman of the period is to enjoy sports that have heretofore been monopolized by men, what better or healthier fun can she have than hunting or fishing? Surely there is nothing unwomanly in that enjoyment, nothing that the small brained critics need complain of.

The other day the sportsman's blood tingled when he read that a bear had been killed in the Northwoods by Miss Eveline Parker, daughter of President Forrest H. Parker of the New York Produce Exchange Bank. When a woman can kill a bear, what can she not do with a gun.

It is delightfully refreshing to read of the hunting exploits of Miss Marie Clark, a California school-girl of seventeen years. When vacation time comes she does not pack a trunkful of ball and tennis gowns and while away the hours in flirting on the verandas of a summer hotel. She starts out with her father and an outfit of English setters, guns and camping goods. Together they tramp the hills and valleys, catch fish, and kill snipe and deer.

Miss Clark, first of all, dresses sensibly. She wears a shirt waist of light woolen material, a light canvas skirt of sensible length, and a regulation hunter's canvas coat. In upland shooting she wears Canadian hunting boots of light alum-tanned leather, lacing to the knees, and with the sole flat and studded with nails. When fishing in the river she wears rubber boots.

Miss Clark recently had a lively chase after a deer. After a day of unsuccessful hunting she reached a canon, and after climbing 500 yards up the rough and steep sides, stopped to rest. She saw two deer travelling together on the opposite side, and after waiting until they were within full range she fired her first shot. The deer wheeled about and ran down the canon, and she fired again. This time one of the deer fell and was lodged in a clump of pine tree on the mountain side. While Miss Clark was firing at its companion the stricken deer reached the bottom of the canon and started on a broken run for the creek. With two long shots, one through the head and another through the neck, this huntress finished the animal, a fat spike buck. She did not stop there. She bled the deer, cut him up, and prepared him for carriage.

Her success at fishing is regarded beyond the ordinary meaning of luck, and as a snipe shooter she holds her own with the best of them. She knows how to cook all the game she brings into camp. In other words, this young girl, equipped with gun, ammunition, and fishing rod, can go out into the woods alone for a month's vacation and take care of herself. She will return to the high school, where she is a hard student, wearing a brown, healthy glow on her face and equipped with plenty of real and exciting stories to tell to her school friends.

NO ROYAL ROAD.

Culture Cannot be Developed by Any Fixed Rules.

"Name the dozen books" is the request of several friendly readers. It is easier to make the request than to comply with it, because tastes and aptitudes vary, and the essential thing in culture is the result, not the process. A man may cultivate himself as Goethe did, by long study of art and nature; as Mr. Beecher did, by questioning human life wherever he found it; as many a man has, by the intimate study of one or two books. He may cultivate himself by literature, as Mr. Lowell did; by science, as Professor Tyndall did; by history, as Mr. John Fiske has done. Each man must choose for himself the material which has the greatest attraction for him and from which he gets the largest returns. The essential thing is not the material, but the purpose, the spirit, and the steady fidelity. One need not go to Switzerland to learn to appreciate natural beauty.

Let him get Ruskin's "Modern Painters" and begin to study the country about him; let him form the habit of observing trees, clouds and birds. In a little time the world about him will begin to open on every side. Let him read Emerson's "Nature," the selection of Wordsworth's poems made by Matthew Arnold, for the Golden Treasury Series, Burns, the books of Thoreau, Jeffries and Burroughs. One need not read all books in order to get the soul of literature; that is to be found in the great books—the books of the race. The richest material for the unfolding and enlargement of the individual is found in intimate contact with the soul of the race; for the race has compassed all experience, sounded all life and gotten at the heart of it, not only by thinking but by feeling, by acting, by suffering.

This final deposit, this vital quintessence of knowledge, is found in the dozen greatest books, because the great writers are the men who have seen deepest into the life of their race, mastered its secrets most completely and revealed them most clearly. The man, therefore, who would get the richest material upon which to feed his spirit—that which the whole race has lived to secrete and accumulate—will have at hand his Bible, in some respects a unique literature, in all respects a literature of surpassing variety, power and beauty; his Homer in the translation he likes best; his Dante, his Shakespeare—and Shakespeare comes to us now in such available forms that a man may always have a play in his pocket for the odd ten minutes of waiting or travel; his Goethe, his Plato, also put into the most portable shape.

The habitual reading and rereading of these books, or any one of them—living with them year after year—will cultivate the man, who thus becomes intimate with the greatest minds and the deepest experience of his race. These are the starting points from which one may read, as he has opportunity, the books of power in every literature, the books of history and the books of science. The reader who is bent on culture will read to get at the heart of his book; he will brood over it; return to it again and again; keep it at hand, and finally get it into his heart. He will read always the best books; he will make use, not only of his leisure hours, but of his leisure minutes. If he needs to have definite suggestions at frequent intervals let him study Emerson's "Intellectual Life," and if he would confirm his devotion to his pursuit and have his faith reinforced, let him read Amiel's "Journal" and the essays of Arnold, Emerson and Lowell.

Obliterating Himself.

WOMEN SLAVES IN CHINA.

Their Owners are Often Nominal Christians; Prices Vary.

Slavery and polygamy seem to be twins. They went hand and hand together in Biblical days, and they go hand in hand together in China to-day.

Slave girls are purchased from their parents or guardians when they are quite young. From three to seven is the favorite age in the market, as the child then shows about how it will look when fully grown. The price is then quite low, ranging from $10 to $80, and the danger of it becoming homesick and running away amounts to nothing. These girls are brought up as ladies' maids and receive an education which, while very deficient from an European standard, is equal to that of their mistress. They are treated kindly, and at fifteen are often admirable housekeepers. They receive no wages, of course, and as for lodgings, they are supposed to be able sleep anywhere—on two chairs, a board, a stone bench, or a tile floor. At any time the purchaser has the right to sell his slave girl again. This is very seldom done, and only when business troubles or accidents have reduced the master to poverty.

At 16 the girl is marriageable, and, in the next five years, usually at 20, she is married. Sometimes her owner is the happy bridegroom, he choosing her as an inferior wife. Generally she is married outside, and, in that case, her nuptials are celebrated with nearly as much eclat as those of a daughter. There is, however, one curious point of difference. All her wedding presents go to her owner under the theory of recouping him for the loss of her services, whereas in the case of a daughter, they are her marriage portion with which she starts her new household.

A slightly different kind of slavery is that where widows and old maids buy children, especially boys, as an investment for surplus money, with a view to their support in old age. These are known as "pocket children" and their owner as the "pocket mother." Boys bring from $10 to $30; girls from $20 to $75.

SOME FABULOUS FEASTS.

Cleopatra's Pearl and Stories of Other Dinners that Induced Dyspepsia.

The feasts of the ancients, while they lacked the refinement of modern civilization, were far more costly and extraordinary than any experienced in modern times. Lucius Lucullus, on his return from his Asiatic campaign, gave feasts upon a scale never before attempted by a Roman general. On one occasion wines were served that cost $20 an ounce, and young pig was eaten that had been roasted over a fire of burning nuts and raisins. Peacock's tongues, live fish from distant seas, oysters from Britain and tropical fruits from Arabia were some of the luxuries offered the guests. The cost of the feast alone was $100,000.

Cicero and Pompey visited Lucullus' villa when the host was absent. Acting under his instructions to make themselves at home while they remained, they gave several dinners, which cost in the aggregate $40,000. Caligula, the Emperor, whose wickedness shocked the most brutal of his associates, built a bridge of boats three miles long, in the centre of which he caused a banquet hall to be constructed. In this was served a feast that is said to have cost half a million dollars.

It was in imitation of Aesopus, the spendthrift son of the great actor, that Cleopatra drank a $40,000 pearl in a glass of wine at one of the banquets given in honor of Antony. Vitellius, the Roman Emperor, once gave a dinner that cost over $200,000. Suetonius states that the guests had the choice of two thousand dishes of fish and seven thousand of game and fowl.

Aulus Verus, a Roman noble, gave a supper one night to a dozen of his cronies that made a hole of $250,000 in his bank account. Elagabalus, author of Rome's early Emperors, when eighteen years of age, entertained some of his friends at dinner, one dish costing him $200,000.

EQUINE STORIES FROM MAINE.

A Religous Horse That Knew When Sunday Came.

A Dexter man has a mare that knows several things, and among other accomplishments, apparently can tell the day of the week. The other Sunday, the gentleman hitched up and having assisted his wife into the carriage, got in himself. He was busied for a moment in arranging the robe, and before he had taken up the reins the horse started out of the yard into the street. His purpose was to attend church, and as the horse took the direction he decided to let her go without guiding, to see what she would do.

The route is altogether different from that taken in the week-day driving. He left the reins hanging on the dasher, but nevertheless was carried as straight to the church as he would have gone if he had reined the horse.

Without a word, when she had turned up to the church door and the carriage was in position at the steps, the mare stopped for her master to alight.

A Dixmont man has one to tell that is fully as old as the foregoing. He had a young horse called Dick, evidently possessed of brains and talent for doing funny things. He had a barnyard surrounded by a high fence, and into this he turned the animal soon after he bought him. Dick sniffed around for a while and then bounded out of the enclosure and went racing down the highway. The farmer, reinforced by all the other members of the household, gave chase, but the colt was much too frisky for them.

He capered near and far away as the spirit moved him, and apparently laughed at their efforts. At length the chase was given up as useless and the folks went back to the house. Then into the yard of his own accord came Dick on the run, and, giving a bound, he went over the fence into the barnyard, and for the rest of the day he was as quiet as a lamb. Time and again after that, the man says, Dick did the same thing, always going back into the enclosure of his own free will.—Lewiston Journal.

Time For Them To Speak.

A recent story from Pitman Grove, N. J., says that William Thomas of that place, a man of seventy years when called up to sign a deed said that he and his wife had quarrelled twenty years ago, and that not a word had passed between them since, although they live under the same roof.

PNEUMATIC WHEEL SKATES.

A Boon for Doctors, Highwaymen and Stranded Actors.

The movement for the abolition of all trouble and work goes on apace. The latest invention is intended to do away with walking by making every man his own vehicle.

A pneumatic skate is on exhibition at the Royal Aquarium, London, on which the skater can spin along much more rapidly than on the old fashioned wooden wheeled roller. The idea is a distinct embezzlement, of course, of the idea of the pneumatic tire as used on bicycles.

It was invented by H. J. Wilson, and the first pair was sold to a woman of "pluck and title," who lives at Kirkcaldy and who does her shopping on the skates, followed by all the inhabitants of Kirkcaldy who are well enough to be out. The craze has infected Glasgow, where pneumatic skaters go along at the rate of twelve miles an hour, the beginners mowing down anything and every one in their path. It is specially adapted to country doctors, letter carriers, drummers, highwaymen, and, in fact, to any one whose interest it is to move rapidly from one place to another.

The skates cost in England from $17 to $26 a pair. It is said that $2 worth of arnica and sticking plaster is enough for the learner, and after that he can keep his balance and make good speed. It isn't necessary to have a smooth floor, the best sort of ground being a gritty, macadamized road.

So far the skate has not been seen in this country. The nearest approach to it was contained in a dialogue in the Tombs Police Court. A prisoner was brought in, charged with being drunk.

"I'll take my oath, Judge," he said, "that I didn't take a drop. I'd been down to Coney Island, and I guess I was overcome by the exhilarating air."

"Ah!" exclaimed His Honor, "I understand. You had on a pneumatic 'skate.' Kindly hand the gentlemanly clerk to your right a five dollar bill or accompany the accommodating person to your left to the cells and stay there for five days—whichever you choose."

Evolved from Scraps of Other Gowns

Gorgeous are this season's dinner gowns. Nothing is too costly to be used in their fashioning. Yet the women forced into economy need not despair, as an up-to date dinner costume may easily be evolved from the best bits of last year's gowns.

An imported dinner or reception dress which may be used as a model has for its foundation broche moire in a pale shade of green scattered with indistinct rosebuds. The full crinoline lined skirt is finished around the bottom with a rope coil of rich claret-colored velvet. Other than this the skirt is untrimmed.

The tight-fitting bodice is shaped like a basque. It is of pale green moire.

A Plain Cape.

A smart little cape is made in pale blue cloth flatly plaited and edged with white galon. It is finished with a tight-fitting waistcoat, fastened with an old silver buckle, and is worn with a hat to match. This cape would look best with a gray gown.

An Indian Cure.

A Huntington doctor who is fond of playing cards called on a patient the other day.

He pulled out his watch, felt the sick man's pulse, and began to count "seven, eight, nine, ten, jack, queen, king, ace." The patient immediately burst out laughing and got well.—Indianapolis Sun.

A COMPLICATION.

It was generally conceded that it was pretty hard on Anna Alden, and that she had borne it remarably well. It was a year since she had first become engaged to Page Chittick. In that short space she had broken with him half a dozen times. At the first rupture Anna had promptly returned the ring, and Page as promptly threw it into the fire. Anna did not approve of such costly exhibitions of feeling and foreseeing that there would be many such scenes before she had succeeded in properly training her fiance, she wisely retained the ring which marked the renewal of the engagement, however final the quarrel might seem to be. The last disagreement had risen from Anna's sitting out a dance with Dick Van de Veer under the stairway at Mrs. Arnold's. She was on the point of making it easy for him to say that he was sorry, when a catastrophe occurred. She was at a luncheon given in honor of Miss Woodward, from Charleston. The hostess had announced the engagement of her distinguished guest to some one whom they all knew very well—Mr. Chittick—Page Chittick.

The dainty courses followed each other, ingeniously carrying out a certain scheme of color, delighting the eye as well as the palate. While Anna ate and talked gayly she kept up a running fire of mental comment.

"It was brutal. I shall make Page sorry for this. Not a bad-looking girl, fine eyes and hair, but slow, dead slow for Page. Foolish fellow, to convert a mere lover's quarrel into a tragedy."

Chittick would have given much to have gotten out of the round of congratulatory functions. He saw that Anna regarded the whole thing as a farce, and was especially amused by the role he was playing. He felt that he had made himself ridiculous. He was glad when the brief post-lenten season was over. Miss Woodward and her aunt, Mrs. Armstrong, went to the mountains, and Page accompanied them. He hoped for better things both from Florence and himself away from Anna's blighting influence.

Florence looked particularly pretty and happy as she sat opposite to him at the hotel table on the first evening of their arrival. A faint but sweet hope that he would yet find in her all that he desired made him more attentive to her than usual. Mrs. Armstrong glanced up from her paper, and said:

"One never gets very far from one's friends. I see that Mrs. Alden and her daughter are at the Claymore. That is one of the hotels on the same side of the lake as we are. You remember we passed it on the stage."

"In that case we shall probably see as much of the Aldens as if we were in the city," Chittick said, in a tone of vexation. "It is such a confoundedly small lake that you cannot escape meeting every one here."

One morning Page came upon a boat moored to a low bending branch. Anna was lying among the cushions with her book, her lovely face shining like a lily in the green shadow.

"Anna!" he said. It was the first time he had so addressed her since their last estrangement.

"Oh, it is you, Page?" she said, quietly, looking at him without surprise.

"May I have a seat in your boat?"

"Yes, if you don't capsize me."

"Anna, do you love or do you hate me, that you act as you do?"

"I love you, Page. Why should I deny it? You are a silly boy, making all this row about nothing. You have gotten yourself into a pretty fix. What puzzles me is how you are to get out of it."

"If you love me I don't see that there will be much difficulty."

"Oh, you don't! What about Florence? She may not take a broken engagement as easily as we do. Some women don't you know. Does she love you, Page?"

"I don't know—I never asked her," he said, bluntly.

"Page, you are a man more to my taste than anyone else, I know, probably because you afford scope to my special talents. But if Florence loves you I simply won't have you. I will not pardon you the stupidity of winning a heart that you do not want, and don't know what to do with. I am going to settle this question for myself. I never take information of this kind at second hand. I am going to call on Miss Woodward."

When Anna did end her call, she felt that Florence herself had prescribed for her a definite line of action.

The next morning Chittick found a note at his plate. It was from Florence. She apologized for having been so slow. She appreciated, though tardily, the delicacy with which Miss Alden had acted in breaking to her the difficult matter that Page wished to be released from his engagement. Now that they had taken the trouble to make themselves acquainted with her ideas on the subject, and the true state of her feelings, she hoped that they would feel free to follow the dictates of their own hearts.

Chittick would have been glad to take Florence at her words, but under their smooth sarcasm he saw her heart. She rose before him as he had seen her last—her soft dark eyes fastened upon him, her lips trembling with her answer to his question, which had come to him as a mere after-thought. Anna would simply have to take him now.

Page rushed to find her. The man returned with his card and a small package. Miss Alden and her mother had gone away by the afternoon stage. The package was to be delivered to Mr. Chittick when he called. The note, written in Anna's usual hasty angular hand, read:

"My dear Page—I don't know what you are going to do about Florence. I am tired of thinking what is the proper thing to do. I don't know whether it will simplify matters or not if Florence should know that I am engaged to Dick Van de Veer. You may tell her if you like.

Yours faithfully,
ANNA ALDEN."

The box contained the ring which Anna had retained so long for the possible future use. The rush of angry blood through his veins made Chittick tremble. He went out under the trees. All the occasions when Anna had caused him pain grouped themselves before him, distinct, vital, still possessing the power to hurt him. He ground his teeth when he thought of her fertility in expedients to wound and anger him.

The same impulse which had first made him turn to Florence impelled him toward her again. Her repose, her sympathy, her tenderness, came to him like a breath of fresh pure air in the heated atmosphere into which thought of Anna had plunged him.

And Florence loved him.

He went back to his hotel and asked for a telegraph blank. He wrote: "It is all a mistake. Will start for Charleston tomorrow," and addressed it to "Miss Florence Woodward, Charleston, S. C."

DRAMA AND OPERA.

THE OUTLOOK IS GOOD FOR ACTOR, SINGER AND MANAGER.

Miss Olga Nethersole and Her Opening Play. Miss Odette Tyler, Ex-Fiancee of Howard Gould, Introduces a Foreign Custom. Mr. Plancon, Etc.

The dramatic season is now fairly opened in New York, and managers have had a little chance to get a line on the probabilities of the season. So far, the business of the theatres has been fairly successful, and a decided improvement upon last year. Richard Mansfield is inclined to be a little dissatisfied with the audiences which he receives, and he has criticized more or less, the taste of theatre-goers who have been patronizing foreign actors and actresses whose performances are less artistic, Mr. Mansfield believes, than those which he gives. But there is always sure to be a discord and the general result has been gratifying to theatrical people.

An unusual amount of discussion has been raging about Miss Olga Nethersole, a young lady who came to this country heralded as one of the greatest of Juliets and the most promising of young English actresses. Her first appearance here was in "The Transgressor," a play that has very little to recommend it except Miss Nethersole's personality which has endowed the principal character with an unusual amount of interest. The critics have widely differed with regard to her, but all agree in saying that she has an unusual amount of magnetism, and that even with actors of note on the stage with her, she dominates the entire performance and makes it seem stale and unprofitable when she is absent.

The faults ascribed to Miss Nethersole are that she does too much, and gives too much color to her work; but it is agreed that she has the qualities which go to the making of a great actress, and the prediction has been freely ventured that she has a great future before her.

In London and Paris the reception rooms of well known actresses are very distinctive features of the theatres. We know how Bernhardt's room is filled with curiosities, Terry's with souvenirs, and Mme. Judic's with luxuries. To these privileged ones are admitted between the acts or in the interim of matinee and evening performance.

The first actress to adopt the foreign idea, is Miss Miss Elizabeth Kirkland, as she is known socially, or Miss Odette Tyler, professionally, the young woman whose engagement (now broken) to Howard Gould caused such comment. Miss Kirkland is playing the leading part at the Academy of Music for the season. The rooms there are spacious and Mr. Frohman has put aside a pretty suite for her. Miss Kirkland looked into the mode of entertaining while abroad this year and came back determined to adopt it.

The large sitting room in which she receives her friends, is hung after the English fashion in delicately colored chintz. The woodwork is blue. The windows are cross barred with filagreed iron and hung in golden brown plush. Rugs are thrown about the floor, great divans covered with golden velvet are piled high with silk and Persian cushions. A low French dresser is placed under two great side lights, on which lie a multitude of silver toilet articles. A writing desk is usually open with Miss Kirkland's monogrammed paper lying ready and everywhere on matinee days are flowers.

One only goes by invitation, and usually pleasant people are brought together by the tact of the hostess. Sometimes a clever musician is asked, and in a most informal way he spends his time at the piano, while the maid serves tea in the exquisite cups that were sent to Miss Kirkland by friends when her engagement to Mr. Howard Gould was announced. She wears very smart house gowns at these receptions.

The opera season cannot fail to be an artistic as well as a social success. Pessimists, who are always anticipating disaster, from politics to the peach crop, predict great changes in the occupants of boxes and stalls, by reason mainly, of the slight advance in prices and the retirement of many old patrons and habitues of the Metropolitan, to make room for new people and unaccustomed faces. But as nearly all the grand and first tier boxes are owned by well-known and prominent families, very few of whom will be absent this winter, it seems hardly possible that any great change will be apparent; and even if it should be, novelty has its charms as well as antiquity, and the golden showers, which are indispensable to so costly a luxury, must be recruited from fresh sources, or the old standbys may find the demands upon them greater than they are willing to supply.

M. Plancon, the distinguished singer has an air when on the street that beats his finest effort on the stage. He was a sight worth more than the price of admission as he crossed Broadway the other day.

He glanced only once at the cavalcade of trucks and the line of whirling cars, and then, shaking his forefinger at them all in an admonitory but roughish way, continued on his journey across Broadway. The gesture was that of a good natured giant, waving a small boy back from his path. It had a mavellous effect upon the band of Broadway brigands. Horses were thrown on their haunches, gripmen swung around violently to the left, and the cable cars came to a stop with a suddenness that sent the passengers sliding forward in their seats. Mr. Plancon continued tranquilly and dreamily across the way, and stood there in the sun light, buying a rose for his buttonhole. He did not look at the men who had been whirling up Broadway so rapidly, but they peered back at him for a block after they had passed on their way uptown. The singer looked like a millionaire multiplied by twenty. A close inspection suggested that his attire cost about $17, including everything. His manner did the rest. LINWARD.

Turkey a Hard Road on Bicycles.

Lieutenant Guyot, of the French army, who recently rode on a bicycle to Constantinople and back, had a hard experience in Turkey, where he was only able to make 30 miles in three days. In that time he had nothing to eat but four hard-boiled eggs with vinegar, and muddy water with a little raki to drink. The natives insisted upon getting on his machine, and he had great trouble with the dogs. In Bulgaria there were no roads at all, though some were pegged out, and the mud was very sticky. He rode 1860 miles without stopping, except to eat, sleep and have his machine mended, yet he was 73 days on the way.

A DIFFERENCE.

"My son, you do not realize what you are saying," protested Mr. Coffin. "Both your mother and myself have given much thought to this matter, and, of course, intend to allow you the same privilege. Think it over for a day or two and then give us your answer. Marie is a most estimable young lady, I assure you, and with her as my daughter-in-law the two sections of our family will be cemented together most satisfactorily."

"But, father, you, too, do not realize what you say. Marie may be all that I could wish, but I do not love her, and I positively refuse to marry for money. It is absurd! Why, I have never seen the girl! Besides, I am not heart whole."

"What!" exclaimed the father. "You are not going to tell me that you have made some disgraceful engagement!"

"No, sir; that is hardly to be expected from a son of yours," returned the young man, a trifle haughtily.

"Forgive me, Jack. I spoke impetuously and unthinkingly. Let us drop the subject for the present. Your cousin will be here this evening; when you have been with her for a day or so you will be better able to decide on your course."

"Very well, sir. But I am sure my answer will be the same."

In speaking of his already partially formed love the young man had referred to a little romance of the past summer. He and a couple of his college friends had been outing in the Catskills, and one day during their sojourn Jack had taken it into his head, to climb a neighboring mountain alone. It was a perfectly clear day when he started, but he had scarcely arrived at the lonely house on the summit when a tempestuous thunder storm came up. He entered the rudely furnished visitors' room and found therein a lovely girl.

At first she was very reserved, but when he formally introduced himself her constraint melted away and she became most mischievously gay. Jack tried to learn her name, but she either did not understand him or would not gratify his curiosity. So completely was the young fellow bewitched by her that he could think of nothing else, and it was not until he had seen her safe with her friends that he realized he had no clue to her identity.

All this young Coffin now reviewed. A commotion was going on down stairs, and he knew that his aunt and cousin had arrived. He heard the greetings exchanged, the voices of his father, mother and aunt, and mingled with these the soft, low tones of a girl.

That must be Marie, he mentally concluded.

After a while he heard footsteps approaching his door, and his mother said from without:

"Jack, are you there?"

"Yes, mother," he replied, but without moving.

"Aunt Virginia and Marie have arrived. Will you be down soon?"

"Not now; perhaps not this evening. Tell them I have a headache. I don't care to encounter the young lady at present."

He retired early and soon fell asleep, only to be awakened by some noise he could not locate. He listened intently. In a few seconds the noise was repeated—a sharp, quick tap upon the window, as of some hard substance coming in contact with it. Jack got out of bed cautiously and opened the sash, and peered out into the darkness. He saw some one standing upon the lawn, and his first impulse was to sharply order the intruder to depart; but on looking more closely he discovered with surprise that the figure was that of a woman, and he changed his command to the question:

"What is it?"

"Is that you, cousin Jack?" asked a voice from below, which he recognized with surprise as that of cousin Marie.

"Yes," he replied.

"Can't you come down here? I want to see you, cousin; it is important that we should come to a decision on this matter. I am Marie," said the girl. "It is absurd to think of our entering into such an outrageous marriage."

Ah, the girl had some sense, it seemed. Jack quickly dressed, climbed out on the roof, and descended one of the posts in a most undignified and awkward manner, which, however, was happily not noticed, as the minds of the two were on other things.

"Well, what is it?" he asked, when he stood by Marie's side.

"I feel as you do, and that the affair is too ridiculous to be considered. I feared you might favor the plan. In that case, I should have been in despair."

"Indeed?" exclaimed Jack, piqued by this very frank declaration. "Am I then so obnoxious in your eyes?"

"How can you be when we are practically strangers to each other?" she said, with a laugh. "But whatever you may be, I could never love you."

"May I ask why?" said Jack, who by this time did not wholly admire the situation.

"Because I love another," said Marie, who certainly was not a reserved young lady. "I met him two months ago in the mountains. We sought shelter from a storm together, and—well, it was a case of love at first sight, cousin."

Marie went no further, for an unexpected little scene was acted in the next instant. Jack, who had been vainly peering through the darkness to catch a glimpse of her face, now suddenly threw his arms about his cousin's waist.

"How dare you, sir!" said the girl.

"My darling, I am the man of the mountain," Jack said joyfully. "Don't you remember my voice? Oh, if it were only light, so that I could see your face. How surprised I am, and how glad!"

To tell just what happened then would be impossible. But a few moments later a soft voice said:

"You must not think me bold, Jack; but you see I knew you all the time; and to-night I was afraid you would run away."

After some time had passed Marie made her way back to her room, and Jack, having seen her walk softly in the house, returned to the piazza post and climbed up to his room.

Next morning he went gayly to the breakfast table, much to the surprise of his parents, and soon after he repaired to the library with his father.

"Well, sir," he said, "I have changed my mind as to the proposition you made last night. I accept it at once."

"What!" exclaimed Mr. Coffin in surprise, for he had not hoped for such a favorable answer.

"Yes," returned the son, "I intend to make Marie my wife. You see, I have met her before, though I did not know it when I saw you last." And he proceeded to explain the whole matter.

"Then," said Mr. Coffin, with a roguish look, "you will marry Marie if we ask you to do so?" —Everitt Jackson in Yonker's Statesman is a virtuous vice. The world is better for it. It makes men ambitious—and it makes women careful of their personal appearance. It doesn't take much money to keep well-dressed now-a-days. Cleaning or dyeing makes it possible to use soiled or faded garments. And there's where our ax comes in. We are in the Cleaning and Dyeing business. Our cleaner is ready, and our dyer has his fall shades mixed.

Ask for our little booklet "Re-Freshing Thoughts." It tells about cleaning men's clothing.

DEMOCRATIC NOMINATIONS.

For Congress, Eighth District—JOHN T. DUNN.
For Congress, Third District—JACOB A. GEISSENHAINER.
For County Clerk, Union County—WM. M. OLIVER.
For Assemblymen, Union County—FREDERICK CLAUSS, JOHN B. GREEN, ALFORD B. COOK.
For Coroner, Union County—THOMAS E. DOLAN, M. D.
For Assemblyman, Somerset County—ANDREW LANE.

That worthy institution, Muhlenberg Hospital, is in great need of funds, and the appeal published in The Daily Press should bring prompt and hearty response.

After much patient forbearance, Hon. John T. Dunn is today provoked into a reply to the slanders with which he has been assailed. His letter in this issue of The Daily Press is a strong, forcible and characteristic repudiation of the malicious inventions of his enemies. It will be read with interest by all voters, and reveals some misunderstood matters in their true light.

GRAND RALLY.

DEMOCRATS TO GET TOGETHER IN REFORM HALL.

John T. Dunn, Gen. Hooker and Others to Speak.

A grand Democratic rally will be held in Reform Hall next Monday night.

Gen. Hooker, one of the speakers, is the ablest Tariff exponent in America.

Other speakers will be John T. Dunn and Hon. Edward Everett Bell.

All are invited.

THE CAMPAIGN IN SOMERSET.

It Has Been Brilliantly Handled, and Honest Andrew's Election Is Assured.

The campaign in Somerset County that is now closing has been under the able management of that astute Democratic leader, ex-Congressman Alvah A. Clark, and it has been the best ever conducted in that county. Headquarters have been established at 51 Main street, Somerville, where C. V. D. Corle, the efficient Secretary of the County Democratic Executive Committee, has been very active with a corps of assistants in attendance since the nominations were made, and nearly every prominent Democrat in the county has been in close correspondence with headquarters.

There is absolutely no doubt as to the election of Andrew Lane as member of Assembly from that county, and the chances of Jacob A. Geissainhainer carrying that county are very bright.

Meetings will be held at Bound Brook and Millstone tomorrow night which will be addressed by such talented orators as J. R. McSweeny of Ellis Island, who will discuss the labor question; the farmer orator from this city James E. Martine, Congressman Geissenhainer, ex-Congressman Clark and Prosecutor J. J. Meehan. At Millstone the speakers will be ex-Prosecutor William V. Steele, Hon. George E Pace and others. On Monday evening a mass-meeting will be held at Raritan which will be addressed by Hons. A. A. Clark, James J. Bergen, Prosecutor James J. Meehan and W. V. Steele. With a united Democracy old Somerset is sure to give a good account of herself on Tuesday next.

The Parkinson Girl.

[From The Newark Evening News.]

Rather a pretty young girl visited the Third Police Precinct last night and asked for lodging. Her name, she said, was Kate Parkinson, her age fourteen and her home in Plainfield She was placed in the witness-room, and Chief of Police Grant of Plainfield was notified. This morning he visited the station-house for the purpose of taking the girl home. About two months ago, the Chief said, the girl came to this city with a family who had moved from Plainfield. Her mother, who is a widow, was for a time greatly worried about the girl, but heard later that she was with respectable people here and so ceased to disturb herself. The girl declined to explain why she left home or why she visited the police.

On the Corner.

Down on the corner area man and his son. They are live men, and they hire a lot of help to keep things humming. They also get the newspapers to help them hustle. Last night they put a big extra ad in The Daily Press, and they hewed big hunks out of prices. The crowd began to accumulate in the corner store within an hour after The Press was out. Goods sold like wildfire, at give-away prices. Today the rush is immense, and tomorrow it will be greater. The big stock prepared is melting away so fast that an extra order was sent by wire today for more goods. Nothing but new material is sold in this sale; that's a feature of all sales at the corner store.

Of course every one knows the corner is the Babcock Building and the firm The Two Vans.

—A. Lusardi & Co. of North avenue, will tomorrow place on exhibition in their fruit store a twelve-inch alligator, which came up from the South in a bunch of bananas.

SAXON PRE-EMINENCE.

T. R. HOWLETT ASSERTS ITS RIGHT TO RULE.

Latin Religion Its Foe, and Hence an Enemy of American Progress—One God Or None, His Cry.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS: In The Daily Press of Oct 29 Michael J. Adams expresses his indignation against the cry of "America for Americans", whose only claim, he tells us, is that their "ancestors crossed the ocean in quest of right of conscience, peace and happiness". What they sought they found, and left to their children as their most treasured possession. These blessings we are willing to share with all, but to surrender to none. America, north of Mexico, is in Anglo-Saxon possession, and the Anglo-Saxons must and will govern it. "We are", says Wayland, "a patriotic and long-suffering people, but we are beginning to feel that America is for Americans, and is not to be governed by any ecclesiastic sitting on the banks of the Tiber." A few years ago the Philadelphia Inquirer said: "There should be no international difficulties between the American Republics, nor would there be if we could convert the diocesans to our way of thinking, or they could convert us to theirs. As a matter of fact, however, the Latin and Germanic races have never been able to agree since the time when the former, under Cæsar, stirred up the latter in their forest home. Irrepressible race conflict will go on, peaceably or by force of arms, until the Germanic people swallow up the Latins—for that is the end foretold by the logic of history."

Immense emphasis is given to this fact by the discovery that the Saxons derive their descent from that race to whom One mightier than man said more than three thousand years ago, "Thou shalt consume all the people which the Lord thy God shall deliver thee; thine eye shall have no pity upon them; neither shalt thou serve their gods; for that will be a snare unto thee."

The final language, civilization and religion of whole earth will be that of its ruling race. That race is manifestly the Saxon. Saxon is the lion that devours peoples and languages. Wherever the English tongue is heard it sounds the death knell of other tongues, and wherever the Saxon plants his standard it stays. We carry our "rights on the points of our swords", and "woe to the vanquished". This was the language of our ancestors when they first came in contact with the Romans on the banks of the the Allia, 388 B. C., and it is the history of their descendants, and will be until they either destroy, or permeate with their language, customs, civilization and religion all the peoples of the earth, imparting to them their character, and supplanting the original type of their own Saxon civilization and religion and Latin civilization and religion are not the same. The former is Monotheistic and Hebraic through and through, inside and out, from top to bottom. With the Saxons as with the Jews it is one God or none, and they have no representations nor images of him in their temples. This is why the Jews make us no trouble. They are the most peaceable element of our American civilization, and a valuable accession to our strength as a nation. Latin civilization and religion conflict with the Saxon and in their aggressiveness have caused strife. "America for Americans" is the battle cry of an uprising and mighty people.

THOMAS ROSLING HOWLETT.

MYSTERIES!

The Nervous System the Seat of Life and Mind. Recent Wonderful Discoveries.

No mystery has ever compared with that of human life. It has been the leading subject of professional research and study in all ages. But notwithstanding this fact it is not generally known that the seat of life is located in the upper part of the spinal cord, near the base of the brain, and so sensitive is this portion of the nervous system that even the prick of a needle will cause instant death.

Recent discoveries have demonstrated that all the organs of the body are under the control of the nerve centers, located in or near the base of the brain, and that when these are deranged the organs which they supply with nerve fluid are also deranged. When it is remembered that a serious injury to the spinal cord will cause paralysis of the body below the injured point, because the nerve force is prevented by the injury from reaching the paralyzed portion, it will be understood how the derangement of the nerve centers will cause the derangement of the various organs which they supply with nerve force

Two-thirds of chronic diseases are due to the imperfect action of the nerve centers at the base of the brain, not from a derangement primarily originating in the organ itself. The great mistake of physicians in treating these diseases is that they treat the organ rather than the nerve centers which are the cause of the trouble.

DR. FRANKLIN MILES, the celebrated specialist, has profoundly studied this subject for over 20 years, and has made many important discoveries in connection with it, chief among them being the facts contained in the above statement, and that the ordinary methods of treatment are wrong. All headache, dizziness, dullness, confusion, pressure, blues, mania, melancholy, insanity, epilepsy, St. Vitus dance, etc., are nervous diseases no matter how caused. The wonderful success of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is due to the fact that it is based on the foregoing principle.

DR. MILES' RESTORATIVE NERVINE is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by DR. MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It contains neither opiates nor dangerous drugs.

REMARKABLE CURES

Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.

I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR. PETER G. EYCK, OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:

For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

PETER G. EYCK,
Bissell, Hunterdon Co., N. J.

THE POSTMASTERSHIP.

my eyes out, neither I nor any other man could save it.

Mr. Gerber had two terms of the Surrogate. Mr. Foreyth had one term of Sheriff, and Mr. Livingston had one for Senator, and the Democrats of the county were chagrined at this departure from time honored practice. It was this, and not any action of mine, which defeated the ticket.

The matter in The Herald I did not know anything about until "Veritas" by his big marked copy called my attention to it.

Our worst enemies are often our indiscreet and pretentious friends. I have some. Mr. Martine has some, and the cutting and trading threatened in your town will not benefit either, as time will doubtless prove.

They say that I have made a mistake in the appointment of the postmaster, and for that reason they will cut me. Oh! what patriotism even though I had. Is this the kind of Democracy we have amongst us that it must be fed with office in order to make it loyal to principles of which they so loudly boast.

Some of those fellows seem to think that their vote is as big as a cart wheel, and that the votes of myself and other Democrats are only about half the size of a cent, comparatively speaking.

No man who is not himself a knave will believe in view of the facts that there was any bargain in the postoffice matter as claimed by some of the disappointed ones and their friends.

Now, if there was a mistake in the appointment whose mistake was it? Mr. W. A. Coddington, whom you had just elected in a strong Republican city by a round majority, came personally to me in Mr. Hetfield's interest and urged his fitness. He certainly ought to be considered as in a measure, at least, voicing the views of the party. A goodly number of other prominent members of the party called at my office, or at my house, personally, and while they would not write a letter or care to be known in the matter urged Mr. Hetfield's nomination. I think I had about thirty letters from prominent Democrats and business men urging his nomination, and finally I got a strong letter from V. L. Frazee, the newly elected chairman of the Democratic committee, (which I think I can take off of the files at Washington, or get a copy certified to), urging the propriety of Mr. Hetfield's nomination. Surely all of those men could not be in a "deal" to put an unfit, dishonest or unworthy man in position.

Mr. Hetfield came to Washington and requested an introduction to the Senators. Mr. Coddington was with him. I introduced them. The whole situation of the Plainfield fight was gone over. I told Senator Smith the difficulty I had in making a selection that would be best for the people and the party. He turned to me and said: "the Judge endorses him, the chairman of the city committee endorses him, and I would advise you to send Mr. Hetfield's name in at once. Do not keep a Republican in office any longer"; or words to that effect.

I endorsed Mr. Hetfield's petition at once. As soon as it was known both Mr. Hetfield and myself became the objects of gross personal attack. We were assailed in every form. It then became my fight, and I made it not so much for Mr. Hetfield as for myself. I could not afford to be discredited with the administration, by covert assault from any quarter.

This is the whole history of the tempest in a tea pot.

Sebring the Hustler.

Superintendent Charles P. Sebring of the Bound Brook Power and Heating Company has purchased through Superintendent Humpstone from the Western Union Telegraph Company part of the telegraph line that was built a few years ago by the American Rapid Transit Co. The pole line and right of way bought runs by Mr. Sebring's plant at Sebring's Mills, on through and into both the Bound Brooks, together with three cables that pass underneath the Delaware and Raritan Canal. The pole line that stands in Main street, Bound Brook, is a fine one, and the Bound Brook Company is fortunate in having such a hustler as Superintendent Sebring to look after its interests.

The Independents.

The Independent Fife and Drum Corps will have a dance in their hall, corner of North and Park avenues, Thanksgiving night. On the committee of arrangements are J. Henry Adams, Frank L. Manchester, Samuel C. Terry, Jr., William C. Force and Horace G. Adams.

Several changes have been made in the list of officers of the corps because of the resignation of Drum Sergeant David Bodine, who went to Pennsylvania. Harry C. Ackerman is now drum sergeant; J. Henry Adams, drum corporal and Frank L. Manchester, both manager and major.

PLAINFIELD'S NOSEGAY.

(From The Dunellen Call.)

A man of more than usual note, who knows electricity well,
Thought he would try to invent something to carry smell.
He knew that over the wire sound was easily transmitted,
And worked very hard until a perfect plan he submitted.

The machine was a great wonder to all in Union County,
And good Plainfielders were wondering how the inventor might secure a bounty,
So at a big bazar one night its virtues they all tested
And nickel after nickel went to the owner to offset what he had invested.

At last came up one of those characters that you would term a swell,
He asked if he might have of sweet Dunellen
a smell;
He placed within the gutta percha cup his fine
expectant nose,
And as he twisted the little crank his expectations arose.

A little grating sound was heard and then a frantic yell;
The first was made by the machine, the second
by the swell.
The cup was dropped, and to the door he quickly sped,
And all they heard him say was that something must be dead.

The inventor took the little cup as quick as quick could be,
And looked his treasure o'er and o'er for something he might see.
He proved at last, in crossing over Plainfield's city edge,
The wires had grounded in the new disposal beds.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTEBOOK.

Superintendent Maxson gave his regular Friday talk this morning. After a few introductory remarks he read the sketch of Helen Keller, written by herself. After the talk a picture of her was placed on the Kappa Delta Phi bulletin board.

The school had the strange sensation of marching into Assembly Hall without music this morning. The key to the piano could not be found at first, but was discovered in time to provide music for the singing.

A surprise today awaited the High School students, and not altogether an agreeable one to some. There was an examination in the Senior class in geometry, in the Junior class in rhetoric, and in the Third and Fourth classes in algebra.

The football practice yesterday was very successful and brought out a number of candidates. A scrub game was played in which Edgar I. Serrell '95 twice ran over half the length of the field making a touchdown each time. The tackling of W. F. Cornwell '96 and Ernest Rapalye '97 was deserving of great commendation. Webster Litteil '97, although somewhat new at the game, is showing up well in the position of centre. A practice game will be played tomorrow morning on the Willow Avenue grounds.

The Kappa Delta Phi and the Lyceum hold their regular meetings this afternoon. NINETY FIVE

ON TO MOUKDEN.

Japanese Forces Proceeding to the Manchurian Capital.

Yokohama, Nov. 2.—It is announced that the investment of Port Arthur by the Japanese forces has been completed by land and by sea, and that the forward movement of both the Japanese armies in the direction of Moukden is being rapidly pushed.

It is added that a portion of Field Marshal Count Oyama's force will attack Kinchow Asoy, which is occupied by the Chinese troops. In the meanwhile, Gen. Nodzu's advence column is approaching Fung-Whang, a fortified town on the main road between Wiju and Moukden, to which place all the Chinese troops retreated after leaving their positions north of the Yalu River.

The Japanese expect to defeat the Chinese at both places, and then unite their columns before the walls of Moukden.

ASTOR'S BIG HOTEL.

John Jacob to Build the Biggest Hostelry in the World.

John Jacob Astor is going to build on the southwest corner of Fifth avenue and Thirty-fourth street, the biggest and most magnificent hotel in the world.

It will be 350 feet long, 100 feet wide and many stories—perhaps eighteen—high.

It will overtop the huge Waldorf, by the side of which it is to stand. It will, in all probability, be the largest single edifice ever erected for the exclusive purpose of habitation.

Its equipment will be all that genius and riches can supply, and the whole establishment made a sight for pilgrimages.

FLAMES IN SOUTH OMAHA.

Working Mischief Among Big Packing Houses.

Omaha, Neb., Nov. 2.—Hammond's packing plant, South Omaha, has been gutted by fire.

A rumor is current that the fire has spread to Cudahy's big plant.

—The Plainfield Lodge, G. O. F., will hold a special meeting tonight. Two new applicants are to be admitted. At the last election the following officers were chosen: Burt Lederer, President; H. M. Kutner, Vice President; Doc. Greenwood, Secretary and Treasurer.

LEAPED TO HIS DEATH.

James Clampett Jumped from the Seventh Story of the Morse Building.

New York, Nov. 2—The falling body of a man startled pedestrians who were on Beekman street in the vicinity of the Morse Building at 10:15 this morning. He fell on his hands and knees on the pavement. His chin came in contact with the cobblestones and was completely smashed in.

His knees struck the edge of the curbstone. They were both broken. The thigh and leg bones were also shattered with the frightful force with which he fell.

The flesh on the legs was lacerated and torn and a jagged gash was cut across his chin and extended nearly to the wind pipe. Death was instantaneous. His body was limp and lifeless before anyone could reach it. The man never breathed or moved after he struck the pavement.

The body was identified by Lawyer Charles H. Dilley of the firm of Norwood & Dilley, whose offices are on the seventh floor of the building, as that of James Clampett of 27 Montgomery street.

More Than $2,000 Secured by Thieves in Perth Amboy.

The circumstances of a bold and successful robbery of the postoffice at Perth Amboy, were disclosed this morning, when it was found that some time during the night thieves had entered the building. They had succeeded in blowing open the safe and stealing $1,700 worth of postage stamps and about $400 in currency. While the interior of the building was little damaged, everything bore evidence of the force of the explosion, which had completely wrecked the safe.

There is no clue to the identity of the robbers, who are supposed to have escaped with a horse and wagon.

EIGHTY PERSONS LOST

Further Details of the Mairarapa Wreck.

Many Lives Were Saved by Two Seamen Swimming Ashore with a Life Line to Which a Life-Saving Apparatus Was Rigged—An Awful Scene on the Ship.

Auckland, Nov. 2.—Further particulars of Sunday night's wreck of the Union line steamship Wairarapa, Capt. McIntosh off Great Barrier island, on the northeast coast of New Zealand, show that the loss of life was not so great as at first reported.

Te first reports had it that 112 of the Wairarapa's passengers were drowned. It appears, however, that eighty-one passengers and forty of the crew were saved by the lines thrown ashore and by the boats of the steamer, while Capt. McIntosh, fifty-eight passengers and twenty of the steamship's crew were drowned.

The passengers rescued have arrived here. The steamship struck at midnight during heavy weather, and when a rough sea was running. The passengers were aroused by the shock and rushed in terror upon deck.

The women passengers and children were first placed in life boats, but several of the latter were capsized while being lowered. The crew then set to work constructing rafts.

There is no doubt that many more passengers would have been drowned had it not been for the gallantry of two seamen who swam ashore with a line and then hauled ashore a stout rope which was used in the work of rescue.

A young girl named Jane Williams says that she was in her cabin when the steamer struck. She heard the thud, and aroused her sister, who was sleeping. Each of the girls seized a life belt and rushed in their night dresses to the hurricane deck. Here there was an awful scene.

Here and there in the darkness could be seen affrighted passengers huddled together. Then the vessel suddenly listed and the passengers on the lower side were swept from the deck. Miss Williams said: "I and my sister climbed up the steeply inclined deck to the railing, to which we clung with all our strength. We were repeatedly submerged by the waves and were nearly drowned. The vessel pounded dreadfully, and I thought that every moment she was going to break up. I had in the meantime caught hold of a rope, which, when a large wave struck me, snapped, and I was thrown into the sea. I was unable to swim, and caught hold of pieces of wreckage. I was buffeted by the sea until I was driven, with others clinging to the wreckage, close to the cliffs. When day began to break the spectacle was appalling. I was hanging to a spar around which my hair was twisted. Nearby I saw men and women torn from the wreckage to which they were clinging and drowned before my eyes."

SCANDAL AT PULLMAN.

Vice-President Wickes' Wife Sues for Divorce.

Chicago, Nov. 2.—Mrs. Thomas H. Wickes, wife of the second vice-president of the Pullman Palace Car company, has filed a bill for divorce alleging cruelty. Mrs. Wickes says that she was married to the defendant in St. Louis, in 1871, and during their married life Mr. Wickes has repeatedly beaten and struck her; at the same time using abusive language. She tells the court that she has not lived with her husband since July, 1893, and says that Mr. Wickes has a large amount of personal property. No answer to the bill has been filed by the defendant.

Cheered Ex-President Harrison.

New York, Nov. 2.—Ex-President Harrison and a party of friends, including three ladies and one gentleman, occupied a box at the Herald Square theatre last evening. The box occupied was decorated with the American flag. On the entrance of the ex-president the audience cheered him loudly and the band played "Hail to the Chief." At the conclusion of the performance the members of the company threw the floral offerings which they had received into the box occupied by Mr. Harrison. The play was "Rob Roy."

Burned to Death at Sea.

Philadelphia, Nov. 2.—The British bark Juteopolis just arrived in port from London was the scene of a curious accident in mid-ocean, in which John Schlanter, a seaman, lost his life. During a storm Schlanter was ordered below to look after some paints which had broken loose and was warned of the danger of taking lights below. Against the advice of Captain Linklater he started down with a lamp, when some of the gases arising from this paint caught fire, burning him so badly that he died a few days afterward.

Killed Her Baby with an Adze.

Bolivar, Tenn., Nov. 2.—Mrs. Carrie Sheets, wife of George Sheets, killed her 7-year-old child with a cooper adze. A jury found her guilty of the crime but later she was sent to an insane asylum on the certificate of a physician. When the husband returned home he found the child's body in a pool of blood while the mother rocked herself complacently in a chair. She said she was seized with a sudden aversion for the child, dragged it from out of bed and chopped it to pieces with the adze.

Daly Defeats Slavin.

Buffalo, Nov. 2.—Jim Daly, formerly sparring partner of Jim Corbett, and Jack Slavin, brother to Frank P. Slavin, fought seven vicious rounds before the Buffalo Athletic club last night, Daly winning the fight on a foul. The latter had the best of the battle in the last four rounds and Slavin purposely fouled him to save himself from a knock-out.

Cash in the Treasury.

Washington, Nov. 2.—The debt statement issued yesterday shows a net increase in the public debt less cash in the treasury during October of $12,680,853. Total cash in the treasury $754,541,611.

HUNTER CLEVELAND.

The President Enjoys a Good Day's Sport in the Woods.

Washington, Nov. 2.—President Cleveland went hunting yesterday and bagged seventeen gray squirrels. He left the executive mansion as the early dawn was breaking, after partaking of breakfast, and reached Burrough's game preserve, eighteen miles north of Washington and two miles west of Colesville, Md., shortly before 9 o'clock. He plunged into the dense woods, accompanied only by his messenger, Charles Loeffler, who has been his companion on many a hunting trip, and did not emerge again until after three, when, entering the white house coupe, he reached here at 6 o'clock.

The day was clear and crisp, the game plentiful and the president enjoyed himself immensely. The woods in which he hunted abound with tall trees and many of the squirrels were killed at a height of forty yards or more.

After being in the woods several hours, the game became more timid, but the president proved himself as patient a hunter as he is a fisherman and awaited the reappearance of the festive squirrel. In true hunter's style he partook of a lunch in the woods, seating himself upon the stump of a tree.

President Cleveland brought his game home with him and directed that several of the choice squirrels be served for breakfast to-day.

Charles Loeffler, his messenger, killed eight squirrels and one partridge.

Secretary Gresham was unable to accompany the president because of a severe cold.

A GHASTLY SCENE.

Bare Bones and Grinning Skulls Crushed by Body Snatchers.

Binghamton, N. Y., Nov. 2.—One of the boldest body-snatching cases under circumstances of peculiar interest was that which happened here yesterday. Mrs. Mary Kane was found dead at her home in this city on Sunday. The coroner gave alcoholism as the cause of death. Under the laws of the Catholic church the body could not be buried in consecrated ground, and accordingly it was taken to the receiving vault of Floral Park cemetery, a Protestant cemetery, where it remained until early in the morning, when six persons, with the body in charge, arrived at the gates of the Catholic cemetery and demanded admittance of the sexton's wife, Mrs. Whalen. She called her husband, who appeared on the scene with his revolver. The party of six were armed with spades and for a time there was an exciting parley as to whether they were to be allowed admittance or not.

The sexton was finally overpowered and the gates forced and the party proceeded to bury the body in the Kane lot. In so doing they disturbed the remains of four others of the family that had been buried in the lot, making a ghastly exhibit of bare bones, grinning skulls rudely crushed in by the spades of the robbers. This done, the party made their escape. The story is the sensation of the town. The Catholic cemetery authorities will bring suit against the offenders if their identity can be established.

15,000 JAPS IN CHINA.

The Troops Build Three Bridges Across the Yalu River.

London, Nov. 2.—A Central News dispatch from Tien-Tsin says that Gens. Weh and Yeh, who were recently disgraced for cowardice at Ping Yang, have arrived at Tien-Tsin, but are afraid to proceed to Pekin because of the anger of the emperor.

The Japanese have placed three bridges across the Yalu river and 15,000 Japanese soldiers are reported to be in China.

A dispatch from Chee-Foo says that Admiral Fremantle, commanding the British fleet, has returned from Tien-Tsin, where he paid a visit to Li Hung Chang. The viceroy gravely offered to buy the Centurion and three other warships of the British squadron.

When the admiral explained that the sale of the vessels would be impossible, the viceroy persisted in his offer. The Chinese imagine that Admiral Fremantle is holding off for a higher price.

The Chinese fleet left Wei-Hai-Wei on Oct. 24 and a naval engagement is expected at any time.

FINDS THE RUNAWAY.

William Cram Refuses to Recognize His First Wife.

Raleigh, N. J., Nov. 2.—Mrs. Mary E. Cram, of this town, has written the authorities of Morristown, N. J., that she is about to sue for divorce from William Cram, who deserted her twenty years ago, while they were living in Morristown. He was accompanied in his flight by Miss Kittie Coe, adopted daughter of J. Warren Coe. A few years afterward Mrs. Cram went away and memory of her was almost lost.

Kittie Coe visited Morristown a few years ago as Mrs. William Cram. She said that the deserted wife was dead, and Cram, who was in an extensive manufacturing business, had married her.

Mrs. Cram's letter says that Kitie is received as Cram's wife in Raleigh and moves in the best society. Cram refused to recognize his first wife or their son, who is a graduate of Brown university. She will sue for divorce, mainly to establish her marriage and her son's good name.

The "Franking" Privilege.

Washington, Nov. 2.—Postoffice officias say there is no provision in the postal laws to punish members of congress or others who abuse their congressional "franking" privilege by allowing other matter than government documents to be sent out under congressional frank. While there is a law prohibiting the improper use of the mails, under the present condition of things congressmen can send out anything they choose under their "frank" without fear of prosecution.

Shell Test a Failure.

Washington, Nov. 2.—The shell test by the ordinance bureau of the navy at Indian Head yesterday was not a success. Two 13-inch shells, one of the Taylor pattern and one of the Carpenter were fired at a seven inch nickel steel plate. The Taylor shell went to pieces when it struck the plate and the Carpenter shell failed. The point, however, embedded itself and partly broke the plate. The velocity of the shells was 975 feet per second.

THEY MET BY CHANCE

Gov. Flower and Mr. Depew Create Some Fun.

They Come Together at Wellsville N. Y., to the Delight of the Citizens, Chauncey Listens To Roswell's Speech and Tells Him It Was a Good One.

Wellsville, N. Y., Nov. 2.—Governor Flower and Chauncey M. Depew met here and there was considerable fun. Mr. Depew's car was at the rear of a train standing on the western track, alongside of the station.

The governor's car passed it on the eastern track and stopped about 200 yards beyond it. Mr. Depew was on the rear platform of his car, and the governor was also on the rear platform of the car he occupied.

They waved their hats and smiled at each other. Then a big crowd of men, women and children packed themselves in behind the governor's car and he began to talk to them.

Wellsville democrats asserted that of this crowd only a small portion of it had heard Mr. Depew's speech at Baldwin's theatre earlier in the afternoon, and that when the cannon announcing the arrival of the governor had been fired, they had rushed from the theatre to the depot without waiting to hear the speakers who were to follow Mr. Depew.

Wellsville republicans, on the other hand, said that every one of them was in the theatre and that Mr. Depew had finished speaking and gone to the train some minutes before the governor's arrival. But everybody was happy and there was much enjoyment over what followed.

When the governor commenced to speak, Mr. Depew walked over to the edge of the crowd, near enough to hear what the governor was saying. Col. Williams, the governor's secretary, went out to where he was and invited him into the governor's car.

He accepted and they took seats in the observation room five feet from where the governor, with his back to them, was laying down democratic doctrines to the best of his ability, totally unaware of the proximity of his republican friend.

"Does he know that I'm here?" asked Mr. Depew. He was told that the governor did not know of is presence, and he chuckled and listened while the governor stated that he had been surprised and pleased to learn from a republican paper that morning that Chauncey M. Depew had loaned him the private car "Corsair" in which he (the governor) was traveling.

He was surprised and pleased, because he had been under the impression that he had arranged with Supt. Harrington, of the Central road to pay $40 a day for the use of the car and stock it himself, and $100 a day for an engine to draw it. A moment later he happened to turn around and he saw Mr. Depew. They started for each other, met in the doorway of the car, and shook hands heartily, both laughing. The sight delighted the onlookers.

The governor then walked into the observation room. "You made a devilish good speech, governor," said Mr. Depew.

"Thank you," answered the governor. "I didn't hear it, but I know yours was good, too."

The governor started to take a troche. "When I leave Albany," he said, "I'm going into the troche business and get up some that will do me good."

"I'll send you over some from my car that will help you," said Mr. Depew.

He again shook hands with the governor, and as he started away, said: "I wish you were running, adding, after a few steps, "but not this year."

The troches were sent over and the governor tried one.

After Mr. Depew's departure the people began to crowd in at the front end of the Corsair, pass through the rather narrow aisle and into the observation room. "We must shake hands with him," they said, and 200 of them did seize the governor's hand.

Fought Hard for Her Life.

Sandy, Lake, Pa., Nov. 2.—When Samuel Jack, who lives near Millbrook, went home from work on Wednesday evening, his wife was missing. A search was instituted and yesterday her body was found stuffed into a hollow log so tightly that the log had to be split open to remove it. The woman was still alive but in a serious condition. Her clothes had been torn from her body, and cuts and bruises on her throat showed that she had made a hard battle for her life. She had been assaulted and then placed in the log and left there to die. She now lies in a paralyzed condition.

His Suffering Ended After Using Munyon's Rheumatism Cure.

Mr. George Smith, of Tacony, Pa., says: "I suffered from rheumatism for 30 years, and had so many severe attacks that some of my joints were twisted out of shape. At times I suffered terrible pain, and, although I tried many remedies, I never obtained any permanent relief until I procured Munyon's Rheumatism Cure. The action of this remedy was wonderfully quick, and although I have only taken a small quantity, I consider myself permanently cured."

RUSSIA'S DEAD CZAR

The Sufferer's Last Night on Earth Was a Sleepless One.

PRAYING FOR HIS SOUL.

Everybody Depressed at the Russian Capital—Large, But Quiet and Mournful Crowds on the Streets. The Czarewitch Will Issue a Proclamation Declaring Himself Czar. A Conspiracy Against His Life Discovered—Several Students Arrested—Sketch of the Career of Alexander III.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 2.—The churches in Moscow and St. Petersburg have been thronged since the death of the czar with men and women praying for the soul. The streets are unusually full and everybody seems to be depressed. Near the churches many groups of weeping women congregate. The crowds are quite and mournful.

The following was the last bulletin issued previous to the czar's death at 10 a. m.:

"The czar passed the night without sleep. The activity of his heart is diminishing rapidly. His majesty's condition is very dangerous."

He died a few hours later.

It is expected that the body of the czar will be removed to the private chapel, where special prayers for the repose of his soul will be offered, and where once a day the litany will be sung in addition to chanting a requiem.

It is understood that the czarewitch will immediately issue a proclamation declaring himself czar, and all the Russian officials throughout the world will take the oath of allegiance as soon as possible.

London, Nov. 2.—According to a dispatch received here from St. Petersburg, a conspiracy against the life of the czarewitch has been discovered there.

For several days past the police have been actively engaged in arresting nihilists. Among those arrested are several students.

The police have obtained possession of incriminating documents.

Career of Alexander III.

Alexander III., emperor of all the Russias, was born at St. Petersburg on March 10, 1845. He was the second son of Emperor Alexander II., who was assassinated on March 15, 1881. Although a life, that of the Czarewitch Nicholas, stood between him and the throne, the young Alexander shared in full the scheme of education laid out for his elder brother. His bringing up was under the direction of the celebrated Count Strogonoff, who chose as private preceptor for the princes. De Grimm, the councillor of state, who had previously occupied the same position toward their uncle, the Grand Duke Constantine. De Grimm, in the teaching of the young men, made use almost exclusively of the then fashionable German methods.

But the man whose influence was to affect the life of the czar until the hour of his death was M. Pobiedonostseff, who, through his relations with the court, rose from a professorship in the University of Moscow to be procurator general of the Holy Synod, one of the most powerful positions in the empire. Pobiedonostseff became one of the teachers of Alexander and obtained a great hold upon the young giant.

A Mind of His Own.

When the Franco-Prussian war of 1870-1871 broke out the czarewitch showed for the first time that he had a mind of his own in political mattters. Alexander II. had always been friendly with Prussia. It was a tradition of his family, which had not forgotten the visit of Napoleon and his legions. Naturally the czar sympathized with the united Germans and the policy of Bismarck. But the younger Alexander showed openly that he hoped for the ments, and the siege of Plevna.

The war with Turkey began in 1877, and the czarewitch saw military service in the field. He had command of the 12th and 13th army corps, and was present at a number of big engagements, and the siege of Plevna.

Becomes Czar of All Russias.

Upon the assassination of his father, Alexander III. mounted a throne which there were few to desire. The nihilists had struck their blow with such determination that few thought that the new ruler would ever live to be crowned.

There was no want of courage about his first political manifesto, probably issued on the advice of Vladimir. It is an earlier edition of the sort of speeches that the Emperor William addresses to his soldiers and recalcitrant nobles. In the teeth of opposition he flung the claim of absolute power. "God has ordered me to hold the reins of government," was the text of state paper and proclamation. The emperor of all the Russias was not shaken in his conviction that he was the chosen of the Almighty by the recollection of the fate of his father. He believed it for himself, and that was enough.

The czar soon showed decided Pan-Slavists tendencies. General Ignatieff took the place of Gen. Loris Melikoff as minister of the interior. Pobieonostseff was elected to the high rank of procurator general of the Holy Synod. Both of these were Pan-Slavists, but from very different points of view. The appointment of M. de Giers to succeed Prince Gortchakoff, who retired in 1882, seemed to be a slight concession to the old policy of friendliness to Prussia, soon followed by the famous interview of the three emperors which took place in a castle in Poland on Sept. 15, 1884.

A Man of Peace.

It was soon apparent that, whereas the czar was willing to be personally on friendly terms with Germany and Austria, he would not meddle with western politics. He kept his hands absolutely free from the complications of the triple alliance.

In Asiatic affairs Alexander III. was aggressive. He followed a steady policy of acquisition. In 1881 he concluded with China a treaty by which in exchange for a cession of land Russia received a lump sum of money and the right to establish consulates throughout Mongolia and advance her caravans to the great wall, with the right of free trade throughout the region.

Alexander III. was no lover of war. He had seen slaughter with his own eyes in the Turkish campaign. The impressions written on the spot by the future czar have been published. They show the same sensitive hatred of human suffering, the same human kindness in the soldier, that have been his most conspicuous marks as a man, as a husband, and as a father.

Conspiracies Against His Life.

Conspiracies having in view the death of the emperor were of constant occurrence. Their discovery made necessary the most vigorous repression. Little by little the leaders were transported to the Siberian prisons or made their escape to England. One fact comforted the czar. The mass of the common people had nothing to do with them. To them he was the head of the nation and the head of their religion and was both loved and trusted.

The nihilistic tendencies of many of the universities made the overhauling of these institutions necessary. Certain ordinances with regard to studies caused great discontent. The ukase of August and September, 1887, limited the number of students and of pupils in the gymnasia by raising the fees. The result cannot be described as unsatisfactory. There can be no doubt that many of those who had come to the universities when the fees were low, after their course was over found themselves with nothing to do—fit for no business but a life of intrigue and plotting. This class has been largely cut down.

Supported Persecution of Jews.

The anti-Jewish agitation in Russia has been one of the most remarkable movements of the czar's life. There were many reasons why it should obtain his support. In the first place, it was intensely popular. The thriftless habits of the Russian of the lower ranks left him at the mercy of the money lenders. He had not reached the stage of development which brings forethought. All this was the after-harvest of the abolition of serfdom. Then, too, the czar was the actual head of the Greek church. He was an intense believer in what was to him the one true religion. His personal trust in God was the one thing which sustained him under the great load which he bore alone. Why should not what was so good for him be as good for everybody else? Here was salvation and rest. Everywhere else was death and despair. He believed as men believed in the middle ages. Therefore when his personal feeling toward Christianity became tinged with sympathy for his people's hatred of the Jews, he became a persecutor, or at least, he did not stay the hands of the persecutors.

But not only did the czar's orthodoxy affect the Jews, his other subjects felt it too. Rigorous orthodoxy was the order of the day. After a report by Pobiedonostseff of the Holy Synod a decree put in operation once more certain laws which had fallen into disuse; which, for instance, interdicted all theatrical representations on certain fast days and during lent. This was only one typical effort of the head of the church and head of the state to stem the tide of corruption in the religious life of the upper classes.

Close Attention To Army Affairs.

Alexander III. always gave close attention to his army, its organization and armament. He realized that upon its efficiency the safety of his huge empire depended. Notwithstanding the great and necessary increase in military expenses, he succeeded in placing the national credit upon a basis which it had never before reached. The national debt has been successfully converted into charges less oppressive. The best proof of the success of this difficult operation is the fact that new loans have been made upon various European exchanges with great facility.

The growth of a Russian navy has been the work of Alexander III. It was he who worked persistently to obtain a naval station south of Vladivostock, which is ice-bound for a great part of the year. The Russian warships which visited New York on the occasion of the Columbus celebration showed how successfully the emperor's wise policy in naval matters had been.

Beloved by His Subjects.

The czar had a striking testimony of the love which his people bore toward him in the demonstrations which followed the railroad accident on the Kharkoff road in 1888. The emperor, his wife and children were in the car which was among those derailed. The czar held up unaided the collapsed roof until assistance came. Though a number of persons perished, the imperial party escaped unhurt. In every part of the empire the most enthusiastic demonstrations of national thanksgiving followed.

The following are the children of Alexander III.: The hereditary Grand Duke (Czarewitch) Nicholas Alexandrowitch, born at St. Petersburg May 18, 1868; the Grand Duke George Alexandrowitch, born at Tyarskoie-Selo May 9, 1871; the Grand Duke Constantine, the Grand Duchess Xenia, born April 6, 1875; the Grand Duke Michael, born Dec. 4, 1878; the Grand Duchess Olga, born June 13, 1882.

The most important of his brothers is the Grand Duke Vladmir, born April 22, 1847. He has been a valuable counsellor of Alexander III., and will probably have a considerable part to play in the administration of the new emperor.

Murdered for Insurance Money.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Nov 2.—The board of health of Chattanooga has made the sensational announcement that several cases of child murder have been directly traceable in this city to certain insurance companies which have sent agents among the negroes to insure the lives of infants. The practice of these companies is severely denounced and the board recommends legislation which will put an end to such operations in this state.

EXPRESSIONS OF GRIEF

Messages of Condolence Sent to the Czarina.

Queen Victoria Deeply Moved—Great Sorrow in France—Daily Papers Issued With Black Borders—The News Received at the Russian Legation in Washington.

London, Nov. 2.—The Prince and Princess of Wales, who are on their way to Livadia, were at the last station this side of Vienna when they received the dispatch announcing the czar's death. The queen was not surprised as she had been informed of every phase of the czar's illness; nevertheless she was deeply moved when she learned that the end had come. She sent a long telegram to the czarina and issued to the court officials the usual instructions as to mourning.

M. Staal, Russian ambassador, has written a letter to the newspapers thanking those who have expressed their sympathy with the sorrowing Russian people or have offered aid and advice.

Paris, Nov. 2.—The first news of the czar's death came to Paris in an official dispatch to the foreign office. The dispatch was shown at once to President Casimir-Perier. He read it, laid it down, and after a long silence said: "He was France's strong and loyal friend."

Signs of mourning have multiplied ever since the news was made public. La Presse, Le Jour and Le Soir issued special editions with black borders. All sold as rapidly as they could be brought to the street. The booths and newsmen were surrounded by eager crowds struggling to buy papers before the supply was exhausted. La Presse's comment was:

"All French patriots will be grieved by this sad news. The mourning will extend throughout France. The czar was a sincere partisan of peace and a devoted friend of our country. Our sorrow is unutterably deep, but there is no reason for despair, as the heir of Alexander III. will recognize the close bond uniting France and Russia. The sorrow of France will be most convincing evidence to the son and sovereign that the union of the nations which for years has assured the peace, must remain and guarantee the peace in the future."

Copenhagen, Nov. 2.—Expressions of deep sorrow have come from all classes since the announcement of the czar's death. A memorial service was held in the Russian church. All members of the royal family were present.

Stettin, Nov. 2.—The kaiser received the news of the death of the czar while dining with the officers of the Grenadiers at Stettin. His majesty immediately wired a message of condolence to the czarewitch at Livadia.

Berlin, Nov. 2.—The foreign office and the Russian embassy did not receive the official announcement of the czar's death until 8 o'clock last evening. The Lokalanzeiger gave the first news of the event. There was little excitement, as the announcment had been expected to come at any moment for several days. Just outside the Russian embassy many copies of the paper were seized not only because the news had not been officially confirmed, but also because the vendors were raising a great uproar under the ambassador's windows. It seems as if official circles in St. Petersburg had a great interest in concealing the news as long as possible.

Washington, Nov. 2.—The czar's death brought profound grief to the Russian legation. Aside from the veneration which Russians have for their emperor, it was a personal sorrow to Prince Cantacuzene, who had before coming to this country been brought into close personal relations with the czar and had enjoyed an association with the imperial family.

It was on leaving Russia for the United States that Prince Cantacuzene saw the emperor for the last time, bidding him and the czarewitch good-by and bearing from them words of kindness and admiration for the United States. At that time the czar was in robust health, and his giant physique gave indication that it was proof against disease. This dispatch came late in the afternoon from the minister of foreign affairs:

"St. Petersburg, Nov. 1.—It has pleased our Lord to recall to him our much beloved sovereign. Emperor Alexander III. died at Livadia this afternoon, the 20th October (Nov. 1) at 2:15. GIERS."

The minister communicated the information to the state department, but owing to the absence at the time from the city of the president, it is probable that the message of sympathy and condolence from President Cleveland will be sent to-day.

WILL EUROPE BE DISTURBED?

Mr. Bayard's Opinion as to What Effect the Czar's Death Will Have.

Baltimore, Nov. 2.—In an interview regarding the effect of the czar's death upon European politics, Hon. Thomas F. Bayard, United States ambassador to Great Britain said:

"Forewarned has been forearmed with the countries of Europe in this case, I think. They knew that this great friend of peace was dying, and were prepared for it.

"I have reasons to believe and hope that the doctrine of peace which the czar has striven so hard to establish will be followed out by his successor. There was only one line of policy on this subject in Russia and that was the czar's policy. I know of no strong opposition to the peace doctrine in his ministry and do not think his death will affect the relations now existing between France and Russia or Russia and Germany. Nor will the sad occurrence result in any change in the triple aliance, in my opinion.

"In regard to his succession, the devolution of power will, I think, be carried out strictly in accordance with his policies."

Rev. Samuel Rogers Dead.

Baltimore, Nov. 2.—Samuel Rodgers, D. D., one of the best known ministers of the Methodist Episcopal church south, is dead at his home in this city. Mr. Rodgers was 70 years old and entered the Methodist ministry a half century ago.

A LYNCHING IN MOSINEE.

[Copyright 1894, by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.]

The Dimblebats were defeated, the Ripupagins were victorious, and Mosinee, like countless other towns that night, was in an uproar of jubilation such as had not been seen since the celebration of the great Dimblebat victory of 188–, after successive defeats for a quarter of a century.

Every saloon yawned like a crater and uttered noises like the mouth of hell. Laughter was loud, and now and then the shrill convulsive whoop of a drunken lumberman rose above the clamor, the trample, the clatter of passing teams and the braying of tin horns.

All the county was in Mosinee. The Ripupagins had assembled for the parade, and the Dimblebats were there to look on and jeer. It was the day after the presidential election. New York had been carried, and that settled it. The parade was hurried forward at once, and preparations for speeches and bonfires went forward simultaneously. Very little business was doing. All trade, all talk was of the election and its results.

Dan Clark, the sheriff (and a Dimblebat), was not depressed. As he sat at supper with his wife, in the county jail, that night, he said, prophetically: "Just you wait, Annie. They're goin' to pass a high tariff bill, and then you'll hear sumthin' drop. The people won't stand it."

Mrs. Clark was a small woman with a round firm face and piercing blue eyes, with little outward indication of the courage she was known to possess.

"Are you goin' out again to-night?" she asked.

"Yes. I'm a little afraid of trouble. The town is full of hands from the mills and camps, and the saloons are all open. Why? Want to go down and see the parade?"

"No; but somethin' is going on in there." She nodded her head toward the prison part of the house.

"So? What makes you think so?"

"Well, they've been pretty lively in there—singin' a good deal, and I've caught Jack and Shorty talkin' to each other suspiciously."

"Confound 'em! What do they take on to-night for? Well, I won't be gone long. I'll look in, before going down."

As they ate their supper, the far-off clanging of the prisoners' voices could be heard as they sang in their cells. It was a wild sound, but Mrs. Clark was used to it; and paid attention to it only as one might study the moan of the wind as a sign of the weather. She was almost as renowned as Dan; for once, alone, she had quelled a murderous row, and at the point of a revolver had driven six escaping convicts back into their cells. Like many county jails in the west, the building was divided into dwelling and prison by a heavy wall cutting the building through the middle. A heavy door opened from the hall of the dwelling into a main corridor running at right angles to the wall of the house. This main corridor was in turn separated from the corridor before the cells by a heavy iron grating. There were two stories of cells, and during the day the prisoners had the run of the entire prison proper.

The change from Mrs. Clark's pleasant dining-room, to this prison, was as sudden as it was gruesome. A dim light at noonday, a sepulchral light at night, a cold clammy place at all hours; badly ventilated, having that indefinable, sickening odor which becomes an intolerable horror to the sensitive prisoner; and, worst of all, nothing for the convicts to do. Their quarters were clean, in a way, food abundant enough, but no employment. Modern civilization is slow in finding its way into a county jail and almshouse. In such an atmosphere guilty men (not to mention possible innocent cases), grow sullen, morbid, bitter, even insane, and go back into the open sunlight educated to crimes. If such prisons were once excusable, they are so no longer.

As Clark rose to go into the jail he could hear the song beginning again. He listened a little, critically.

"They're all right. A little excited, that's all. They hear the noise outside, and it stirs 'em up."

He appeared to be speaking of a den of leopards.

As he opened the door, the song burst through, hollow, reverberating, thrillingly wild:

"Light in the darkness, sailor,
Day is at hand!"

These were the words, but the singers managed to give them the ferocity and abandon of a robber's glee in a resounding cove. Each man stood at the door of his cell, his face to the little grated window; thus each cell was a voice, and the iron walls vibrated like a violin.

As the door opened, some one gave a piercing whistle and instantly all fell silent.

"Hello, boys, what's the row?"

"Our evening hymn, Dan," said a voice from the open tier of cells.

"Well, don't say y'r prayers in that same key. Want the latest?"

"Yes, yes. Let's have it," shouted a half-dozen voices.

"The Rips are in it. New York goes—"

Some of the fellows cheered, others doubted. "Is it settled?"

"Well, yes. New York Herald concedes the victory."

"Well, that settles it."

"What's goin' on in town to-night?" asked one voice eagerly, wistfully.

"Parade," said Dan. "Now no more questions and don't make any more noise than is necessary."

"They're all right," he reported to his wife. "But I'll come back early. Keep your ear to the tube, and if you hear anything suspicious, send Julia down to Jim's."

* * * * * *

When he got out into the street he found everybody else there, and the procession was nearly formed. Torches were flying here and there, the bandmaster was bugling the "fall in," and the main street roared with voices, in song, in whoop, and in jest.

The electric lights sputtered, dying almost out at times, to the derisive groans of the crowd. They had but lately been put up, and every evidence of failure was hailed with joy by some, and with dismay by others.

Just behind the band Capt. Frank Willey, the master of ceremonies, had dismounted, and was arranging the boys' brigade, which was to lead. Willey was a cashier in the bank, and one of the finest men of the town, an almost universal favorite. Handsome, in his slouch hat, gold-braided coat, and his graceful dark red sash, he was a great figure in the eyes of the boys, who held their flaring torches aloft with the gesture of veterans.

The crowd around the band was so thick it forced the passersby into the gutter, and the captain was saying, as the band struck up:

"Spread out, gentlemen. Don't crowd people onto the boys. All ready!"

A figure reeled off the sidewalk, toward the captain, with a revolver in his hand.

"Damn you, you're the man I've been looking for," he said, as he fired.

The captain stiffened in his tracks, wavered a moment and fell.

"Take that!" snarled the murderer again, as he fired a last shot and flung the revolver at the captain's face—then turned and walked away.

The unexpected finds men powerless to stir, and the fifty men who saw it stood appalled, unable to cry out or move till the man had passed on into the crowds farther up the street.

Then a wild cry arose.

"Murder!"

"Man killed!"

"Stop 'im—don't let him escape!"

The hoarse cry of murder reached Sheriff Clark, who was some distance down the street, talking with the city marshal.

"Trouble, Joe, come on!" cried Dan. They rushed toward the sound of the cries. There was a struggling mass of men just ahead of the band. Curses, wild cries and commands came from the group. Another smaller, silent swarm was concentrated around something on the ground across the street. Clark and the marshal rushed into the struggling mass.

Some one yelled: "The sheriff! Stand off!" and the crowd gave way before Dan's furious strokes as he fought his way toward the center.

"Kill him! Smash 'im!" yelled voices hoarse with passion.

"Give 'im to me!" shouted Dan.

As he laid hands on the wild-eyed, pallid, struggling wretch, foam was on his lips, his teeth were clenched, his face was bloody, his neck bare. He had been knocked down and trampled upon by the mob. He clung to Dan instinctively, but remained perfectly silent.

"Get out o' the way!" yelled the marshal. "We'll take care o' him. What's the matter?"

"He's shot Willey."

A wild clamor of voices burst out together: "I saw him!" "Kill the hellion——! Lynch 'im!"

"Clear the track!" commanded Dan. "I'll take care of him. Marshal, you look after Willey. Clear the way, there!"

He rushed the panting assassin through the crowd—or rather along with the crowd—toward the jail, which was only a short distance away. The prisoner made no resistance, and said nothing. He appeared dazed. As the sheriff got a little in advance, the crowd thinned, and he hurried his prisoner faster. The curious, furious throng was divided; part remained to see what became of the murdered man, the more careless and more youthful ran along beside Dan as they had often followed a circus. Everybody thought the case exaggerated, for few had heard the shot in the tumult.

They followed, however, up to the very door, and there were several voices crying: "Lynch the cowardly son of a dog!"

"Keep your hands off," said Dan, in a significant tone, as he waited for the door to open. "The law 'll look out for this feller. Don't worry."

"The law—yes. Some damn tricky lawyer 'll git him off with ten years, just like the—" The speaker's words were lost in the mutter of assent which rose.

When the door swung close behind them, Dan turned and looked at his prisoner.

"What is it, Dan?" asked Annie. The prisoners now were perfectly silent, hoping to hear about the arrest.

"O, a little row," Dan said, carelessly. "Come in here, young feller."

The man was dressed like a lumberman, in a gay "Mackinaw" jacket, with trousers of the same material, and red stockings of felt which came nearly to his knees. He was a lithe and powerful man, with a sullen face, now that the look of mortal fear was passing from it. He was dazed and breathless, and made no resistance as Dan thrust him into a lower cell.

"What's up, Dan?" asked the convict.

"Some drunks fighting," Dan replied, in a tone that silenced further inquiry, though they knew a drunk would not be brought to the county jail. He tried all the doors of the cells to see that they were secure, then joined his wife.

"I'm going down the street again. They need me. There's five thousand men out there, half of 'em full of whisky, and Joe can't handle 'em alone."

A FORTUNATE SHOT.

How a Poor Marksman Got in One Good One.

A veteran of the Aroostook war tells a story of how good luck once favored a poor marksman, says the Lewiston (Me.) Journal. Gov. Fairfield visited Houlton and reviewed the troops stationed there as commander in chief, and of course it was the biggest kind of a military event. The Dexter rifle company had some crack shots in it, and as a part of the exercises in honor of the governor's coming, they were marched out for target practice. As they made some excellent hits (the figure of an Indian being set up for a mark) the governor expressed his pleasure in their proficiency, and said loud enough for the men to hear: "Now, I would like to see your very best marksman try his skill." In the company was a man noted for not ever being able to hit anything, and at once, in a spirit of deviltry, the cry ran along the line repeating his name in answer to the governor's call. Without flinching he stepped six paces to the front and saluted. "Where do you want me to hit him, governor?" he asked with perfect composure. "Just at the bottom of the left ear, sir," said the chief magistrate, pointing at the mark. "All right, sir." The soldier raised his gun, shut his eyes and turned his head away as usual, and fired. The men were all on a broad grin at the great joke of the thing, but when the bullet struck the mark whittling off a piece of the Indian's left ear, there was a shout that could be heard all over the township.

CLEOPATRA was a Greek, not an Egyptian, and it is supposed by some that she was of the red-haired type of women, whom the Greeks admired excessively.

WHEN FAMOUS MEN MARRIED.

Their Ages Ranged from Eighteen to Sixty-Seven—Many Happy Unions.

Raphael, Michael Angelo, Beethoven and many of the world's famous men remained bachelors, says an exchange. Shakespeare married Anne Hathaway when eighteen years old. Frederick the Great was twenty-one when he led Princess Elizabeth of Brunswick to the altar. William von Humboldt married Karoline von Dachdroeden when twenty-four, and Mozart and Walter Scott were twenty-five when they chose better halves. The musician married the charming Constanze Weber, who inspired him to write his most beautiful compositions, while the choice of the novelist was Miss Charlotte Margaret Carpenter. Dante married when twenty-six the Florentine, Gemma Dopati. At the same age Johann Heinrich Voss led to the altar the sister of his friend, Ernestina Boie. Napoleon was twenty-seven when he married the rich widow Josephine Beauharnais, and Byron had attained the same age when he gave his name to the heiress Miss Elizabeth Millbank. The Swedish naturalist Linnæus (Linne) was twenty-seven when he married, Herder was twenty-nine and Robert Burns was thirty. Schiller had passed his thirty-first birthday when he wedded Charlotte von Leugenfold. Wieland was married when he was thirty-two. Milton began his unhappy union when he was thirty-five years old. Buerger led his beautiful and beloved "Molly" to the altar when he was more than thirty-six years old. Luther chose a wife when he was forty-two and Cuflon when he was fifty-five. Goethe gave his name to Christine Vulpius when three years less than three score. Klopstock, after mourning his Meta thirty-three years, took unto himself a second wife when sixty-seven. She was a widow bearing the name of Johanna von Windheim.

Mines of Wood.

A curious source of wealth is reported by the French consul at Mongtze, in upper Tonquin. It lies in wood mines. The wood originally was a pine forest, which the earth swallowed in some cataclysm. Some of the trees are a yard in diameter. They lie in a slanting direction, and in sandy soils which cover them to a depth of about eight yards. As the top branches are well preserved, it is thought the geological convulsion which buried them cannot be of great antiquity. The wood furnished by these timber mines is imperishable, and the Chinese gladly buy it for coffins. Along the coast regions of some parts of New Jersey there are trunks of cypress trees, deeply buried in the sand, the recovery of which forms a valuable industry, the timber being used for making shingles.

BOROUGH BUSINESS.

North Plainfield Council's November Meeting.

CONSIDERABLE ROUTINE WORK.

Electric Light Discussion—The Edison Company Said to Be Not Properly Equipped to Maintain the Full Candle-Power of the Lamps—An Expert May Investigate.

All the members were present at the meeting of the North Plainfield Council last evening. Mayor Needham presided. Clerk Arnold read the minutes and they were approved after a short but ineffectual discussion as to the legal name of the ordinance "designating certain streets of the borough" which really relates to the placing of electric light poles. Councilman Neal said it was a contract and that it was absurb to call it an ordinance.

A petition was presented asking for the extension of the sidewalk at the north end of Summit avenue and the repaving of the walk already laid. A crosswalk was petitioned for on Linden avenue on the southwesterly side of Duer street. Julius J. Stahl asked that James F. Buckle, now of Warren Engine Company, be given a membership certificate. All of these matters were referred to the proper committees.

The clerk's statement was as follows:

Balances—
Borough account	$ 284.44
Fire "	521.75
Light "	53.99
Road "	471.70
Total balance	$1,331.88
Received from Magistrate Crosley	$19

Mayor Needham complained of the habit borough creditors have of waiting until the last minute before handing in their bills. The renewal of the insurance of $3,000 on Warren Engine House and furniture, which expires November 24 next, was referred with power to the Fire, Water and Lamp Committee.

An appropriation of $1,035.67 was ordered for the payment of the principal and interest of the $1,000 note becoming due December 4. A loan of $500 was ordered negotiated for the light account. On motion of Mr. Valiant the payment of the October pay-rolls was approved. The street commissioner was authorized to lay a new walk or repair the old one on Somerset street in front of the public school. The negotiation of a loan of $500 was authorized for the road account.

Mr. Lounsbury brought up the matter of disposing of the old hose-cart by moving that the Fire, Water and Lamps Committee be authorized to sell it. Mr. Neal said that there was talk in the borough of organizing a hose company. It might be well to hold the cart with the expectation of finding use for it. On motion of Mr. Valiant the matter was laid over for consideration at the next meeting.

Mr. Valiant asked about the question of putting in sewers. He said he had talked with a number of citizens in regard to beginning the work. Most of them thought the time had not yet come. One man thought that if the sewers were laid and connected that there would be just as many traps for letting sewer gas into the houses as there were connections. Mr. Lounsbury said he thought a petition was to have been presented at the meeting. Mr. Valiant said that a man he had talked with said that the people put men of advanced thought in office and expected them to bring up things suited to the best welfare of the borough. Still in the absence of petitions, Mr. Valiant did not favor an action in the matter.

Mr. Howell said that daily criticisms were being made of the borough's street-lighting. These complaints were perfectly warranted. The company had agreed to furnish twenty-four-candle power lamps and yet none of the lamps was over twenty. Mayor Needham approved of these statements and Mr. Winckler remarked that Westervelt avenue looked like a section of Egypt.

Mr. Lounsbury said he had a boy who was interested in electricity and who often went out with Clarence Brokaw. He reported that Clarence had sometimes found lamps broken five and six times in succession. Mr. Howell said this was not the company's fault, but he did object to the ten-candle lights. The company was not properly equipped. On his motion the Fire, Water and Lamps Committee was authorized to investigate the matter and if necessary to have an expert examine the lamps. Mr. Neal's motion amended this by giving the committee power to make the company come to terms.

A number of bills were next ordered paid. A recess of ten minutes was taken while F. A. Dunham explained the details of his new atlas. On motion of Mr. Winckler the purchasing of a copy of the atlas was referred with power to the Printing and Stationery Committee. The Council then adjourned.

Captain Sweeney, U. S. A., San Diego, Cal., says: "Shiloh's Catarrh Remedy is the first medicine I have ever found that would do me any good". Price 50c. Sold by all druggists.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTEBOOK.

The first of the quarterly examinations occurred yesterday, and others may be expected soon. That will mean a review of the year's work within the next few days. The Advanced Physics class is studying sound and sound instruments, and has of late been experimenting with instruments of home manufacture, which may perhaps account for some of the fearful noises that come from the science room.

The Zoology class still continues to cut to pieces inhabitants of the ocean. The Astronomy class has been at work at the various kinds of time, but has now gone back for a review of the work of the last two months. The star-gazing party that was to go out in the fore part of the week was postponed until next week on account of cloudy weather. The advanced Algebra class is in the depths of equadratics, and took an examination yesterday that probably could not have been successfully treated by any student in the school outside of the class. The Geometry class has commenced quadrilaterals. The essays of the Senior class are due Monday, and by next week it is hoped that the principals for the pronouncing match will have enough words to puzzle their opponents. The report cards were distributed Thursday to the High School pupils. Great was the delight in some quarters, and great the sorrow in others.

The Kappa Delta Phi held its meeting yesterday afternoon. The programme consisted of readings from American authors, sketches of whose lives will be given at the next meeting. The speakers and their selections were as follows: Arthur B. Crane '97, Discovery of the Hudson River—Irving; Charles B. Morse '95, Landing of the Pilgrims—Webster; Lewis Rand '96, The Bunkers Dinner—Holmes; Henry Eggerding '96, The Dead Ship of Harp's Well—Whittier; J. Hazelwood Craig '96, The Boston Massacre—Hawthorne; Ernest Rapalye '97, The Cumberland—Longfellow; George A. Horne '95, Human Sacrifices of the Aztecs—Prescott; Charles Noble '96, The Universal Bounties of Providence—Everett.

The last vacant membership in the society was filled by the election of the fifteenth member. The membership is now full, but those already members have to be careful about street attendance, else they will be dropped from the roll. In the business session, arrangements were made for a mock trial on Nov. 16 The two attorneys will be F. W. Cornwell '96 and A. B. Crane '97. The Kappa Delta Phi decided to secure a box for the Ragan lectures in Music Hall, beginning next Monday night, and attend in a body. These lectures are very popular with the High School boys.

The Lyceum meet yesterday afternoon at 4. Owing to a mistake made by a former secretary, no programme was prepared. The only business of importance that was transacted was the appointing of a committee to prepare a programme for the next month.

It looks very much as if the High School would have a football eleven after all, but now the trouble seems to be in getting some school team to play against. If the Leal School eleven cannot be put into shape, games will be secured with the Dunellens and other out-of-town elevens.

NINETY-FIVE.

NORTH PLAINFIELD SCHOOL NOTES.

The Junior class participated in a debate yesterday afternoon on the subject, "Resolved, That the electric cars are a public good". The class was divided into two divisions, and Miss Petrie, Junior class teacher, acted as judge. After a very exciting and interesting debate Miss Petrie decided that the negative brought up the best arguments and therefore had won the debate.

The eight classes on the upper floor were practiced in what was called an "emergency drill", for use in case of fire. The scholars marched to the ground floor and then returned to their rooms again in the short space of two minutes.

A Plainfield Boy's Progress.

Ralph Campbell, a member of the class of '93 of the High School, has secured a scholarship at the University of New York which he now attends. In the examinations for the scholarship, which consisted of four years free tuition and $100 cash, Mr. Campbell and another contestant received the same percentage. So the faculty decided to give each four years free tuition and $50 cash.

Besides his fine showing in his studies it is expected that Mr. Campbell will also distinguish himself in athletic sports as well, his high jump record of 5 feet 9 inches being far above the record of the University. He may also be heard from in the intercollegiate games.

Bowling.

A committee of the Plainfield Bowling Club met in Trade Temple last evening. The tournament was declared closed and arrangements were made to calculate the standing of the bowlers.

The Dunellen Club defeated the West Ends of Plainfield last night on Taylor's alleys. The score: Dunellen, 1334; West Ends, 1221.

PUBLIC SCHOOL CHANGES

Room Ready in the Wadsworth Building.

A GRAMMAR SCHOOL OF 38.

Miss Case's Class to Be Transferred from the Bryant School—The New Quarters Found to Be Pleasant.

The desks are being put down in the new school-room in the Wadsworth house, and the new school will take possession of it Monday. It is not to be a primary as was at first rumored, but a grammar school of 38 pupils, 12 or 13 years old. To make it as little objectionable as possible to the neighbors, there will be no recesses, but the morning session will close earlier than the other schools. The school to enter the new room is that of Miss Case now at the Bryant School where it was moved from the Franklin School two years ago. The removal of this class from the Bryant will give room so that the primary children that are now obliged to come only in the forenoon can come all day. The half-day arrangement is very objectionable to many of the parents and they have been anxious for the change that their children might go all day. The new room proved to be a very pleasant one, much more so than many of the regular school rooms.

NO-TARIFF IDEAS.

A Correspondent Sets Forth His Views for the Sake of Democracy.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—As a newcomer to Plainfield and a stranger to its politics, I want to express my approval of the sentiments in the letter signed "Publicist" in today's paper. If the Democratic party is to be anything more than a laughing stock and a by-word, it must stand for some principles. It existed for thirty years without principles, and did not make a success of it. It has won its present position on the issue of tariff reform, and it must continue the fight on that line. If it is brave, if it is constant, if it is aggressive, it will gradually drive out these crazy protectionist notions, just as the old-fashioned Tory protectionism has been extinguished in England. The talk about "American wages", "home markets", "duties paid by foreigners", "closed factories,", and "pauper labor" is all twaddle. The plain truth is that a protective tariff is a bounty paid to one man at the expense of another. If a man cannot run his business without calling in his neighbors to help him pay his bills, he had better give it up; if a workingman cannot earn satisfactory wages without levying a tax on other persons, he is to that extent a pauper and entitled to scant consideration. A protective tariff simply diverts the labor and capital of the country out of their natural and most profitable channels, into unnatural and wasteful channels.

I cannot, however, agree with "Publicist" about Free Trade. I favor the abolition of every particle of protectionism in our duties, and no one who admits that the Tariff should be reformed, and who understands the subject, can come to any other conclusion. It is the inevitable logical result. Tariff Reform must lead to Free Trade. One weakness of the Democratic party has been that it retained protective features in its bill. Its critics say (and justly), "If Protectionism is wrong, why retain it? If right, why disturb the present system?"

I repudiate this silly talk about Protectionism as the "American System". It is not the American System, but a system instituted and perpetuated in ignorance and knavery, and saturated from the very beginning with selfishness, fraud, and tyranny. The truly American System is that which gives every man the full benefit of his own exertions, which allows him to buy and sell where he will, which prevents him from imposing on others, and saves him from the impositions of others, which puts all men on an equal footing and lets them run the race in their own way, not holding back one to put another forward. If the Democratic party holds fast those principles it will win; if not, it will lose. A. H. A.

Plainfield, Oct. 31, 1894

Defective Stamps.

Considerable unfavorable comment has followed the arrival in Plainfield of the new two-cent stamps of the pale ink and weak mucilage variety. They have a habit of falling from the envelopes after they have been cancelled. Then the government puts two-cents-due stamps in their places and the Plainfielders pay for the letters. A letter-carrier said yesterday that 200 of such cases had been counted in Plainfield.

Hustling for "The Ensign".

"The Ensign" theatrical company, that is billed to appear in Music Hall Friday evening of next week, has in Will J. Ford an advance man who does his work thoroughly. The store fronts, awnings, in fact, all the town, were never before so thoroughly covered as by this young hustler yesterday.

"VERITAS" ASSERTS HIMSELF.

He Discloses His Personality and Says Some Sharp Things.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS: Thursday a "Young Democratic Voter" appeared in your columns. His object the denial of the charges of treachery alleged against John T. Dunn in the election of 1887, and the absolute duty of everyone connected with the Democratic party to support a nomination which was made regardless of the character and standing of the nominee.

He assumes that if "Veritas" was ever a Democrat, that he is now in a transition stage, and in his classic language, ready to "flop" to either side, if his individual will cannot be gratified.

I have resided in the State of New Jersey since September, 1862. From that time I have labored loyally and faithfully for the success of the party with which I have been identified. Partisanship has its limits. I am a simple sovereign, among the many millions of others who reside in our land. My symbol of sovereignty is the ballot, which I am permitted to cast at our elections. My conscience dictates my vote. I have stretched it for party advantage, but never until 1892 did a Democratic Congressional Convention, by its action, establish the rule that treachery to the party should be the royal road to political preferment. I voted against Mr. Dunn then, and what has be since done that I should change my action?

Throughout his district Mr. Dunn was nowhere supported more faithfully than in the city of Plainfield. The late trouble in relation to his patronage in this city is known to all. There were many aspirants, and how were they treated? Was not every candidate beguiled with words of hope to keep in the race and make his defeat more bitter?

Was not the office finally given to one, who has never pretended to do any party service, either in contribution of money or in labor?

Add to this the utterance of Mr. Dunn himself to the correspondent of The True American of Trenton and published therein, "That the situation in Plainfield had given him great concern, but that he had determined to appoint one, who would win and attract votes to the Democratic party, instead of one of that faction who were continually repelling and driving them away".

The result was the appointment of Mr. Hetfield. Against the individual I have nothing to say. But, with the published declarations of Mr. Dunn, this appointment was a gross insult to the Democratic party of the city. What was the moving consideration? Can any one say? Did Mr. Dunn fancy he could establish a "little heaven of his own" in our city, and at his own sweet will, and under the guidance of his faithful henchmen elect delegates to his bidding?

The only solution of his action is "That whom the gods wish to destroy

They first make mad".

I am one who believes that the defeat of an unfaithful nominee is for the party's advantage. That such action benefits and elevates the Democracy, and compels them to nominate candidates who shall be free from taint and reproach.

"Footprints of George Washington" is a new lecture by Mr. Ragan and is certainly most interesting. The photographic illustrations were very vivid and doubly realistic from their colors. They embraced many well-known scenes connected with the career of our country's father, as well as many that are not so widely known—both classes being very interesting. Mr. Ragan's descriptions held the attention of the audience close to the subject. He is always as vivid in his word pictures as the illustrations are in their scenic reproduction.

HETTY GREEN'S LATEST.

She Causes a Commotion in Bachelors Home.

SHE IS AMERICA'S RICHEST WOMAN.

Objected to the Course of Treatment of Her Octogenarian Husband, and Dismissed His Female Massage Attendant.

The manager of the Cumberland Apartment House for Bachelors at Fifth avenue and Twenty-second street, New York, was in a state of mind this morning for fear that the admission of Mrs. Hetty Green and her daughter, for years conspicuous residents of this city, as tenants in the house would upset the usual tranquility of his tenants.

The manager admitted that the two ladies were there. He said they had come on Wednesday night to nurse Mrs. Green's husband, Edward A. Green, who has been a constant sufferer from rheumatism for many months.

Previous to the coming of Mrs. Green and her daughter, Mr. Green had employed Mrs. Howard, who is described as a prepossessing woman of 40, and whose occupation is that of trained nurse and massage operator. Mrs. Green dismissed her.

"Mrs. Green came here," said the manager, "simply because she was not satisfied with the course of treatment that had been pursued.

Mrs. Green and her daughter occupy rooms just above Mr Green's apartments and they will remain for ten days or two weeks in any event, and possibly longer. At any rate, they will remain in attendance upon Mr. Green, who is said to be 80 years old, until he is able to able to be moved to other quarters.

Mrs. Hettie Green is one of the richest women in America, if not the richest. Her wealth is estimated at $50,000,000. It is said that when she discovered that her husband, with whom she has not been living steadily, was being attended by Mrs. Howard, she went to the Cumberland and dismissed her. She is a woman of very decided character, who, despite her enormous wealth, lives in the plainest possible fashion, usually, according to common report, in a modest boarding-house.

SAVING THE PALISADES.

New Jersey Legislators in Favor of Establishing State Protection.

The Newark Daily Advertiser published yesterday several columns of letters which were received from members of the New Jersey Legislature who had been asked to declare their attitude toward coming legislation on the subject of the preservation of the Palisades. Almost without exception all are in favor of preventing their further defacement.

Legislation will probably take the form of the appointment of a commission to consider the subject in all its bearings, and to formulate a plan which, while conserving the interests of the State in the Palisades, shall take into account the interests of property holders who will be affected by such action, and provide for practical steps toward preventing any further destruction of the rocks.

Society Gaiety at The Van.

An enjoyable sociable was given at The Van, Fanwood, last evening. The cozy club house was very beautifully decorated with flowers. The patronesses were Mrs. Anderson, Mrs. H. L. Hall, Mrs. Robinson, Mrs. Warren, Mrs. W. E. Gibbs and Mrs. Beeken.

While dancing was the amusement of the evening upstairs, progressive euchre was enjoyed on the other floor. Clarence Vanderveer, the proprietor of The Van, served an excellent supper. The guests included most of the prominent society of the neighborhood.

No Election-Day Gunning This Year.

Rabbits may not be lawfully shot until the 12th of Nov. The law says "between the 10th day of November and the 16th day of December". The courts have decided that this is not inclusive; that is to say, it is unlawful to kill game on these specific days. This year the 10th is Saturday, the 11th is Sunday, upon which it is unlawful to hunt, so that Monday, the 12th, is the first lawful day for rabbit hunting this year.

How Does Plainfield Look?

You need n't climb the mountain; he takes you there. And at the summit you stand on the rock made sacred by Washington. At your feet is spread out the panorama of Plainfield's paradise. How Plainfield looks from Washington Rock is perfectly shown on Mr. Ragan's big canvas. Join the throng at Music Hall Monday night. Miniatures of three great views are on exhibition in The Daily Press windows.

ROMANCE AND HISTORY.

Plainfield's Great Annual Educational Series Begin Next Monday.

H. H. Ragan has a warm personal friendship in Plainfield, from his delightful visits here in the past. He is one of the most popular of entertainers and educators, and judging by the way tickets for his new series are selling at Leggett's pharmacy, Front street and Park avenue, it is sure that Music Hall will be crowded at the opening lecture next Monday night.

"Footprints of Washington" is the title, and concerning it the Rockford (Ill.) Republican of Oct. 13, 1894, says: "That celebrated lecturer and traveler, H. H. Ragan, delivered an entertaining lecture on Washington last evening. The lecture was superbly illustrated with excellent stereopticon views. It is always interesting to hear about the sublime services and deeds of George Washington, and Mr. Ragan delivered a charming lecture in a manner that held the closest attention. The interesting story of Washington's boyhood days, his development of military tastes at an early age, and his distinguished services for the British in the war with France to decide the possession of the colonies were told entertainingly. Washington's romantic courtship with the widow, Martha Curtis, who became Martha Washington, was described and illustrated.

"When the great struggle for liberty was begun all eyes turned toward Washington. His magnificent generalship and sublime heroism in the unequal contest which decided the destiny of America, his wonderful perseverance in the darkest hours of the war—all these and many interesting incidents well known to every schoolboy or girl were brought out, and with the aid of the stereopticon made doubly interesting. The lecturer omitted none of the historical incidents of the life of the great soldier and statesman, and his audience went home delighted."

Mr. Ragan has omitted no local detail that will add to the perfection of the lecture. From this section he shows superb views of Washington Rock, the Harberger House, the Springfield Church, the Morristown Headquarters, and other romantic and historic places made famous by the immortal George.

After the Washington Footprints come other great journeys, and a reserved seat for the course is only $1, with 25 cents off to school teachers and pupils.

The chart at Leggett's is getting black with seats engaged.

Enthusiasm in Rahway.

A large Democratic mass-meeting was held in Rahway last evening. The opera house was crowded with enthusiastic citizens, and many representative men were on the platform. Judge Hyer of Rahway presided.

Speeches were made by Congressman John T. Dunn, candidates for Assembly Cook, Green and Clause, James Martine and others. County Clerk Oliver sent a letter expressing his regret at being kept away by illness.

Hose Company for Bull-Frog City.

The scheme most favored in connection with the use of the old hose-cart mentioned at the meeting of the North Plainfield Council last evening is the organization of a hose company in Bull-Frog City.

A frame building could be erected there and with a sufficient length of hose the residents of that city could do good work in their vicinity and in Washington Park ner-by. The fire-alarm system has been introduced there and the city water will follow soon.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

A WIFE-MADE MAN.

Everyone remarked the vast improvement in Hilton Axley since his wonderful marriage with Alice Genray. He was no longer a careless and cynical idler, but, instead, a painstaking and successful artist. The companionship and influence of that woman whose very example in forsaking a luxurious home for him was inspiring, had broadened his mind and roused his ambition; and now the whole world could see the manliness in him, where before only Alice had discerned it. He proudly maintained that she was his superior in intellect, and when men reveled in his paintings and showered laurels on him he turned to her with tender affection and said: "It is you—you have made me."

His great sorrow came in the prime of his years. Shielding their daughter from the attack of a serpent that had fascinated the little one at play, Alice herself received the sting aimed at the child. The mother's heroism was the sacrifice of her own life.

And now the wife-made man was wifeless.

The burial was in their own little garden at Cragledge, overlooking the town, the pleasant fields, the river, and the distant lake.

Sabbath vesper bells were singing in the peaceful valley. But no song, no peace, softened the bitterness of his anguish.

He pressed a last agonized and reverent kiss on the dear, dead face.

They covered it up forever.

Hilton Axley disappeared.

For the good housekeeper, Mrs. Freck, he left commission to care for the child, pledging himself to keep her in funds. Art dealer Krome from time to time displayed new Axley canvases, and sent their proceeds to Mrs. Freck. They were painted in the most hidden recesses of the mountains. Here Axley had set up his hermitage. The depths of vast canyons engulfed him about; the towering peaks were his sentinels.

Within this region of his concealment was a great cavern. It was here that Axley toiled and sorrowed and slept the years away.

At last came the time when there was no further need of his painting pictures for his daughter's maintenance. Twenty-five years before, he had written to Krome: "Never let me know of her death, but when she is happily married, or is making her way successfully by professional career, send to me the one word 'Stop'." That word had come.

Then began the work on his masterpiece. Feeling that he had done his duty to his daughter, he sought rest and solace in painting that which all these years had been his dream and inspiration.

No haste marred the execution of the work. Patiently had he waited for the years to pass, and he would not hurry now. Tenderly, lovingly, he lingered over each development of the theme. He painted the world—his world—a gray and sombre ruin. On high he set a glory—and the centre of its radiance was the angel sweetness of the loved one he had lost. The golden gleam of her ineffable loveliness went shimmering forth to gladden the heart and to lighten the burdens of man.

But—there was a cloud between.

The dark valley of ashes he called Desolation. It was there he groped about.

The cloud he called Death.

Its shadow was everywhere.

But lo, from the earth springs up a mountain. And it grows, and its towering top lifts up the cloud and bursts through into the brilliancy of the Guardian Angel's smile.

That mountain is the path of Patience, the height of Hope.

A bright beam glints downward from its dazzling peak, and kisses the soul of man, and revives his wounded spirit. That beam is Memory.

When one has toiled to the top, he has earned the plumage awaiting him at the summit. The wings of Faith are there, and carry him to the everlasting arms of Love.

The artist finished the picture, and when it was done he wept.

But She smiled on.

* * * * * * *

Civilization has at last marked these mountains for her own. Capital has built its roads, its huge hotel; and fashion peoples the place. The artist emerges from his solitude to take a curious peep into the gorgeous parlors, from a deserted corner of the verandas, at night.

The merry-makers of the house are gathered to hear a famous songstress. She appears, and there is a tumult of applause. She sings, and the melody has a strength and a sweetness that thrill the throng. But with the man outside it is more than the power of music that tightens the heart strings, that sends strange throbbings pulsing through his soul.

That voice—that form—those gentle ways—have been his in visions. That face is the face of the Guardian Angel on the cavern wall.

He stretches forth his arms through the open window, a look of piteous pleading in his eyes. He tears from his coat a rose, crushes it on his lips, hurls it to her feet, turns swiftly, and staggers down the mountain.

* * * * * * *

The young people from the hotel are exploring the mighty fastnesses, and pause to take a timid look into the yawning cavern they have found. Far within, they see a glow, and the more adventurous enter.

Among them is the singer. She has plucked from the wonderful trees at the entrance a bouquet of magnificent roses, inhaling their fragrance, and recalling the crushed blossom that an unknown hand had flung to her the night before. The others of the party drift about into side passages, but she and her escort find their way to a large inner chamber where the torches they have been carrying pale before the light of the sky through the broken roof. And here they find the picture of the artist's dream. And on the rock floor at the base of the painted mountain lies the artist—dead. His vacant gaze is towards the summit, towards the glory.

Death has been gentle in its touch, and the slumber is as fair to look upon as it is eternal.

Together the girl and her lover absorb the silent story. He marvels in his soul at the revelation of her likeness in the Guardian Angel's face, and trembles for the anguish the discovery of that likeness, and of the plain secret of it, will bring to her heart.

But she is lost in contemplation of the sorrow that must have been the dead man's lot.

It is no time for talk. It is no scene for young souls, happy in the brightness of life ahead, to dwell upon.

She lays the roses softly upon the folded hands.

Together they leave the tomb.

WALTER IRVING CLARKE.

Stringing the Lord's Fish.

Some years ago in a Maine town a revival had been conducted jointly by two churches. When the meetings were concluded one dominie put forth his best work and succeeded in getting nearly all the converts into his fold. The next Sunday the other parson felt that the circumstance need a word of explanation so, looking down at the handful of converts in his congregation, he said:

"Brethren, it doesn't make any odds who strings the fish—the Lord knows who caught 'em."

Her First Attempt.

"And what a surprise it will be to dear George," she was saying to herself, "It fits lovely, and I mean to make all my own things after this and save all my dressmaker's bills. It isn't every man has such a wife. I'll wear it to the progressive euchre club to-night; I know not another single woman will have a new thing on. I'll just sew in this last sleeve, and I'll have it on when George comes home, and——"

There was a shriek and a fall of 127 pounds among the sofa cushions. She had made both sleeves for the same arm.

A Unique Dinner Service.

Mrs. John W. Mackay, whose magnificent jewels have excited world-wide admiration, if not envy, has, perhaps, the most unique silver dinner service made. Its history, at least, is distinctive, if its form and decorations are not. It is said to be worth $196,000. Mrs. Mackay furnished $75,000 in weight of pure silver, and then paid $121,000 for the work done upon it.

ETIQUETTE IN WASHINGTON.

Senator Edmunds Was Authority on the Delicate Subject.

The wife of a new senator once told me that she was determined to make no social mistakes, so—wise woman that she was—she asked Senator Edmunds, who she knew was thoroughly conversant with every detail of official etiquette, by reason of his long career in the senate, if it was not incumbent upon her to make her first visit to the wives of foreign ministers, says Kate Field's Washington. He replied:

"Certainly not, madam; a senator never makes the first visit upon a foreign minister."

So, thanks to her good sense in consulting an old senator, this lady did not make the mistake that a few less wise new senators' wives have done of making first visits, when etiquette required that they should receive them. Of course, as the senate has increased in size the last few years, it can hardly be expected that foreign ministers should call upon new senators, but they ought to upon the old ones and upon others whom they wish to know.

I think the charming wife of one of the diplomats has adopted a very wise rule, as she remarked to a senator's wife to whom she had just been presented: "I know it is my place to call on senators' wives, but I wait until I meet them, and I shall now give myself the pleasure of calling upon you."

If the ladies of the diplomatic corps would follow the lead of this popular lady, they would avoid some of the mistakes that they now make in our official etiquette.

The strength of a brick arch having a span of 13 feet 1½ inches and a rise of 1 foot 11⅝ inches was recently tested at Beaue, France, with a view to determine the suitability of such a construction for a service reservoir now being built there. The bricks measured 11.8x5.1x1.2 inches, and were laid flat, with a joint of cement mortar 0.4-inch thick between them and an 8-10-inch layer of mortar outside. A section 2 feet wide was built on rock abutments and loaded with 820 pounds per square foot, which load was carried without any signs of failure for eighteen hours.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 4. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—How to keep the Lord's day.—Mark ii, 23-28.

The subject of how to keep the Lord's day is always an important and an appropriate one. There are perhaps few more practical questions before the church today of greater importance than the proper observance of the Sabbath day. As the Christian finds his final guide in all matters in the teachings and actions of the Lord Jesus Christ, we can do no better than study these in relation to the Sababth day. In looking at the example of Christ in reference to the Sabbath we learn:

1. Christ warns us against a merely external, ceremonial observance of the Sabbath day. This is the great lesson of the Scriptures quoted in connection with the topic. The scribes and the Pharisees find fault with Christ and His disciples because they plucked and ate the grain in the fields on the Sabbath day. There was no sin in the plucking and eating. This was allowable by the Mosaic law. They did not therefore complain because of that, but because of the day upon which it was done. But Christ rebuked and answered their charges. He taught that the needs of humanity transcend any laws or traditions that may be connected with the observance of the Sabbath; that works of mercy and necessity are allowable even when the ordinary works of life are not so. Let us heed this warning. Let us have the true Christ spirit of Sabbath observance, placing more evidence upon the spirit than upon the letter. It is very often that by an opposite course Christian people themselves arouse opposition to the Sabbath day. We must guard ourselves against this danger.

2. Christ taught that the Sabbath is to be a day of worship to God. This He taught by His example. The Sabbath day found Him in the temple worshiping God and instructing the people in godly things. Thus are we to keep this day—keep it sacred and holy as a day upon which we assemble to worship God in His holy sanctuary.

3. Christ taught that the Sabbath was made for man. It was made for his good—not for him to do as he pleases upon it. It is for our good to worship God. It is also for our good to rest from worldly employments and recreations. Thus only can we truly worship God. Thus only can we do our life work best. We should therefore keep the Sabbath as a rest day.

Bible Readings—Gen. ii, 2; Ex. xvi, 23; Lev. xxv, 3; Num. xv, 32; Deut. v, 12; Neh. x, 31; xiii, 15; Isa. lviii, 13; Jer. xvii, 21; Ezek. xx, 12; Luke vi, 5; I Cor. xvi, 2.

The Reformed Church.

The following are the statistics of the Reformed church, known as the Old Side Covenanter, as presented at the recent meeting of their synod: There are 12 presbyteries, an increase of 1; 119 congregations, a decrease of 3. The number of communicants is 9,787, being a decrease of 87. There is also a decrease in the number of Sabbath school scholars. The presbyteries that report a net increase of communicants are Rochester, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Kansas and Colorado. Those reporting a net loss are New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, New York, Ohio, Lakes, Illinois and Iowa. Vermont presbytery reports the same as last year. Only 43 congregations report a net gain. The number of ministers has increased from 107 to 109.

Advertise Religion.

But I wish to suggest that there be more work accomplished by local societies through their press committees. Advertise religion. Why not? The world finds that the quickest way to push forward an enterprise is to advertise it. As long as there is nothing wrong in the method, why not use it in promoting the enterprise of Christian Endeavor? Next to a consistent life, I believe, the best advertisement of Christianity is Christian literature, and good literature committees should constitute themselves advertising agents to bring Christian literature publicly before the public.—John Willis Baer.

Medal For an Endeavor Worker.

One of the most active and successful of English Christian Endeavor workers is Rev. W. Bainbridge of the Methodist New Connection. Christian Endeavor Notes.

The Christian Endeavor movement is not free from faults and dangers, but misunderstandings of its motives and misrepresentations of its methods will not remove them.—Interior.

One little Floating society on shipboard reported holding 140 services on board, attending 50 on shore and giving $16 in benevolence.

At Montreal the Reformed Church in America reported 306 Christian Endeavor societies; this year at Cleveland, 388.

A YANKEE DUCHESS.

THE WIDOW OF MARLBORGUGH REDUCES HER RANK.

Takes a Third Chance in Matrimony. The Troy Girl Who Repaired A Lord's Depleted Estates and Was Received by Royalty.

The American Dowager Duchess of Marlborough whose engagement to Lord William Beresford has been reported from London, was the second wife of Charles, the eighth Duke of Marlborough. Originally the Duchess was Miss Lilly Warren Price, being the daughter of Commodore Cicero Price of the United States Navy. In 1880 she went from her home at Troy N. Y. to visit some relatives at Washington. She was then a young woman of exceptional beauty. The clearness and fairness of her complexion won her the sobriquet of "The Pearl." In a very short time Miss Price became the leading belle in Washington society.

Among the first persons she met socially were Andrew Gordon Hamersley and his son Louis C. Hamersley, of N.Y. city. Both father and son fell in love with the beautiful Troy girl. The father gave way to the son, and Miss Price became Mrs. Louis Hamersley. In 1883 Andrew Gordon Hamersley died, leaving a fortune estimated at $7,000,000, and a very peculiar will. He gave the son the use of the fortune for life, and stipulated that the son should will the money according to directions left with the family lawyers. The will was then probated. To the widow of Louis C. Hammersley was given the immense fortune, and at her death, all was to go to several New York charities, unless J. Hooker Hamersley, a cousin, should have at that time a male heir. J. Hooker Hamersley was then a bachelor, but within a year he married Miss Margaret Willing Chisolm. J. Hooker Hamersley now has two children, the second being a boy. Because of the peculiar nature of the will of the elder Hamersley the son of J. Hooker Hamersley has been called "the seven million infant."

In 1888, after five years of mourning, the widow of Louis Hamersley was married to the Duke of Marlborough at the City Hall by Mayor Hewitt.

Mrs. Hamersley was 30 years old at the time of her marriage to the Duke. When she married him the Marlborough exchequer was badly depleted, and the Duke was loaded down with debts. The Duchess paid the debts of her husband and spent several hundred thousand dollars in repairing the Marlborough seat, Blenheim Castle, Woodstock, Oxford. The repairs on the roof of the castle alone cost the Duchess $100,000.

In November, 1892, the Duke of Marlborough died. His death was attributed to a strange circumstance. The Duchess had been suffering from severe neuralgic pains in her head, and used a liniment containing a great deal of chloroform. The Duke, in bathing her head inhaled the fumes of the chloroform. He afterward complained of feeling ill. The next morning he was found dead in his room. It was generally believed that the Duke's heart trouble had been aggravated by the chloroform.

IN COMMUNION WITH NATURE.

John Burroughs, who has gone to live in a little farming village on the Hudson, walks down to the West Shore station at 7 o'clock each morning. As the naturalist was striding along the other day he was waylaid by an interviewer, who had reached the village at half-past six and waited. Burroughs wore neither coat nor vest, his garments bore the marks of sun and weather, and his shoes were dusty.

The two walked to the farm and spent the day together, and Mr. Burroughs talked, of course, about the skylark and the bobolink, the oriole, wood thrush, and marsh hawk. He referred, too, with satisfaction to his fruit growing. "I have several wealthy neighbors," he says, "and they grow fruit, too. They say they can't see how I can make anything grow—they can't." John Burroughs makes money; he grows "fine fruits and choice kinds, and markets it early." During the grape season he pitches in most seriously, losing "in weight about ten pounds a month."

The naturalist is an expert accountant and his services are in demand by bankers. He has been asked, too, to write school books "to help children to love nature;" he decided he would only create a new task and that there would be no good in that. Then he began to talk about teaching; like every other man he has his own views on the subject. "Go to nature rather than to books," he cries, and is willing to put the theory to test. Once, while in a town where there is a college for women, Mr. Burroughs announced he would give a walking lecture the next morning; by 5 o'clock "there were forty or fifty girls on my doorstep, a great pool of girls there bound not to miss their walk. When I heard them whispering and moving about, out I came, and we started, they all crowded after and stepping on my heels all along, they were so anxious to hear everything I said. But that didn't matter—I had stout shoes on!"

Think of that; a whole collegeful of girls rose at dawn to go for a walk with an old gentleman, merely because what he said would be interesting. Let the young men roll that over in their minds.

The light is dying out on field and wold;
The life is dying in the leaves and grass
The world's last breath no longer dims the glass
Of waning sunset, yellow, pale and cold.
His genial pulse, which summer made so bold,
Has ceased. Haste, Night, and spread thy decent pall:
The silent, stiffening Frost makes havoc; fold
The darkness over all.

—Bayard Taylor.

ASTRIDE THE BIKE.

A NEW DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE BY FAIR CYCLISTS.

Trousered Wheelwomen, Angered at the Treatment they Receive from the Men of Creation, Threaten to Carry Revolvers, and Police Whistles, and to Use Them too.

There was an exciting meeting of the the Women's International Cycle Club in New York the other day. The subject discussed (and to an extent the "dis" could be omitted) was man of the bad, gibing and ungallant species. Mrs. Hollahan and Mrs. Bell made some remarks reflecting upon masculine haters of bloomers, and then a pretty little woman, slightly built, with fluffy brown hair, and big blue eyes arose and told her tale of misery.

"I was going over the 100th street just yesterday," she said, "when a beast of a man up on top of a big coal wagon, with his face all black, yelled at me. 'You bet if I was your husband, you crazy idiot, a-scaring my horses, I'd make you do something else than ride around like a man on a blasted bicycle.'"

Tears came into the young woman's eyes as she finished her tale. She was succeeded by one young woman after another, all with stories of injustice.

Mrs. Hollohan waited patiently until they had all finished, and then, like Mrs. Bell, she asked, "What shall we do about this?" Mrs. Bell rose again, and every one kept quiet while she spoke.

"I just tell you," she said, "when any man makes a remark at you, and keeps on insulting you, why, if he is worth the attention dismount from your wheel and slap him real good right in the face. If the man ain't worth slapping, why, of course you have to let him go. I was the second woman to ever wear bloomers, and I have had some experience. I have always found that when you slap a man once real hard he will let you alone."

Then she sat down with a determined shake of her head. Of course this courageous speech caused much excitement and hand clapping. As soon as it had subsided, a small, mild mannered woman arose, and with a wave of her hands made a speech advocating the use of revolvers, knives and other gore-letting instruments. The proposition had different effects upon the different members of the club. Some turned pale, others seemed fired with a burning desire to slaughter the next man who shouted at them, while others were too astonished to approve or disapprove.

A long and heated discussion followed upon pistols and knives and whether the police would allow them to carry weapons. It was finally ended by Mrs. Hollahan rapping for order and giving the club a severe talking to about the silliness of the idea of carrying weapons. She said that if such a discussion should reach the ears of their enemies, the anti-woman bicyclists, nothing would please them better and that they would be ridiculed by every one.

Some of the members looked upon their President admiringly, while others were not ready to drop the fascinating topic of pistols and other blood-curdling implements. Mrs. Bell was heard to murmur:

"Well, I've got a pistol and I am going to carry it."

A Sun reporter called upon Mrs. Bell to ask about the pistol she carried.

"Now, really, you don't suppose I would have a real big pistol, with bullets in it, do you?" she asked in answer to a question as to what make of revolver she preferred for bicyle use. "I mean a little ammonia pistol—one of those you squirt at a dog to make him quit biting at your feet when you are riding."

"Oh, you don't carry a gun, then, do you?" said the reporter.

"Certainly I don't," replied Mrs. Bell, "and I think it just horrid for the papers to say I do."

Mrs. Merry, the most enthusiastic member of the club, says she has reduced her weight from 238 pounds to 210, her present weight. She believes in carrying a whistle, and when asked about it, said:

"Why, yes, I have got a policeman's whistle and I am going to use it whenever I need a policeman. Why, just last week I was coming down West Boulevard when a boy deliberately threw a large stone at me and hit me with it, too. Oh, but didn't I whip him, though! I just got down from my wheel and grabbed him and beat him until he yelled for mercy.

"These ruffians who drive wagons are the worst, though. They yell at me every time I go out. I know I am stout, and that my bloomers made me look stouter, but I like them, and am going to wear them as much as I please. A few days ago a man insulted me and I went around to the West Sixty-eighth street police station and complained about it, and told the Sergeant I was going to get me a police whistle and use it. He told me to go ahead, that it was all right and I am going to do so."

THE SUN'S FASHIONS.

WOMEN'S FANCY LIGHTLY TURNS TO FASHION'S CHARMS.

Endless Variety of Designs. Magnificence in Trimmings and Artistic Combinations in Colors. Some of the Gowns Seem Very Simple, but the Bill Dispels the Illusion.

The evolution of fashion, from the earliest to its latest phase of development, is an interesting study in art for those who are willing to see that the tendency in dress is toward artistic reform. Let those who clamor for "dress reform," as represented by an ugly, unbecoming, but possibly comfortable costume, reflect on the changes, improvements and facilities for dressing well, and sensibly, too, which have been given to women within two decades, and they will have no need to treat fashion with contempt or make themselves conspicuous by being out of it. The whole fabric of fashion is an art, and those who work at designing must be in a sense artists or they are not successful. Never has there been such variety in designs and materials, such magnificent trimmings and artistic combinations of color, or such elastic possibilities for exercising individual tastes within the limit of fashion.

Every skirt is full, but the extreme fullness, which is eight yards around, is avoided in most cases except for evening dresses. In the house, with a little train added to give height to the wearer, the extra fullness is very effective.

Street skirts measuring five yards at the bottom, fitted closely at the hips, and arranged in full godet plaits to give them a pretty sweep in the back, are the most popular of all. Skirt trimming is chiefly confined to a narrow band at the bottom, but an occasional panel of velvet, lace, or embroidery is seen. Some eccentric skirt decorations appear, but they are the exception and not the rule. One, for example, is a double row of black silk bows lined with white, extending directly down the back and front of a skirt in continuation of the same on the bodice in a smaller size. Perfectly plain skirts cut in the new generous plan of fullness are very much worn, especially for evening dresses. Now and then a double skirt is shown, but it is in the form of a full, all-around basque which is fitted to look like a portion of the bodice and has the appearance of a long coat.

In bodices there is not much change, except in the matter of fulness; they are still so intricate in design and elaborate in decoration that they require an expert hand, as well as perfect taste, to make them a noticeable success. If you have a basque at all it must be supplemented by a waistband or sash. The most popular bodice is round, or extended a little below the waist line, and finished with narrow folds or a girdle of beaded trimming.

A stylish model for a fancy silk waist has double puffed sleeves and a wide revers-like collar, which is square in the back and trimmed with a bunch of embroidery and a ruffle of silk.

A promenade costume of Russian blue cloth has a narrow band of paler blue cloth thickly studded with beads around the skirt, and the yoke and epaulets are of the brighter shade bordered with the same band. The zouave is of Russian blue with lace covered revers.

Another model is carried out in dark olive cloth, and the bodice is cut to form a full Greek zouave depending from a yoke of shot velvet in the red and bronze shades, which are also used for the waist under the jacket. The embroidery in the yoke is of dull gold mixed with aluminum.

Two pretty evening gowns are given, one of pale turquoise blue moire faintly shot with rose pink. A border of pale pink roses with a fringe of buds trims the skirt and the neck of the bodice, which is of white chiffon, made full, and draped in a novel manner over the shoulders. The waistband if of guipure lace.—N. Y. Sun.

Vanity

is a virtuous vice. The world is better for it. It makes men ambitious—and it makes women careful of their personal appearance. It doesn't take much money to keep well-dressed now-a-days. For Assemblyman, Somerset County—ANDREW LANE.

The fame of Gen. Charles E. Hooker having preceded him to Plainfield, voters are eager to hear him in Reform Hall Monday night.

Every Democrat who has the interest of the party at heart, and every leader of every faction, is invited to be present at Hipp's Hotel, Somerset street, tonight at 8.

Congratulations keep coming, The Bound Brook Chronicle remarks: "The Plainfield Daily Press now comes out as eight-page paper, the size of the Chronicle. It is a newsy sheet and deserves the success it has attained."

The Somerville Democrat has a good eye. It says: "The Plainfield Daily Press has enlarged to eight pages. This is one of the brightest and best dailies that is received at this office. May success attend it in the future as in the past!"

The Daily Press was the first to announce that the whilom mayoralty candidates, Messrs. Ginna and Fisk, were joining in working for Mr. Gilbert's nomination, and now it is the first to announce that the powers that be have settled that Mr. Gilbert must stand again. Ex-Councilman Spangenberg is quoted as saying that next Monday he would come out with a letter declaring for Mr. Gilbert and urging that both parties unite on him for Mayor to perfect his work on the sewers and to promote his rapid-transit extension projects.

The estimate of a leading Democrat politician of Trenton, considered conservative and fair, is that the New Jersey Democrats will certainly elect four of the six Senators, possibly five, which, in the former case, would make the Senate consist of eight Democrats and thirteen Republicans. The Democrats will, he figures, probably elect at least thirty-five of the sixty members of the Assembly. This will give the Democrats a majority of five on joint ballot, and so secure the election of a Democratic United States Senator.

To the discerning Elizabeth Herald thanks are given for the following pleasant compliment: "Our esteemed and valued Democratic contemporary, the Plainfield Daily Press, which has always been 'firm in the right cause', shows indubitable evidences of deserved popularity and consequent prosperity. It has enlarged its size and materially increased its appliances for doing Democratic good in Plainfield and the county. It is now an eight-page journal, the biggest and the best of the Plainfield dailies. With increased business—result of Democratic tariff reform—and a Democratic government assured, The Daily Press is destined to go onward and upward in its advocacy of the greatest good for the greatest number."

—Ragan is coming.

—Jennie Behl died of heart failure in her partner's arms while waltzing in Jersey City last night.

—The Coachmen's Beneficial Association will meet at Mr. Fisk's stables, Sixth street, at 8:30 this evening, to act on the death of their brother member, John Kyle.

—In Elizabeth today two Plainfield prisoners who pleaded guilty were sentenced. George Watson was fined $5 for stealing shingles and Comekl was sent to jail for ten days for stealing planks.

Use it in Time.

Catarrh starts in the nasal passages, affecting eyes, ears and throat and is in fact, the great enemy of the mucous membrane. Neglected colds in the head almost invariably precede catarrh, causing an excessive flow of mucous, and if the mucous discharge becomes interrupted the disagreeable results of catarrh will follow, such as bad breath, severe pain across forehead and about the eyes, a roaring and buzzing sound in the ears and oftentimes a very offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles.

Affectionate Tribute to the Memory of Dr. Albert Utter.

(Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, in The Sabbath Recorder.)

Albert Utter, M. D. was born at Unadilla Forks, N. Y., November 25, 1818. He died at Plainfield, N. J., October 15, 1894. He was called suddenly,—heart disease, almost instantaneously. His health had been much impaired for several years, and all knew that he was likely to be called with little warning. His friends have comforting evidence that he was ready for such a "going hence" and that he was not as one overtaken or unprepared. Dr. Utter's early life was spent at the place of his birth. He came to Plainfield in 1844 where he read medicine with the late Charles H. Stillman, M. D. He graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York city, and commenced the practice of medicine in New London, Conn., in 1847. A few years later he spent one year in California, and returning, opened a Hydropathic Sanitarium in Plainfield, N. J., in 1854, which he conducted until the demands of the civil war drew him into the service of the country He enlisted in September, 1862, and was mustered out in August, 1865. He held the position of assistant surgeon with the rank of first lieutenant. His service was mainly with the army of the Potomac. He participated in battles at Fredericksburg, Rapidan Ford, Brady's Station, and in many skirmishes. He frequently united the duties of chaplain with those of surgeon.

At a reunion of his regiment at Rocky Point, R. I., this year, many grayhaired survivors bore testimonies to the value of his services to them as a Christian surgeon, who rebuked their wrong doing and cared for their wounded bodies. The Veteran Association of First Rhode Island Cavalry sent an official letter to Mrs. Utter, after his death, expressing deep sympathy, and closing with these words: "Comrade Utter, wearied by his cares and suffering, has taken his lamp and retired to his chamber for rest. We shall meet him in the morning, where the 'wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest.'" After the war he he was in the West—Chicago, Ill., and Milton, Wis.,—for five years. He returned to Plainfield in 1871. Declining health gradually drew him from the greater activities of life, and for six years past he has borne the weight of increasing invalidism.

Dr. Utter was baptized by Elder John Greene and united with the church at Leonardsville, N. Y. in his boyhood. He transferred his membership to Plainfield in 1844, and later to Waterford, Conn., and Milton, Wis., during his comparatively temporary residence at those places. He reunited with the Plainfield church in 1872 from whence he passed to the church above.

The instinct of the reformer was prominent in Dr. Utter. He was one of the first to undertake whatever he deemed to be for the best interests of society. During his life in Connecticut he organized a literary society, which continued for many years, and was a source of great good intellectually and socially. He pioneered the work of musical culture in Plainfield, was conductor of the first musical society, and of the first public concert in that city. He was especially efficient in all matters connected with church music; this made him chorister for 35 years, 19 of which he held that office in the Plainfield church. He was also a teacher in the Sabbath-school in Plainfield for more than 16 years, and a Sabbath-school worker in other churches where he resided. During a recent attack of heart trouble, when he thought the end near, he said, "Tell the church to hold the banner high". He was at the morning service on the Sabbath but one preceding his death, and at the close of the service expressed himself to a friend in a manner in keeping with this last message.

Dr. Utter was a "radical" by nature, an enthusiast in the early days of the anti-slavery movement, and an especial promoter of the Reform Club, temperance work in Plainfield, and of similar work elsewhere. The suddenness of his home going accorded with his wishes. The final services were held at his late home on the evening of Oct. 17. His dust rests in River Bend Cemetery at Westerly, R. I. Let it be that all those to whom this notice recalls memories of him heed the message, "hold the banner high".

REMARKABLE CURES

Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.

I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR. PETER G. EYCK, OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:

For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

MOUKDEN THE GOAL.

Japanese Forces Expect To Unite Soon Under Its Walls.

Shanghai, Nov. 3.—The native papers announce that the Chinese troops have retaken Kiulien-Cheng after heavy fighting. The Japanese are said to have been driven out of the place with the loss of 3,000 men. It is reported on good authority that the Japanese are leaving Port Arthur and its vicinity and that the troops of Japan, which have been operating against that place, are proceeding to join the main body of Japanese troops, advancing upon Moukden.

Yokohama, Nov. 3.—The second Japanese army landed at a point four days' march from Kinchow, on the gulf of Liautung. A battle is expected shortly.

It is announced here that the investment of Port Arthur by the Japanese forces has been completed by land and sea, and that the forward movement of both the Japanese armies in the direction of Moukden is being rapidly pushed. It is added that a portion of Field Marshal Count Oyama's force will attack Kinchow, which is occupied by the Chinese troops. In the meanwhile General Nodzu's advance column is approaching Fung-Whang, a fortified town on the main road between Wiju and Moukden, to which place all the Chinese troops retreated after leaving their positions north of the Yalu river. The Japanese expect to defeat the Chinese at both places and then unite their columns before the walls of Moukden.

Kinchow is on the easterly side of the Kwang Tung peninsula and is about forty miles northeast of Port Arthur.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The Plainfield Bicycle Club will have an election-day run. The start will be from the club-house at 9:15 a. m., and the route to Metuchen, to New Brunswick, to Old Bridge, where dinner will be had.

Muhlenberg Hospital.

Muhlenberg Hospital is in urgent need of money. The balance on hand at the time of the annual meeting in May last was soon exhausted, and, but few contributions having been received since that time, the Hospital is now in debt about $700. In addition to this the new heating apparatus, which has become absolutely necessary, will probably involve an outlay of about $800.

The Finance Committee appeal to the people of Plainfield for contributions to relieve the Hospital from its embarrassment.

An annual payment of $200 will endow a bed; a payment of $100 at one time will constitute a life member, and the annual payment of $10 a subscribing member. Some yearly contributors of from $10 to $100 each are already enrolled. A large increase in the income of the institution is, however, greatly needed.

Donations and annual subscriptions will be gratefully received by any member of the Finance Committee, or by the Treasurer, George H. Goddard, No. 205 East Ninth street, to whose order all checks should be drawn.

GOOD NATURED POLITICS.

Gov. Flower Does Not Like Chauncey Depew's Troches.

Owego, N. Y., Nov. 3.—A great throng greeted Gov. Flower upon his arrival in this city, the home of T. C. Platt, and it was fringed by many carriages and country wagons. J. Sloat Fassett was at the station waiting for a train. When invited by Col. Williams to meet the governor, he laughed and said he didn't care to face that crowd. The governor, who was exceedingly hoarse, upon being introduced by George S. Leonard, a strong Cleveland man, and after leaning over to shake hands with a stout lady who said she was a democrat spoke as follows:

"I have just taken one of Mr. Depew's troches and judging from the effect on my voice I suspect that his motive was to prevent my making any speeches at all along the route which he has just left. I had a visit from Mr. Depew yesterday on my car at Wellsville and just as he was about to leave some democrat in the party told him not to make too many votes for Morton, and Mr. Depew shouted back, 'Oh, I am not making any votes, I am only making people laugh.' Since leaving Depew at Wellsville I have stopped at most of the places where he had been and I have come to the conclusion that he is an honest man. At every place where he had spoken. I have found republicans who have said that this year they were going to vote the democratic ticket. As nearly as I can judge that was all that Depew did on his way up the Erie road—make people laugh, not win their votes. Nobody can make people laugh more successfully than Chauncey Depew, but I predict that when the election returns from the southern tier are counted next Tuesday he will wish he had turned his attention to making votes instead of laughter."

As the train pulled out toward the east the train which Mr. Fassett had taken started west. He and the governor waived their hats at each other and the crowd cheered. At Union, which is not yet a metropolis, the governor talked to the people much as he might have talked to a couple of friends in his parlor and they liked it.

OUTRAGE AGAINST BRITISH.

Reported Burning of the Consulate at Callao, with Murder.

Victoria, B. C., Nov. 3.—The flagship Royal Arthur and four other ships of the British squadron have been ordered to Callao, Peru, at once. The British consulate at that place has been taken possession of by revolutionists and the consul made a prisoner. His wife and daughter have been killed and the consulate has been burned to the ground.

The flagship left under full steam. Admiral Stephenson is on board.

London, Nov. 3.—Inquiries made at the admiralty and foreign office show that no orders have been issued for the dispatch of British warships to Peru from Vancouver or elsewhere, and it was asserted that no information had been received at those departments of revolutionary trouble in Peru.

Washington, Nov. 3.—The British embassy here has received no information yet of the reported sacking of the British consulate at Callao. It is said at the embassy that the ambassador would not be officially notified at once of such an occurrence in South America, in the ordinary course of events; that it would be reported directly to the foreign office. The British consul at Callao is Alfred St. John. He is of a family long identified with the diplomatic service, and has been stationed at different Peruvian posts for ten years past.

HILL AT AUBURN.

The Senator Given a Grand Reception by the Democrats.

Auburn, N. Y., Nov. 3.—Senator Hill was given a magnificent reception last night by the Cayuga county democracy. Before he left his rooms for the meeting a large number of people called to pay their respects. The streets were alive with people and Auburnians witnessed one of the most magnificent pyrotechnic displays it has seen for some time. Over 15,000 people lined the streets along the route to the rink while Senator Hill was being escorted there at 8 o'clock by several democratic clubs and bands. He was tendered a grand reception as he appeared upon the stage, the rink being crowded to the doors with over 3,500 people. It was evident throughout the meeting that the enthusiasm of the democracy of Cayuga had broken wide open, and Senator Hill was vigorously applauded frequently during the progress of his remarks.

Washington Smallpox Scare.

Washington, Nov. 3.—Precautions are still being taken at the interior department for the prevention of smallpox. The department will be closed to-day for another thorough fumigation. Secretary Smith did not attend the cabinet meeting yesterday, not, as he said, because he was afraid of carrying contagion, but in order that there might not be the slightest uneasiness. Another new case was reported by the health authorities—a colored man in the employ of ex-Surgeon-General Moore of the army.

WORKING WOMEN.

THEIR HARD STRUGGLE

Made Easier by the Timely Intervention of One Woman,

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

All women work. Some in their homes, some in church, and some in the whirl of society. Many in stores, mills, and shops, tens of thousands are on the never ceasing treadmill earning their daily food.

All are subject to the same physical laws; all suffer alike from the same physical disturbance; and the nature of their duties in many cases quickly drifts them into the horrors of all kinds of female complaints—ovarian troubles, inflammation, ulceration, falling and displacement of the womb, leucorrhœa, or perhaps irregularity or suppression of "monthly periods"—causing severe backache, nervousness, irritability and lassitude.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the unfailing cure for all these troubles. It strengthens the proper muscles and displacement with all its horrors will no more crush you.

Backache, dizziness, fainting, bearing down, disordered stomach, moodiness, dislike of friends and society—all symptoms of the one cause—will be quickly dispelled, and you will again be free. Accept the truth.

You can tell the story of your pain to a woman, and get the help that only a woman can give. Her address is, Lydia E. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

DID YOU EVER

HEAR OF A

"Good-Bye SALE?"

That is what we call it as we are going to say Good-Bye to about fifteen thousand dollars worth of new seasonable dry goods, underwear, hosiery, dress goods and coats that we have just bought at half the usual prices. It has not been a case of the early bird catching the worm this season. Retailers who bought their stock early got caught, paid high prices as all Fall and Winter goods are from 30 to 50 per cent lower now than they were two months ago. Late buyers reap the benefit. It's a question with manufacturers and jobbers of selling their goods to cash buyers, regardless of profit and cost, and we do the same. It's anything to sell goods and we sell them lower than ever before. All we ask is an inspection of the goods and prices and you will be convinced that you can make one dollar do the work of two at

THE POLITICAL BATTLE

As Viewed from a Republican Standpoint.

Whitelaw Reid Can See Nothing But a Great Victory for That Party—Looks for Big Majorities for Morton and Saxton—He Sails Away in Search of Health.

New York, Nov. 3.—The Sun to-day published the follow interview with Whitelaw Reid, by one of its reporters:

The reporter found Mr. Reid coming out of the Tribune office, where he had been making his final arrangements before sailing yesterday for Gibraltar and the Mediterranean coast of Africa. Mr. Reid was browned with his stay in the country, and seemed to be in good general health. The reporter said to him:

"You are going to miss the elections?"

"Yes, to my great regret. It will be for the first time, except when actually in a foreign country, for over a quarter of a century. I sent early to secure passage for the Mediterranean, selecting the Augusta Victoria, sailing on Nov. 17, solely in order to stay for the elections, and against the advice of my physician, who declared that he could only complete his work on my half-cured asthma, provided I would obey him about seeking the right climates, and my choice was limited to the steamer sailing on Dec. 1 or that on Nov. 3, whereupon the doctor told me that I had no choice at all and must go now. But I have saved my vote, having paired with a rock-ribbed democrat, who was bent on voting for Hill and Grant and against the constitutional amendments, and didn't even have the grace to be ashamed of it."

"How do you think the elections are going?"

"I am a firm believer in the ground swell. It has been sweeping over the whole country, and I don't believe Hill and Tammany can dam it out of New York. I look for very big, in fact phenomenal majorities for Morton and Saxton, and can hardly see how any mismanagement or carelessness could possibly prevent their triumph."

"What about the city?"

"It is, of course, a bigger task to carry the city of New York for a republican candidate than it is to carry the state of New York. Still I believe the combination ticket with Col. Strong at its head has a first-rate chance for success. I feel sure it will win if there is fair dealing all around and no McKane business in the city. One thing, however, is vital; put no republican on guard on election day who has ever been caught trading with Tammany."

"Do you expect this year to decide the next presidential election?"

"Hardly that. If we carry the house of representatives, however, as we ought to do, it does make reasonably sure the election of a republican president in 1896, either by the people or by the house. The enormous inroads made by the populist feeling in the new western states may possibly be a factor great enough to throw the choice into the house."

"Will it be the old fight for or against the McKinley bill?"

"No, it has never been that fight. The republican party has always favored protection, and from time to time has made tariff bills to carry out its views. It made the Morrill bill, prospered under it, and amended it, as occasion required. Nobody ever expected that it would do otherwise with the McKinley bill."

"Will the republican party weaken on protection then?"

"Certainly not; it has been resolutely protectionist through its whole history, but rationally protectionist. In the nature of things a tariff bill always required modifications from time to time, owing to the changes in trade and the development of manufacturing facilities. What the republican party has always insisted on is that these changes, whether in the Morrill or in the McKinley bill, should be in the general interest of protection and of the American manufacturer and wage earner, and that they should be shaped by the friends of the protective principle, not by the enemies."

"You think, then, profection will be the great issue in '96?"

"Hardly. It has been a great issue, but the people are settling it very fast. By '96 you are likely to find the fight before the people on protection won and the silver question looming up."

"Where will the republican party be on that?"

"Where the majority of it has always been—in favor of a rational bimetallism."

"What is rational bimetallism?"

"Well, an international bimetallism would be rational, anyway. But don't ask a man just sailing to enter on that question."

Receiver for a Loan Society.

Chicago, Nov. 3.—Application for a receiver for the United States Investment and Loan society was made in the superior court yesterday by Vice-President Samuel A. Dardison of the organization. The concern is capitalized at $10,000,000. The entire assets of the society do not exceed $3,300, but according to the bill its liabilities to members will exceed $12,000. It is claimed in the bill that a large number of the shareholders are disatisfied with the condition of the society and have threatened to bring suit for the return of their subscriptions.

Brice Predicts Victory for Hill.

Cincinnati, Nov. 3.—Hon. Calvin S. Brice is in the city on railroad business. "I do not know much about New York politics," said he, "but I am pretty safe in the assertion that the city of New York will give Hill a majority of 60,000. Morton will come down from the state with a majority of 40,000, which will elect Hill by 20,000. The republicans are claiming Morton will come down with 80,000 which would beat Hill 20,000, but of course, they will have no such vote."

Rev. W. B. Duncan Dead.

Washington, Nov. 3.—The Rev. Wm. H. Duncan, treasurer of Georgetown college, died yesterday. He was formerly vicar-general of the diocese of Mobile, Ala., and for twenty years was pastor of St. Mary's church, Boston.

BLUE AND DISHEARTENED.

AND NOT WITHOUT VERY GOOD CAUSE.

It All Resulted From Weak Kidneys and a Torpid Liver—The Vast Importance of Those Organs If You Want To Feel Well.

If your stomach, kidneys and liver don't do their work well, you will suffer. Inaction, or disease of those organs, clogs the whole system and makes bad blood and weak nerves. The complexion soon becomes pale or sallow, and dark lines appear under the eyes.

Other symptoms are sure to follow, such as bad taste in the mouth, gas in the stomach, loss of appetite, biliousness, constipation, sleeplessness, headache, palpitation, nervousness and exhaustion.

Every one of these conditions leads to serious disease if not checked. Mr. A. C. Hartwell, of Gouldsville, Vt., states:

"About four years ago I was taken with a severe pain in my back and side, which arose from trouble with my liver and kidneys. I was also extremely nervous, being unable to sleep and get the needed rest.

"I could not work but part of the time, and when I did I was in pain all the time. This state of affairs lasted all winter. I consulted physicians, who said I had kidney and liver trouble, but I derived no benefit from them, and was a good deal discouraged about myself.

MR. A. C. HARTWELL.

"I kept hearing about Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, what wonderful cures it had made, and my friends continually advised me to use it. I had tried many medicines with no good results, but finally concluded to try this one.

"I commenced using it, and felt the good results from it immediately. After using the second bottle I was entirely cured of all my troubles, and have had no return of them. I can truly recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy as the best medicine I have ever used. It does all that is said of it."

This remedy is the surest cure ever known. Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is the discovery of Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th Street, New York, the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. He can be consulted free, personally or by letter.

Death in a Whirlwind.

Willis, Texas, Nov. 3.—A terrific wind storm struck this place. Three churches were wrecked, residences and storehouses were damaged to a greater or less degree, outhouses and fences were entirely demolished. Many houses in the country were destroyed and pear and peach orchards laid waste. No lives are reported lost so far, but full returns are not yet in. The town of Montgomery is reported as having suffered severely.

Three Years' Crops Destroyed.

Hadley, Mass., Nov. 3.—Six barns on the John Dickinson place, on West street, in this city were burned last night together with seventy-five cases of tobacco representing crops of three years and valued at $6,000. The barns were worth $5,000 and they with the tobacco were partly insured. The farm house was saved by hard work. Cause of fire, which started in an outbuilding, unknown.

Unable To Earn a Living.

Meriden, Conn., Nov. 3.—The town officials paid the expenses of three families who wished to be sent to Lawrence, Mass. The families number ten persons, seven adults and three children. The people have been employed at the woolen mills here, and it is alleged, their wages had been reduced so that they were unable to gain a living here.

All on Board Lost.

Portland, Ore., Nov. 3.—The ship Fannie Dutard has arrived at Port Blakely bringing news that the Ivanhoe, which has been overdue for over a month, sank with all on board Sept. 28. The Ivanhoe was the sister ship on which ex-United States Minister to Bolivia Grant was a passenger.

Want Gen. McCook Appointed.

Denver, Nov. 3.—A petition signed by all the federal officeholders in this city and many of the leading citizens, requesting President Cleveland to appoint General McCook, major general to succeed General Howard, retired, has been forwarded to Washington.

To Chicago in Six Days.

New York, Nov. 3.—Frank Albert, the six day bicyclist, will start from the city hall, this city, at 3 o'clock Sunday morning to ride to Chicago and beat, if he can, the present record which was made by Searles, in namely, 6 days, 7 1-2 hours Albert says that he is confident that he will get to Chicago in six days.

Mrs. Young Awarded $40,000.

Cincinnati, Nov. 3.—A divorce and $40,000 alimony has been granted Mrs. Louise Young from Gen. H. C. Young. Gen. Young is in Paris and was not present during the hearing. His attorneys gave notice of appeal.

EMPEROR NICHOLAS II.

The Ruler of All the Russias Aims for Peace.

Alexander's Death and the New Czar's Accession to the Throne Proclaimed to the People by Heralds—Celebrated by a Festival, According To Custom.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 3.—Emperor Nicholas II. has issued a proclamation announcing the death of his father, Emperor Alexander III., and continuing as follows:

"May we be consoled by the consciousness that our sorrow is the sorrow of the whole of our beloved people, and may the people not forget that the strength and stability of holy Russia lies in her unity to us and her unbounded devotion to us.

"We, however, in this sad and solemn hour when ascending the ancestral throne of the Russian empire and the czardom of Poland and the grand duchy of Finland indissolubly connected therewith, we, in the presence of the most High, record our solemn vow that we will always make our sole aim the peaceful development of the power and glory of beloved Russia and the happiness of our faithful subjects."

The proclamation concludes by directing the oath of allegiance to be taken to him, Emperor Nicholas II., and the Grand Duke George, his lineal successor until God shall vouchsafe to bless with a son the union into which the emperor is about to enter with Princess Alix of Hesse-Darmstadt.

The imperial heralds, clad in brilliant uniforms, accompanied by trumpeters, announced the death of Emperor Alexander III., and the accession to the throne of Emperor Nicholas II. The heralds were escorted by a military guard through the principal streets. The trumpeters would blow three blasts, when the heralds would proclaim the death of one emperor and the official succession of another. This proclamation was made from every place of vantage on the route taken by the heralds.

The accession of the Grand Duke Nicholas to the throne is being celebrated by a festival, as is customary. This celebration, according to custom, always precedes the period of mourning; hence the newspapers of yesterday's issue appeared as usual, without a sign of mourning.

Rome, Nov. 3.—The pope will have a personal representative at the coronation of Nicholas II. Premier Crispi and Baron Blanc, minister of foreign affairs, called upon M. Vlangali, Russian ambassador yesterday afternoon. The Italian ambassador in St. Petersburg will represent King Humbert at the funeral.

The Diritto expresses the hope that the new czar will grant Russsia a constitution. The Tribuna thinks that the change will affect materially the foreign policies of Russia and France.

PLEASES THE ENGLISH.

The Young Czar's Manifesto Favorably Received in London.

London, Nov. 3.—The Standard's St. Petersburg correspondent says: "The young czar's manifesto is received with open delight, probably unparalleled in the history of Russian official declarations. The dignified and almost affectionate tone is freely compared with that of the proclamation published upon the accession of Emperor William II. Dispatches from Moscow say that oppressiveness stillness and mournful expectations overhang the city. The theatres and other places of amusement, the banks and the exchange have been closed and business is at a standstill. It is expected that the body of Alexander III. will lie in state in Kieff and Moscow before it will be brought to St. Petersburg."

The Standard's Vienna correspondent says: "Some time ago a deputation petitioned the czarewitch to intervene for the Russian Jews. A member of that deputation tells me that the czarewitch replied: 'I despise and condemn the expulsion of your countrymen, but my hands are tied.'"

ENRAGED AT ZACHARIN.

His Residence in Moscow Reported To Have Been Wrecked.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 3.—It is reported here that the populace of Moscow indignant at what they believe to have been the malpractice of Dr. Zacharin in the case of the czar, are wrecking the doctor's house in that city. The telegraph offices are crowded with newspaper correspondents seeking to send their reports, and peasants, officers and merchants waiting for the latest news from Livadia.

Great Pacing Match.

Philadelphia, Nov. 3.—The star attraction of the season in this city for lovers of pacing, was yesterday's big races between Robert J., 2:01½, and John R. Gentry, 2:03¾, at the old Point Breeze race track, for a purse of $2,000. The track, except for a few soft spots was in perfect condition. Old horsemen, however, claim that it is at least two seconds slow. Ed Geers held the reins over Robert J. and McHenry sat behind Gentry. Robert J. won the first heat. Time, 2:08.

Costello Beats Lucy.

Montreal, Nov. 3.—The fight last night for points between "Buffalo" Costello and Mike Lucy of Troy, N. Y., was witnessed by a big crowd of sports. The contest resulted in a victory for Costello who won five of the eight rounds. In the eighth round the men clinched and the referee had some difficulty in separating them. Lucy appeared to have the worst of it all through.

City of Mexico Shaken.

City of Mexico, Nov. 3.—A severe earthquake lasting more than half a minute, shook this city at 6:40 last evening. People and horses were thrown down in the streets. It is not known that there was any damage, although all houses were much shaken. Hundreds of persons fell on their knees in the street and prayed.

Local Weather Forecast.

RAPIDLY BREAKING DOWN

MRS. S. BATES TELLS THE STORY OF HER SUFFERINGS.

How She Was Cured By Munyon's Little Pellets After Physicians Had Failed.

Mrs. S. Bates, of Cecil, N. J., adds her testimony to that of the thousands who have been saved from a life of suffering by Munyon's Remedies. She said: "I had suffered greatly with indigestion and stomach trouble. Everything I ate distressed me, I was nervous and fretful and rapidly breaking down. Physicians had failed to help me, nor did any of the many remedies I took relieve me until I began using Munyon's Dyspepsia Cure. The result was astonishing. After taking but three doses I felt greatly improved, and after taking one 25c. bottle I was entirely cured."

Munyon's Stomach and Dyspepsia Cure cures all forms of indigestion and stomach troubles such as constipation, rising of food, distress after eating, bloating of the stomach, palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath and all affections of the heart caused by indigestion. It soothes, heals and invigorates stomachs that have been weakened by over-eating, or where the lining of the stomach has been impaired by physic and injurious medicines. Price 25 cents.

Munyon's Homoeopathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

GRIEF STRICKEN RUSSIA

Her People Put on Mourning for Alexander.

The Scene at the Czar's Death Was a Most Pathetic One—Died a Devout Christian—The Body Will Lie in State at St. Petersburg for Four Days.

London, Nov. 3.—The Daily News has received from its Yalta correspondent the following official report of Alexander III.'s death:

"Czar Alexander's death was a pious, devout and Christian one. He died as only a true man can die and, as in life, he was inspired with faith, love and devotion.

"Some days ago the czar already felt the approach of death and prepared himself for it as a faithful Christian, without neglecting the affairs of government. He took communion on the 9th and 17th of October. During the last night he was sleepless. In the morning he said to the empress: 'I feel my life drawing to an end. Be composed. My mind is made up.' Then he ordered all the members of his family to assemble round him. He asked his confessor to administer the sacrament and took it with pious devotion, repeating the prayer distinctly and in a loud voice. The czar was sitting in an armchair and did not for a moment lose consciousness.

"After the liturgy the czar sent for Father Ivan and prayed with him. Half an hour later he asked Father Ivan to come again, and he repeated with him the prayers for the dying. He then received extreme unction. Father Ivan remained present till the czar died.

"At 2 o'clock the czar's pulse increased and his eye became brighter. A quarter of an hour later he let fall his head and delivered his soul to the grace of the Almighty, bequeathing to his people the blessing of peace."

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Daily News says it is understood that the body will be consecrated in Moscow and then conveyed to the capital, where it will lie in state four days. He confirms the report that Princess Alix of Hesse will return with her brother to remain a short time in Germany. In Moscow and St. Petersburg every precaution against nihilist demonstrations has been taken.

"Despite the nominal celebration of a festival, the aspect of the city is sombre and depressing. The theatres and music halls and hundreds of shops are closed. Many public buildings are draped with mourning. Thousands of private citizens have put on black. It is announced that the official period of mourning will last three months.

"All dispatches received from Livadia agree that the czar's death was peaceful and apparently painless. The czarina is completely prostrated. The attacks of hysteria for which Dr. Mershejewski recently treated her have returned and threaten to break down her general health besides inducing paralysis of the feet. Nevertheless the semi-official statement is that she bears up well under her trouble. Her friend and former governess, Mme. Descalle, a Belgian, has been with her throughout the ordeal of the last weeks. Mme. Descalle says that the czar died in perfect peace, praying audibly with Father Ivan to almost his last breath. She describes the last scene as beautiful and impressive, although agonizing for the czarina."

The Daily News has this dispatch from Berlin: "Emperor William has appointed Nicholas to be chief of the guard regiment, Alexander III, emperor of Russia. The social democratic newspapers openly vent their hatred of Alexander III., referring to the thousands who languish in Siberia and the scores who have been executed by his orders. The Volkszeitung says:

"There is no reason whatever why a German newspaper which strives independently for culture and liberty should shed a tear for Alexander III., the representative of despotism." The anti-semitic Straatsburger Zeitung insinuates that perhaps the czar did not die a natural death and that the Jews may have had a hand in it.

Nicholas II.'s manifesto has made a good impression in Berlin, especially his assurance that he will endeavor to promote the pacific development of the country."

From Odessa the Daily News hears: "The city is draped in mourning. A grand requiem mass was said in the cathedral yesterday. More than 100,000 people were within and without the building. The Prince and Princess of Wales arrived here at 7 o'clock this morning. They have specially requested that no public reception be given them.

"The people's rights manifesto has led to numerous arrests here, and more lists and addresses have been handed to the police by the postoffice authorities. Nearly all the university students in Odessa, Kieff, Kharkoff, Moscow and St. Petersburg are under observance. Nevertheless a large number of copies have been secretly circulated. I learn that in many quarters the moderate and reasonable spirit of the documents are producing grave impression."

The Daily News correspondent in Vienna says: "Public opinion here regards the czar's death as a serious loss to the cause of peace—especially as a possible source of danger to Austria. Rumors of Nicholas' liberality and humanity are mistrusted in Austria.

"The Vienna newspapers highly praise Alexander III. The socialist and workingmen's newspapers condemn him as a brutal despot and tyrant. Kalnoky called at the Russian embassy in behalf of Emperor Franz Joseph, who is expected from Budapest to attend the requiem mass in the embassy chapel to-day. Dr. Wekerle, the Hungarian premier, will propose a motion of condolence in the Hungarian reichstag.

"The gosssip about the czar's doctors threatens to become as painful as in the case of Emperor Frederick. The Neue Freie Presse's St. Petersburg correspondent says that while at Spala the czar was feeling better one night and started playing the trombone. Dr. Zacharin, who was occupying a nearby chamber, sent a letter of request that his majesty allow him to sleep. The czar indignantly replied that the professor need not remain a single night more, but might leave at once if he wished. Zacharin left and Prof. Leyden was summoned, but as the patient grew worse Dr. Zacharin was recalled."

London, Nov. 3.—A court circular issued last evening says: "Her majesty has received with the deepest sorrow the sorrowful intelligence of the fatal termination of the illness of the emperor of Russia. The queen, who is allied with the Russian imperial family by so many ties, feels the warmest sympathy with the afflicted empress and her family, as well as with the young emperor, who is about to become by marriage, her majesty's grandson and for whom the queen entertains sincere affection and regard."

Sir Henry Ponsonby, the queen's private secretary, made a long call yesterday on M. Staal, the Russian ambassador, on behalf of her majesty.

DIRECT TO THE PRESIDENT.

Mr. Cleveland Receives a Personal Message from Nicholas II.

Washington, Nov. 3.—The department of state has official notice that Nicholas II. has proclaimed himself emperor of Russia.

President Cleveland has received a personal message from the new emperor announcing the death of his father and his succession to the throne.

The following is the text of the official correspondence in connection with the death of the Russian emperor:

Translation from the French.

From Livadia. Received Nov. 2, 1894.

To the President of the United States of America:

"I have the sorrow to impart to you the cruel loss that I and Russia have just sustained in the person of my beloved father, Emperor Alexander, deceased this day. NICOLAS."

To this the president replied as follows:

Washington, Nov. 2, 1894

"To his Majesty Nicolas II., Emperor of Russia, Livadia:

"I hasten to express my heartfelt sympathy and the sympathy of my countrymen with the royal family and the Russian people in their affliction by reason of the death of your honored father. GROVER CLEVELAND."

Want Gov. Bulkeley's Help.

Hartford, Conn., Nov. 3.—All the nominees on the republican state ticket have united in a letter to ex-Gov. Bulkeley asking him to use his good offices and heal the split in the party in this city on senator and representatives. The McGovern committee submitted a proposition to withdraw one of their representative candidates, Austin Brainard, if the Taintor committee would withdraw Col. Burdette. This would leave one of each faction nominated for representatives. It is rumored that if this compromise is effected, ex-Gov. Bulkeley will withdraw his name on the McGovern ticket for senator. The Taintor committee and nominees met last evening to consider the proposition.

Gen. Doe May Be Appointed.

Milwaukee, Nov. 3.—A report was current in Milwaukee yesterday that Gen. J. B. Doe, the present assistant secretary of war, may be appointed judge advocate general of the United States army by President Cleveland. Several officers of the Wisconsin National guard stated that they had got what information they had on the subject from officers of the regular army.

A Hackettstown Miracle.

A RECITAL THAT WILL INTEREST EVERYONE.

Physicians Could Do No More—Relief Found at Last—A Modern Miracle.

From the Hackettstown, N. J., Republican.

Reports from time to time reached the Republican of the remarkable cure of Mrs. Jacob Shields, the wife of our leading coal merchant, who had been suffering from a complication of diseases that nearly resulted in her death. In order to verify these statements, one of our reporters called upon Mrs. Shields and found that the reports in no way represented the great service that had been rendered her by Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

The particulars of the case, are these: "I was taken sick," said Mrs. Shields, "with typhoid fever, and was delirious for three weeks. When I recovered I suffered untold agony with my back and right limb. They felt as though they would burst. At the same time I suffered terribly with my kidneys. My mother was with me, and a friend of hers called and told her of the sickness they had passed through at her home, and that Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy had been used by them, and she felt sure I would find great benefit from its use.

"A bottle was purchased, and I had taken but a few doses before it began to relieve me, and in a few days was greatly helped. That evening the doctor called, and I told him that I had stopped his medicine, for he had told Mr. Shields the last time he called that he did not know what more he could do for me. Some time before this I was taken to the Hospital, and then brought home, as was supposed, to die. Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy was taken just in time. I do thank God from the bottom of my heart that he ever sent that lady her to tell me of Favorite Remedy, otherwise death would have been my doom. Since I have recovered, ever so many have told me that it was a miracle I ever got well. I certainly cannot say enough in praise of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy."

No tribute to the efficacy of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy could be greater than these words of Mrs. Shields', who voluntarily tells the story of her remarkable recovery, and that this medicine should be used by persons suffering from diseases for which it is prepared.

Favorite Remedy ranks with the medical profession, as the most perfect of all blood and nerve medicines. It will cure all diseases of the skin, liver and kidneys, and affords great protection from attacks of terrible illness. It cures scrofula, salt rheum, rheumatism, dyspepsia, all kidney, bladder and urinary diseases, gravel, diabetes and Bright's disease.

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is for sale by dealers in medicines at $1 a bottle.

THE BUSINESS WORLD

General Trade Shows Little Improvement.

A Better Market for Shoes, But the Quotations for Leather Have Weakened—Prohibition of American Cattle in Germany May Result in Lower Prices in That Industry.

New York, Nov. 3.—Bradstreet's report of the state of general trade, says it continues on conservative lines, there being little far-reaching improvement in business circles as compared with a week ago, aside from the settlement of the strike at Fall River, one of the effects of which is expected to be the steadying of prices of cotton fabrics and an inducement to cloth printers to order for future delivery. There is some encouragement drawn from a firmer market for cheaper grades of shoes, for drugs at leading centres, and for hogs at western markets, due to a decline in receipts, and for fruits on the arrival of cold weather. Notwithstanding the better demand for lower grades of shoes at New England markets, among which seven cities shipped 100,000 cases this week, against 68,000 in the corresponding week a year ago, quotations for leather have weakened. At Chicago excessive competition from the north results in further cuts in lumber prices. Sugar is ⅛c. lower and Bessemer pig iron and steel billets 15 and 25c. lower respectively, notwithstanding recent firmness of the former at Pittsburg. Cotton has gone off another 1-16c. This results in a reduction in the number of orders sent from interior points to the southern centres, a closer scrutiny of credits throughout the south, and restriction in the volume of trade there.

Whether the reduction in price of cattle is due primarily to the German prohibition of importations from this country remains to be seen. One of the largest houses at Chicago and one at New York advise Bradstreet's that so small relatively has been the exportation of American cattle to Germany that prohibition can have comparatively little effect on the trade here. Two Chicago firms, however, regard Germany's action as a serious blow to the American industry, and think it will result in lower prices for cattle.

Exports of wheat and flour as wheat, both coasts of the United States, amount to 2,934,000 bushels, against 3,353,000 bushels last week, and as compared with 2,860,000 bushels in the corresponding week a year ago, 3,714,000 bushels two years ago.

The speculative stock market has been irregular, but on the whole steady. The general list withstood a decline in the high-priced coal stocks, and the short interest at the close of the week is inclined to cover on the election prospects. European markets are undisturbed by the death of the czar, which event had been long since discounted.

No improvement in general lines is reported from Boston, Buffalo or Baltimore, the city at the foot of the lakes reporting some disappointment at results of the fall trade, with relatively best distribution among jobbers in or manufacturers of soaps, shoes and groceries. The season's business at Baltimore is 10 per cent. larger in value than a year ago, but 15 per cent larger in volume, and low prices for cotton are affecting the prices of dry goods and millinery. There is no change in trade at Pittsburg, except that dry goods and a few other staples are distributed more freely. At Providence cotton manufacturers in some instances are reported enlarging facilities to take advantage of low cost of raw material, and rubber manufacturers are doing better. Savings banks at several cities in New England are reported limiting maximum individual deposits to avoid the operation of the income tax.

At Cleveland, Cincinnati, Kansas City, Omaha, Des Moines, St. Paul and Minneapolis no change is reported in commercial circles, business being moderate and dealings conservative. Colder weather is needed at the cities further north. Detroit reports unseasonable weather has further checked distribution of clothing and allied lines, and at Chicago the volume of business is smaller than in the week previous, although interior merchants in Ohio, Indiana and Illinois are sending in a seasonable number of mail orders.

Alone among southern cities Chattanooga reports a relative improvement, and that sales and collections for October have been better than expected. There is no change in the situation at Charleston, where the low price of cotton continues to have an effect, or at Atlanta, or at Jacksonville, where travel is heavy and the prospect encouraging, or at Birmingham, Ala., which continues to report business quiet.

Gov. Werts at Long Branch.

Long Branch, N. J., Nov. 3.—The town hall in this place was crowded almost to suffocation last night, the occasion being a democratic mass meeting, called principally to boom the candidacy of Congressman Geissenhainer, who is a candidate for congress in the third district. Ex-United States Senator Rufus Blodgett, of Long Branch, presided. Speeches were made by Congressman Geissenhainer, Governor Werts and Attorney General John P. Stockton. The governor dined with the attorney general at the Elberon hotel.

New Trolley Roads for Jersey.

Hackensack, N. J., Nov. 3.—George S. Forbush, of Brookline, Mass.; Francis L. Callanan, of New York; Otis G. Burnap and Frank Gardner, of Brooklyn, and several wealthy residents of Rutherford, have filed articles of incorporation of the Union Trust company, with a capital of $1,500,000. They propose to build trolley roads all over the lower end of Bergen county to connect Hackensack and Newark and many towns along the Pennsylvania road.

Death of a Noted Horseman.

Toledo, O., Nov. 3.—John W. Peag, of this city, widely known as a breeder of fast horses and who has campaigned on the grand circuit, was thrown out of his buggy while breaking in a fractious colt and received injuries which caused his death five hours afterward.

DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

A LYNCHING IN MOSINEE.

[Copyright, 1894, by Bacheller, Johnson, & Bacheller.]

II.

Five hundred men within a minute passed the word down the street: "Frank Willey's shot!"

All order disappeared. The parade broke into a disordered mass, hastening toward the band. The boys' brigade, the center of the mass, illumined with their flaring torches the wash and restless surge of humanity.

From every direction streams of men debouched into the main street like a spring overflow. Women and children lined the sidewalks.

"Who done it?" shouted furious voices.

"Some damn Dimblebat, of course."

"Where is he?"

"Clark run 'im into the jail."

"Where's Willey? Is he livin'?"

"Yes. He's in the drug store."

Then a sort of silence fell on the crowd. They stood in dense groups surrounding some eyewitness of the shooting. From time to time news emanated from the drug store.

"He's bad. They've sent for his wife." Then the talk would go back to the prisoner.

"What in God's heavens any man has against Frank Willey I don't see."

A carriage drove up through the crowd with a white-faced woman in it. The moaning hysterical sobs went to the heart like the thrust of a jagged knife. They stood aside in awe of her grief as she was hurried into the store by two men.

"My God! Just think what's on her!" was the universal comment of the crowd surged against the door.

"Stand back there! Don't crowd—"

There came a piercing shriek that made every man shiver as if an icy blast had blown on his naked heart. Then the word came out and was flung from lip to lip.

"He's dead!"

"What? No!"

"Willey's dead! He didn't know her."

Few questioned it, coming after the wife's cry. Men stood staring into each others' faces and swearing great oaths, helplessly.

"Frank Willey dead!" sobbed one great bearded fellow, his voice high and broken. "Why, my God, gentlemen, he stood right here ten minutes ago—I had my hand on his shoulder."

Nobody laughed at his crying—there were too many with tears on their cheeks. Everybody knew the captain; everybody had felt the pressure of his hand. Some had been his comrades in the war. Some of the young fellows were in the militia which he commanded—all loved him.

The street grew darker as the torches went out. The crowd again broke into knots. "He ought to hang to-morrow morning," was a remark made here and there.

"We ought to 'a' lynched him when we had him."

Mrs. Willey, in that utter despair which is like the surrender of life, was carried out to the hack and taken away. The men silently looked on.

But as the carriage disappeared up the street, a crowd of men came out of a saloon, and there arose a strident, overtopping, ferocious voice in a far-reaching howl.

"Every man that's got any sand, foller me."

"Where to?"

"To the jail to hang that—"

Scores of voices replying cut off his terrible oaths.

"That's right. The jail. Smash it in!"

"Come on, you cowards!"

Like a mass of logs let loose in a swift current, the "pack" of men began to move down the street toward the jail. As they moved they gathered strength. Each man seeing his neighbor moving moved with less fear. A sort of inhuman joy and elation came into their souls; many of them felt like singing as they marched.

Dan and Annie were standing on the steps of the jail, listening.

"There's no telling what they'll do," he was saying as he heard some of the wild voices. They heard a new sound—a chorus of savage shouts. The tramp of feet grew plainer and more rapid, beating the frozen ground and the hollow sidewalk till an ominous roar arose.

"They're comin', Dan." Annie turned her resolute face to her husband. "They're after him."

"They won't get 'im. I won't open up—Listen to that, will ye?"

The roar came nearer, and the shouts now took shape.

"Bring a rope—a rope!"

"We'll hang 'im right now."

That terrible voice seemed to inflame the whole mob, as a rancous snarl of a tiger rouses the beasts of a managerie to primitive ferocity.

"Now, Annie," said Dan, "you go in and—"

"But you're goin' to need me out here, Dan. I'd rather be out here with you."

"Annie," said Dan, quietly, "go inside. Lock all the doors. Lock this door behind me and hide the keys. I'll stand right here alone."

"All right, Dan," she replied without a quaver. "But I'm afraid—"

"Don't open the doors for anything or anybody till morning—not even to me." His voice had a peculiar inflexible quality. "I don't need any help."

She knew him in these moods. "All right, Dan. It's your duty."

After she went in and shut the door behind her, Dan put his ear to the door till he heard the bolt slide to with a click, and the chain rattle into place. Then he took out his revolvers, examined them as well as he could in the shadow, and calmly waited the approaching crowd.

Suddenly the city marshal dashed up.

"Dan, they're comin'!"

"Let 'em come, Joe. We're here first."

"They're goin' to lynch 'im."

"Not while I stand here."

"But we can't stand out against the whole county, Dan."

"The whole county ain't here."

"Yes, they are. They've telephoned the news all over the county and teams are pouring in. Some o' the best men in this town are in that mob, Dan—lawyers and—"

"Can't help it. You stand right here—"

"O, I can't do that. I dassn't do that."

"All right, I'll do it alone."

"But, Dan, they'll—"

"What?" asked Dan, coldly.

"They're wild. You better open the door—"

"Open nawthin'. Get out o' here, you white-livered skunk."

The crowd turned in at the gate, hooting like demons, and Joe flittered along the shadow of the jail wall and disappeared, to be seen no more that night. As those in advance came up, they saw Dan standing in the shadow grimly.

"That you, Dan?"

"It's me. What y' want?"

"Want that man," burst from several throats, as if they already smelled opposition from Dan.

"Open the door, Mr. Sheriff."

"I won't do it."

"Then we'll smash it down."

"That's the talk. Smash it down!"

"What y' think y'r doin'?" asked Dan.

"We're going to hang that damn Dimblebat, that killed Willey."

"Not to-night."

"Right now. Open that door!"

"Now just hold on a half-a-second," said Dan, coolly.

"Smash 'im in the lip," yelled a voice farther back in the throng, which was packing denser each minute.

Dan's blood began to stir.

"I'm the sheriff of this county. That man was put into my hands for safe-keeping, and, by the Great Eternal! he's goin' to stay there."

"Don't be a fool. You can't stand out against this mob."

"I don't know the man's guilty—"

"I do! I saw him shoot!" shouted a score of voices in reply.

"I don't care if the man had killed ten men, it's my duty to keep the door of this jail shut."

"You'd better open—"

Again that strident, far-reaching, inflaming voice arose:

"Throw him out of the way."

A small section of the advancing line made a movement upon the sheriff.

"Halt!—stop right there. I give you notice I mean business. I'll let the moonlight through the first man that raises his hand. Now you hear me!" They halted abruptly. Dan continued:

"HALT! STOP RIGHT THERE!"

"This lynchin' has got to stop, in this county, anyway. The whole state is disgraced by 'em. This man has got to be tried—"

The dim moon slanted down the roof and fell upon the steady barrel of the revolver. Dan spoke from the shadow, but those nearest caught glimpses of his glowing eyes.

The mob numbered thousands now, a wild sight—but in the soul of the sheriff was blind, unreasoning courage. He set his teeth so tight his muscles quivered. He felt dimly a massive joy in holding that vast flood of men at arm's length alone. He represented law and order.

Those nearest him plead:

"Stand out o' the way, Dan. Don't be a fool—they'll kill ye, sure!"

"I take some of 'em with me" was his grim reply.

The making of fine fabrics costs more than throwing together shoddy stuff.

Such trimmings as we put into our Suits and Overcoats are expensive.

AN EXCELLENT COURSE.

Splendid List of Lectures in All Souls Church.

The annual lecture course of All Souls Church has now become one of the recognized features of Plainfield's literary bill-of-fare. The excellence of the course and the cheapness of the tickets are well-known to our lecture-going population. Indeed it would be a mystery how five such good lectures, as those announced elsewhere in our columns, could be given for the small sum of one dollar, were it not an open secret that the speakers generously give their services. Rev. Merle St. Croix Wright will open the course on Friday night, December 7, with a lecture on Walt Whitman, "the good gray poet", as he is often called. Walt Whitman's reputation in England is as great as or even greater than in this country, and it behooves us all to know something of this famous citizen of our Republic, who is thought by many persons to be the representative poet of Democracy. Mr. Wright's reputation in New York city (where he has a large church) and elsewhere as a preacher and thinker, is so high, that his thoughtful words will be sure to command attention in our city. He is considered one of the most brilliant lights among the young clergymen of the Unitarian denomination.

Rev. Hobart Clark is too wellknown and too highly appreciated in Plainfield to need special notice at our hands. It may be said, however, that Mr. Clark made a special study of the English cathedrals during his long sojourn in the British Isles. Wm. L. Gibbs of Fanwood has kindly promised to furnish and superintend the stereopticon illustrations, which will add so much to the interest of this lecture.

Rev. Watari Kitashima, a native Japanese who has been converted to Christianity, and is installed as pastor of a church at Vineland, will lecture upon the war now going on between China and Japan. Mr. Kitashima brings high testimonials from Mrs. Mary A. Livermore among others. She says "We can commend you and your lecture most heartily to the public."

Those who heard Hon. Roswell G. Horr at Music Hall a month or two ago, need not be told what a rare treat awaits us in his lecture on the "Labor Problem." It would be difficult to find, in the length and breadth of our land, a speaker who could equal this gentleman in the somewhat rare combination of sound common sense, overflowing with wit and humor, and unfailing good nature. He makes his audience fairly roar with laughter, yet he teaches them a lesson at the same time. Mr. Horr's reputation is a national one.

A. Emerson Palmer, one of the editors of the New York Tribune, will give a lecture on George Eliot, the poet. Mr. Palmer is much liked in Plainfield, where he has spoken before. His exposition of this subject will be awaited with eager interest by all who are familiar with his cleverness and ability, and by all who admire—as who does not?—the prose works of this great novelist.

NEW YEAR'S DANCE.

Plainfield Sons of Veterans Promoting Sociability.

At the meeting of John Hand Camp, No. 28, Sons of Veterans, last evening the members decided to give a reception and dance New Year's Eve. It will be an invitation affair. Willard Sutton, Cyrus Moore and Charles Stephens were appointed.

Nominations were opened for officers for the ensuing year, and resulted as follows:

Captain—W. C. Dobbins.
1st Lieutenant—W. Sutton.
2d Lieutenant { Ed Bowman. / Charles Stephens.
Delegate to State Encampment—H. S. Thatcher; alternate—H. C. McVoy.

The question of uniforms was discussed, and it is expected that by the first of January there will be about 25 members ready to uniform.

The new ritual is expected by Dec. 15. It will require three evenings to exemplify it, which will make much additional work on the part of the officers and members.

SCHOOL FIRE SAFETY.

At Last Action Is Being Taken by the Board.

FIRE ESCAPES WHERE NEEDED.

Hydrants to Be Placed Near the Unprotected Irving School—Another Star-Chamber Session Discovers Itself—Reciprocity Proposed Between Dunellen and Plainfield.

The December meeting of the Board of Education was called to order last night at 8:15 by President Probasco. The other members present were Messrs. Finch and Lovell. Dr. Jenkins did not arrive until 8:45. On account of the death of his father, Clerk Clark did not attend, and H. M. Maxson acted in his stead. The minutes of the regular November meeting were read and approved.

It transpired that the Board had had another of their star-chamber special meetings Nov. 5, in reference to the Love matter, and the minutes of that meeting also were approved. The only business appearing as transacted at that meeting was the Love affair, and the Board sustained Superintendent Maxson in the course he had taken in the matter.

A number of bills, including one for over $100 for repairs to the Wadsworth building, were read by Secretary Finch and approved and ordered paid.

A motion was made that Miss Flora Petrie, who had served four years as teacher, should receive, after Dec. 1, a salary of $450 a year. The motion was carried.

Mr. Lovell offered a motion, which was carried, that the schools close for the holiday vacation Dec. 21, 1894, and open Jan. 2, 1895.

Mr. Maxson, who had been appointed to investigate the request of residents inside the city line for the Board to stand the expense of their children attending school in the Dunellen district as it was too great a distance to walk to the Plainfield schools and they could not afford to pay the tuition fee, reported that he had looked into the matter and had learned that there were children in the Dunellen district on West Fourth street, near Guinee pond, who were attending the Plainfield schools, and he suggested that the Board pay to the Dunellen district the amount for each scholar that was allowed by the State, and that Dunellen do likewise with Plainfield. The matter was left to Mr. Maxson with power.

The Committee on Buildings reported that the work of flagging around the Irving School property was progressing.

President Probasco reported that the flagstaff at the Washington School had been taken down and that in doing so the staff had fallen and was so rotten that it had broken in two. He said that it was a good thing it had been taken down before it had fallen, and perhaps injured some of the scholars. A new flagstaff with weather-vane would cost about $95. President Probasco also called the attention of the Board to the fact that the Wadsworth School building had no flag thereon as required by law, and stated that a flagstaff with halyards and ball but without weather-vane, would cost between $25 and $50. This was also referred to the Building Committee.

Dr. Jenkins said that he had been informed by two members of the J. O. U. A. M. that the Secretary of State would furnish flags for school houses on application. President Probasco said he had never heard anything of the kind, and did not think it was true.

The subject of furnishing water for the Irving School building was brought up by the president, who said that the nearest hydrant to the school was 800 feet, and thought that in case of fire and scholars were injured the Board would be held responsible. The Water Supply Company would not lay pipes to the building unless they were guaranteed $50 a year from the Board. He had consulted Corporation Counsel Marsh and Chief Engineer T. O. Doane in regard to the matter and they had advised that the Board give the guarantee and secure water for the building. The company agreed to allow reduction in case of property owners along the line putting in city water. The company would not agree to have the work done at any stated time on account of the season. The Building Committee was given power to act.

Mr. Lovell asked about the matter of fire-escapes for the school buildings. President Probasco stated that the High School and Franklin School were the only buildings required by law to have fire-escapes, as they were the only ones that had classes above the second floor. The matter was referred to the Building Committee.

The Board agreed to attend the funeral of the late L. E. Clark in a body. A committee was appointed to draft resolutions on the death of Mr. Clark. The committee was President Probasco and Messrs. Finch and Jenkins.

As F. B. Clark had acted as deputy for his father to the Board, he was appointed clerk pro tem until the next meeting.

The Board then adjourned subject to the call of the chair.

Ragan Saturday night.

THE CHASE OF A HEART.

AFTER THE FAIR HE WAS STILL AFTER THE FAIR.

Pathetic History of a Queer Little Gentleman as Told to His Partner in Desertion in the Y. M. C. A. Building.

At first glance you would have said they were two chrysanthemums, nodding droopingly at one another in the deserted corner. But who ever saw a black chrysanthemum?—and one of these was black. As for the yellow—that was a sure enough flower. She was the only one left of all the beauties that had graced the Japanese quarter of the Fair. Her comrade in misery had little eyes twinkling, and ruddy cheeks aglow, only you could not see them till you had parted his thick and tangled mat of hair. One might have taken him for a college football player, but instead he was a right proper and neat little Japanese gentleman.

They were alone in the great Y.M.C.A. Building.

All the nations had packed up their belongings and followed the trail of the Gypsies away from the camp. The Yankee storekeeper had been last to go, for he had lingered as long as there was anyone around affording a possible chance to make a swap. Even his sharp eyes did not detect the proper little Japanese, and his wife did not espy the blossom: and so they were left behind among the remnants of evergreen twigs and scraps of wrapping paper, which the janitor was to sweep to the fire.

The Japanese little gentleman made a profound bow to the mass of golden bloom. His joints squeaked, and in a shrill voice he piped an apology.

"Pardon, my dear young lady, for the groaning of my bones. I have been shivering all night under the branch of a frosted Christmas tree, and I suspect I'll be dead of rheumatism before another week is out."

Having no tears, the chrysanthemum shed one of her yellow tresses. The little Jap blinked; but his eyes were dry, and they opened and shut with a leaden sound.

"Of course"—he said—"you have n't a can of machine-oil in your pocket?"

The yellow-haired lady shook her head mournfully.

"Then"—said the little Jap—"I'll have to come over and thaw out in your sunshine."

With much squeaking and groaning he climbed painfully out of his cedar bough and leaned against an empty candy-box in respectful proximity to the chrysanthemum.

"We seem to be the sole survivors of all the glory,"—he remarked—"and we might as well be sociable. I used to be a good deal stuck up myself, through early intimacy with the glue-pot; but that's all past, and you see how humbly I stand at your feet and court your smiles."

The chrysanthemum beamed upon him in dazzling radiance, and when he gleefully rubbed his hands his knuckles did not crack.

"It just warms my soul"—he said—"to have your eyes gaze down upon me with that gorgeous gleam. If only I had met you before I lost my heart!" He sighed, and then added "May I call your name?"

"My middle name is the nicest;"—softly said the sunny-haired maiden—"that is Ann."

"Ah, Annie!"—said the little man impulsively.—"I could love you, Annie dear, if my heart were only here."

"You are a poet, sir!"—admiringly lisped the damsel thus addressed.

"No, Annie, not a poet—but a poor, unfortunate lover who has suffered the cruel fate of haughty woman's scorn."

"Oh, sir,"—said Annie—"tell me your story. I am sure it is so romantic!"

"It is as brief as sad"—said he.

"I came to this Fair as bright and dapper a gentleman as ever waved a fan in dear Japan. The atmosphere of my native land was here, here in this bower which you and your sisters filled with bloom. I stood demure and quiet under a parasol where I could see the people. They did not notice me, and they never dreamed that I had a heart.

"I myself had forgotten the fact, till there came the moment of realization that I had lost it. I was uneasy by day, sleepless by night, thinking about it. I heard one of the Japanese maidens say she was in love. 'How do you know?'—she was asked. 'Oh,'—she replied—'I'm so happy all the time—all the time thinking of him—so happy and so much thinking, that I don't even sleep.' 'Now,'—thought I—'if I only were happy, I'd know I was in love.'

"But I could n't be happy till I found my heart.

"I knew I could n't have lost it in the Japanese quarter, for I had one day boldly offered it to the belle of the bazar and she had ridiculously rejected it. I sought it up in a cosy corner which I had loved to visit in the Russian tea room, and over my tea cups I scanned the glorious eyes of those grand dames there. The regal beauty of it all was bewildering but I realized that if lost there my heart had gone ere this into some rare Welsh rabbit, and so I sought the other quarters. I lingered in Spain, in Sweden, intoxicated with the delight of one, elated with the vivacity of the other. But if my heart had been roaming there, it had eluded capture.

"In France I found it. Lingering over a box of bonbons, I felt a wave of rapture in the presence of a rare Alsatian peasant girl. I slyly felt in her pocket, and there was my heart. Just then another girl said 'Here are the pins you were asking for', and she replied 'I have the dearest little pincushion to keep them in!' Then she felt in her pocket—for my heart! I seized it and ran. She screamed after me, but I did n't propose to have my vital essence pricked out by a lot of sharp-tipped bits of Yankee wire, so I scampered into the darkest corner, and that was the Gypsy tent.

"There was a red light there, and it gleamed into the face of just the loveliest woman I had ever seen. And before I knew it I had lost my heart again, and she was toying with it in her hand.

"'It is yours,'—said I.—'Now tell my fortune.'

"'What a dear little red little ripe little strawberry!' She touched it to her lips, and I thrilled with gladness; but slowly her teeth gleamed dazzling white, and I knew she was going to bite.

"'Alas!"—I cried.—"'Oh, Gypsy queen, it is not a strawberry! it is my unhappy heart!'

"She laughed and handed it back.

"'I have hearts enough—so keep this, little boy!'

"For a long time I wandered about, my face smarting with shame as I thought of the taunts that my poor little heart had met. I clutched my hand over it and tried to still its throbs. And then I knew I longed to place it in the keeping of some gentle, loving soul.

"I turned my back on all the proud and haughty beauties, and found my ideal in the sweet American girl. She was a creature radiant and divine. I found her making a visit to Venice, and the celestial blue of her eyes created for me a new heaven infinitely rarer than the Italian azure. Before I could reach her side she had stepped into a boat and was borne away by the oars of the gondoliers, and singing as she went.

"I tossed her my heart, but whether she caught it, or whether it sank beneath the waters at the Bridge of Sighs, I can never know. I only know that she is gone from me forever."

The chrysanthemum was sobbing violently and shedding her golden locks all over the little Japanese. He looked up and was shocked to see how nearly bald she was getting.

"Go to the lake!"—she cried.—"Perhaps you may find her there." Then she wilted.

The little Japanese roamed rheumatically through the big building, looking for the lake, and night came on.

In the morning the janitor swept up the rubbish of the Japanese quarter, and in it was the frozen, lifeless stalk of a yellow chrysanthemum whose petals were all astray. And down in the big deep swimming tank he found the body of a little Japanese gentleman whose wig had lost its glue and had floated off, and whose face was pallid where the enamel had soaked away. But his eyes were brighe, and had a celestial blue that must have been reflected from afar.

Killed Him, But Regrets It.

One of the Rockview Terrace citizens is justly proud of a fine flock of Kanaka ducks. Lately they have one by one mysteriously disappeared. While engaged in feeding them yesterday afternoon, he noticed a wing protruding from beneath a board walk. He called the coachman, who carried an axe. They pried up the walk, and an animal dashed out at full speed. The coachman was faster, and got in the first blow, but both were knocked out in one round, as the duck thief was a great big skunk.

SEWER WORK DELAYED

Extension of Time Asked by the Company.

WANT TO WAIT TILL SPRING.

Over 12,000 Feet of Pipe Laid, But That Is Not Quite One-Half of the Contract — Counselor Marsh Denies the City's Liability in a Damage Case—Citizens Rapid Transit Committee to Select Routes.

The regular monthly meeting of the City Council was held last evening. All the members were present. In the absence of Clerk MacMurray George B. Wean acted in his place.

The following petitions were read and referred: From B. K. Case and others for crosswalks on Ninth street near the Park Avenue Baptist Church, and College place at Ninth street. From Mrs. F. W. Clark and others, Netherwood, asking for electric lights on Park terrace between Belvidere and Berkley avenues, also on Leland avenue to Cushing road. In connection with the widening of Madison avenue, Samuel Dreier petitioned that he had paid $6 for a set of plans which were drawn up at the request of the Commissioners. J. P. Homan asked the Council for permission to build an extension on his house, 118 West Fifth street.

The Council received a communication that the five new fire hydrants had been placed as follows: Front street and Grant avenue; Front street 500 feet from Grant avenue; Plainfield avenue corner of Stelle avenue; Plainfield avenue corner of Sherman avenue; and Elmwood place corner of West Second street.

Policeman Charles Giese, on account of ill health, sent in his resignation, which was accepted.

Residents of Dunellen avenue asked the Council to give them lights from Front street to Clinton avenue.

The Mayor and Clerk were authorized to secure $4,000 on a note to continue the work on sewers, and the Treasurer was authorized to pay notes as they came due instead of carrying them on the books.

George Lewis was granted a hack license.

Mr. Frost reported that 12,318 feet of sewer pipes had been laid up to date, which is a trifle less than one-half of the work.

Mr. Dumont offered a resolution that the City Treasurer pay the $1,500 fire bond, with interest from July 1 at 5 per cent., as soon as possible. It was adopted.

The petition of Asa Collier, presented at the previous meeting, for a leanto on his building on Sycamore avenue, was taken up and granted.

Mr. Erickson, of the Fire, Water and Lamps Committee, moved that the five new hydrants be accepted by the city, which was adopted.

Property owners on Arlington avenue and West Ninth street asked for a crosswalk on the west side of Arlington avenue. This was referred with power.

The ordinance relating to the laying out of Stelle avenue was adopted on third reading.

Street Committee reported back the petition for a crosswalk on Ninth street, and the walk was ordered laid.

A communication from W. W. Cook stated that great inconvenience had been experienced in getting the right size of pipes for the sewer construction, and asked that the work on Front street be laid over till Spring. On account of the difficulty, the company were unable to finish the work by Dec. 15, hence they asked for an extension of time. It was referred to the Sewer Committee.

The Street Committee, not willing to assume the responsibility of selecting the routes for the proposed extensions of the street railway in the city, asked that the Mayor appoint five citizens to lay out the routes, subject to the approval of the Council. This was adopted.

The ordinance relating to the laying of sidewalks in Netherwood was adopted on third reading. The walks are to be of bluestone flagging, cement or crushed stone, and are as follows: Belvidere avenue from South avenue to Woodland avenue; Woodland avenue from Belvidere to Watchung avenue; South avenue from Netherwood station to Richmond street.

Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh gave his opinion in regard to the bill of the Plainfield Water Supply Company for damages to one of the hydrants July 13, 1894, when two of the fire horses attached to a dump cart ran into the hydrant and broke it. The opinion was that the city is not liable for the acts of firemen in such cases, and therefore the city should not pay the bill.

The Council adjourned at 9:15 to meet again Dec. 14, at 8 p. m.

For rheumatism I have found nothing equal to Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It relieves the pain as soon as applied. J. W. Young, West Liberty, W. V. GRAND OFFICERS ATTEND.

Knights Templar Enjoy a Royal Visitation.

The Sir Knights of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., met at the asylum, 114 East Front street, last evening at 8, for inspection, rehearsal and review. After the work of the evening was concluded all retired to the banquet hall, where a feast was enjoyed and remarks were made by the official visitors and grand officers, as follows:

Eminent Sir John E Rowe, G C G; Very Eminent Sir Edward Mills, Deputy Grand Commander; Eminent Sirs Robert Dingwell, G G; L G Dawson, G S W; W H Sebring, G J W; J J Henry, G S B; and Eminent Sir D C Adams, and Sirs Jacob Kirkner, N Y Dungan, Rev E M Rodman, John M Crane and others. The last named are members of Trinity Commandery. The attendance was very large.

Drunken Brutality.

Arthur Smith, colored, of the boulevard, became drunk and disorderly last evening about 5, and when on Fourth street near Liberty he attacked Mrs. Tobin and John Collins, both aged persons, and beat them severely. He also broke several panes of glass.

Two boys came up town and notified Sergeant Kiely, and he, with Policeman McCue, went to the place of disturbance with a wagon and brought the troublesome man to the station house.

This morning Mrs. Tobin and John Collins made complaints against him, and Justice Nash held him in $250 bail on each charge to await the action of the Grand Jury.

—The first of the course of lectures to be given under the auspices of the Men's Association of Grace Church, in the church building, will be on "Windsor Castle", by Rev. F. M. McAllister, Dec. 6. The lecture will be finely illustrated by stereopticon.

—As the coachman of J. Frank Hubbard turned from Park into North avenue this afternoon one of the reins broke, and he lost control of the horse, which by the single rein guidance was straightway on the sidewalk. Then it proved its gentle nature and good training by standing still while the coachman jumped out, ran to its head, and mended the rein.

THE BROTHERHOOD OF MANKIND.

President Seth Low Entertains an Optimistic View of Our Social Conditions.

The Workingmen's Club is an organization connected with the Episcopal Church of the Holy Communion, New York. It has for its main object the banding together of men for the purpose of mutual helpfulness. It's methods might successfully be adopted in any community. During illness every member of good standing has a physician free, and during the first twelve weeks of such illness he recives $5 weekly. Should his illness be prolonged from 13 to 24 weeks, he receives $3 a week. In the event of his death his next of kin receives as many dollars as there are members in good standing in the club, and in the event of his wife's death he receives as many half dollars as there are members in good standing. During the twenty-two years the club has paid out more than $30,000 in sick and death benefits.

SETH LOW.

At a recent meeting, President Low, of Columbia College, said that the relation of the brain toiler to the hand toiler was very close. Although it may not always be admitted, there are few products of able men's brains that do not work good to those who toil with their hands. No class of people teaches the lesson of fidelity so well as the handicraftsman.

Every railroad train that carries its passengers in safety to their destination proves this. Many people are alarmed at the condition of unrest that seems to prevail. There is no cause for alarm. History fails to show any condition of unrest in the life of a nation that did not ultimately tesult in good.

This is era of combinations. These combinations have wiped out individuals yet combinations are not a bad force. They seem so only because we have not learned how to operate them.

The hostility between combinations and individuals, between capital and labor, will settle itself in good time and in the right way. The speaker believed so, because the Divine power which has brought society from a condition of slavery to individual equality teaches that all men are brothers, and that power will furnish the solution to all social problems which will be satisfactory to all.

THE CAT COMES RIGHT SIDE UP.

A Dog That Thought He Had Mastered the Theory But Hadn't.

A correspondent of the New York Herald writes:

I am somewhat interested in the question why a cat lights on its feet. To the untutored mind of an old farmer this question, so troublesome to French scientists, is perfectly simple. The cat, by a quick muscular movement, more rapid in its effects upon the body than the attraction of gravitation, forms a fulcrum of its own body, which enables it to turn and strike upon its feet.

In this connection it may be interesting for me to relate an amusing scene that I witnessed when a boy at home upon my father's farm. A part of my duties was to bring the cows from a field in a distant part of the farm. On these trips after the cows I was usually accompanied by a small but fleet footed cur dog. On one occasion the dog came suddenly upon a fox, and a race for life immediately commenced.

The field was new, but little cultivated and the surface uneven, caused by trees being uprooted, and after time and decay had done their work a knoll and corresponding depression at the side were left in the surface. Across one of these the fox ran, the dog but a jump behind.

As I was about to realize the height of a boy's ambition by seeing the dog at the next bound leap upon the back of the fox the scene suddenly changed.

The dog, with eyes intently fixed upon the object of his pursuit, failing to observe the lay of the land, turned a half somerset over the knoll, landing on his feet in the depression beyond, and not realizing that he had changed ends continued the race for several rods, not however, in the direction of the fox, but the other way.

Not long since I related this story to a party of gentlemen, and I was at once voted "the cake" for having told the biggest yarn. And as an evidence that it was a yarn, the argument was used that the dog must have landed on his back. But no. He simply did the cat act, struck upon his feet, and his body being reversed ran directly away from the fox.

Boston's Cultured Cabman.

A. Conan Doyle was astonished when a Boston cabman told him "he would rather have a ticket to his lecture than the fare." He thought he was travelling incognito and asked the man how he found him out. The man replied that "he knew him as a member of the Cabman's Literary Guild, to which the lecturer's itinerary had been telegraphed in advance, and that he recognized Dr. Doyle to be a gentleman, because his coat lapels had been evidently grasped by New York reporters, his hair manifestly cut by a Philadelphia barber, his hat seemingly saved with difficulty from the pirates by whom he was surrounded at a Chicago luncheon, while his overshoes bore traces of Buffalo mud and there was an odor of a Utica cigar upon his person." The doctor surrended at indiscretion, and gave to the fellow a ticket for his whole family.

High-water Mark of Sensationalism by a Metropolitan Pastor.

"The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad," was the text chosen by Dr. R. S. MacArthur, most prominent clergyman of the Baptist denomination in New York, recently for his sermon.

"These words express the feeling of patriotic American citizens," said Dr. MacArthur. "We express gratitude to God for peace within our own borders and with all the nations of the earth. We are grateful that during the last election our best citizens and our bravest and noblest women did their duty in creating a wholesome public sentiment, and that the men cast a patriotic ballot. We are grateful for the absence of partisan feeling over the result of the election. The best men of both great parties united to oppose the worst men.

"Tammany Hall was an indescribable monster, part man, part beast, part demon. The monster's triumphant chariot was a beer wagon, his throne a whiskey barrel, his sceptre a policeman's baton, and his crown both civic and ecclesiastical. The civic crown was ivy and bay, dedicated to Venus and Bacchus, and his ecclesiastical crown was the Pope's tiara.

"A recipe for the production of this institution is instructive. Take a large caldron, beneath it place embers from hades; into it put intellectual ignorance, social vulgarity, political venality and religious bigotry. Then add thugism, thievery and murder, and over all liberally sprinkle holy water. Dip out with the ladle of 'communism of pelf,' pour into the black bottle of municipal corruption, then let the Angel of Truth come with a label, which, when placed upon the bottle, will read in red letters. 'Deadly Poison,' and immediately below in black letters, 'Tammany Hall.'

"We have partially secured and still more fully demand protection for the American flag. The American flag will soon wave on ships in every part of the world, ships made in American yards, of American material, by American men, and commanded by American officers and sailors. The flag will be protected from unpatriotic contamination when it floats on the City Hall and other municipal buildings. There are times when we are glad to see the flag intertwined with flags of other nations, but true Americans never wish to see it dishonored by association on a public building with a green rag which is not the flag of any nation. That bit of green stands for national disloyalty and religious bigotry. Ireland has no flag but the British flag.

"We need still greater protection for our public schools. The American public schools should be the nurseries for American patriotism. They are not places where religion should be taught. Teaching of religion belongs to the home and the church. The Church and State must be kept forever separate. To politicians who would use the public schools to advance their selfish ambition or their party's purposes we say, 'Hands off, gentlemen!' To ecclesiastics, to whatever Church they belong, who lay their velvet gloves in which is the iron hand upon the public schools, we again say, 'Hands off, gentlemen!'"

MILITARY TRAINING.

High Type of Physical Development in the German Army.

The stalwart vigor of the German race of to-day might well be obvious to the most superficial observer coming from other lands. And many are of opinion that the favorable causes which have brought this about are likely to tell with undiminished force in the future, says the Chautauquan. Only the other day an English paper noted with "surprise" a series of statistics, from which the unwelcome facts shone forth that whereas the average English boy was heavier than the German at an early age, the difference in weight between them gradually decreased until at manhood the average weight was in favor of the German.

But the army has done more than this. In other countries often a centre of demoralization, in Germany the army has been a source of physical and moral cleanliness, moral in the sense that it compelled these elements to do and obey, which in other countries form and remain the scum of the population. It is to no small extent this military training, from which the Germans are falsely said to fly to other countries, which makes them such successful competitors in every walk of life.

Not a Good Illustration.

Mr. Dowling of New York was speaking of the incompatibility of a union of Church and State in this country. He said:

"Patrick and Biddy had been a long time married, but did not get along well together, for they were almost continually quarreling. It happened, however, that one day when they were sitting opposite the fire, in came the cat and dog, and laid down between them and the fire, and also opposite each other. Presently Biddy speaks up and says:

"'Faith, Patrick, isn't it a shame that we should be always quarreling; see the cat and dog, how peaceably they get along.'

"'Och, Biddy, sure and it isn't a fair comparison at all! Just tie them together and see how they'll act.'"—Middletown Record.

AUTHOR OF BEN BOLT.

Dr. Thomas Dunn English's Unfortunate Early Indiscretion.

Dr. Thomas Dunn English is a Congressman from New Jersey. He is also a poet, novelist, dramatist, physician, lawyer and politician. A most interesting figure, merely to look at, as he stood talking to his younger fellow craftsmen in the New York Cloister Club recently and told the story of Ben Bolt.

Dr. English modestly confesses to 75 years, but his friend, Poet Bunner, claims five more for him, in spite of the records of the University of Pennsylvania, which put him in the class of '39.

The American Cyclopedia twenty years ago said: "He is the author of more than twenty successful dramas"; "he is the author of several novels"; "he is the author of the 'Gallows-Goers,' a rough but vigorous poem of which hundreds of thousands of copies were circulated."

It was the most delightful period in the dinner hour when the dinner is being enjoyed—having been eaten—and the table bears only ash trays and coffee, when a comfortable, inviting silence inspires to monologue after the rattle of general talk, that Dr. English rose to talk to the "youngsters," as he called them, of the Cloister.

"An indiscretion committed more than fifty years ago should not be brought up against a man at such an hour as this," said the Doctor. "Let me tell about—well, say, about the popgun tariff bills, for you know I have a short session to serve yet in Congress."

The Friars laughed him down and called for "Ben Bolt."

"Well," said the Doctor, "I thought when I wrote

"And sweet Alice lies under the stone,

I had done with her and her possible sweetheart 'Ben Bolt,' but it appears not. I wrote those verses in 1843 at the request of N. P. Willis, who, with George P. Morris, had revived the New York Mirror as the New Mirror. Willis asked me for a sea song, and I started one. But I stuck. Possibly some of you younsters may have had that same experience when you have set out to write something to order."

THOMAS DUNN ENGLISH.

The particular "youngster" the speaker happened to be looking at as he said this was William Dean Howells, and the novelist laughed and nodded, as if in assurance that even a traveller from Altruria was sometimes stuck when so unaltruistic as to write anything to order."

"Then," the Doctor continued, "I began on something else, nearly finished it, patched on a piece of the unfinished sea song, and sent the thing to Willis, telling him if it did not suit not to return it, but burn it.

"Well, the lines became popular. It was copied, without credit, in the English papers, where it was assumed to be of British birth. After I saw it in print it seemed to me that the song would go well to music, and I spoke to several composers about it, but they all answered, 'It won't sing.' I thought it would and took the matter into my own hands by writing some music for the words myself.

"But my music did not become so popular as that adapted from a German song by a young singer and actor named Wilson Kneass, a son of a celebrated actress of that time. He had an opportunity to appear in a stage production if he could furnish a new and popular song. A fellow player named Hunt, an Englishman, recited 'Ben Bolt' to Kneass, and suggested it as a song. He had seen the words in an English paper and remembered them. Kneass adapted the music, as I have said, and the song made an immense hit, not only in this country, but in England, where it was sung, parodied, 'answered' and illustrated. It created a furore in London, and was, of course, still supposed to be strictly British. After several revivals, I supposed until recently that I had heard the last of it, but now a gentleman named Du Maurier, whom I never harmed in my life, revives it in 'Trilby.'

"When I first went to Congress, four years ago, I was duly reported in the papers as the author of the song, and it brought me many curious interviews. One member introduced me to his wife whose three Christian names were 'Alice Ben Bolt,' another assured me he had been lulled to sleep in his cradle by his mother singing 'Ben Bolt,' and a third informed me when he introduced me to his wife that it was her singing of 'Ben Bolt,' that won his proposal of marriage. 'I am sorry for it,'" I answered.

The Public Classified.

The public may be divided into three classes: Those who read and remember; they are few.

Those who read and forget: they are many.

Those who do not read: they are most.

Women and Children Were Tortured To Death.

Sickening Details of the Awful Armenian Slaughter Given by Refugees Who Escaped to Athens—Victims Scalded to Death by Kurds—Fiendish Cruelty.

Athens, Dec. 4.—Twenty Armenians from the Sassoun district have arrived here. One of the refugees, a man named Khadjik, states that his uncle and aunt were among the Armenians slaughtered by Kurds, the latter being violated previous to being put to death. He adds that an Armenian priest named Kevont was killed for refusing indignantly to celebrate Turkish rites in his church at Vartemis. The village contained 325 Armenian houses before the Turks attacked it, but when the fugitives left only twenty-five houses remained standing. The guns kept up a continuous fire upon Dalvorig until practically not one stone was left standing upon another.

Selo, the Bey of Initzoun, a Kurd, with a detachment of Kurdish cavalry, went with the Turkish soldiers to the village of Semal and forcibly took the Armenian priest from his church, after disgustingly defiling the sacred vessels and the priests hands. They then bound him on a donkey, which they drove a distance of a few yards. The soldiers then fired at the priest and killed him and the beast to which he was bound.

In the same village the Turkish soldiers entered an Armenian house and violated a woman and her daughter, the latter being fourteen years of age. From this village Selo forcibly took eight Armenian girls and sent them to his harem at Initzoun.

Further atrocities were committed by the Turks at the village of Keliehuzen. Before dawn this place was surrounded by soldiers, and while the inhabitants were still asleep it was set on fire.

The brutal soldiers entered the residence of a man named Arakel, who was asleep with his wife, and tortured them both in a terrible manner with red hot iron.

At Keliehuzen the soldiers killed the Armenian priest, Margos, who, with twenty other inmates of a house, was burned to death, the soldiers preventing anybody from escaping from the burning dwelling.

Dalvorig, it appears, is the largest village in the Province of Sassoun; and its inhabitants, when they learned of the horrors perpetrated by the Turks at Vartemis, attacked the Turks on the frontier. The Turkish commander eventually sent twelve soldiers into Dalvorig in order to learn what had occurred. The Armenians, filled with indignation at the atrocities committed by the Turks at Vartemis, attacked this detachment of Turkish soldiers and put them all to death.

When the Turkish commander heard of the death of his soldiers he determined upon avenging them in the most bloody manner possible. A strong force of Turkish troops was sent to the village with artillery, and the massacre began.

The chief of the village of Cheneg was captured by the soldiers and bound to his two daughters. All three were then scalded to death with boiling water.

A detachment of twenty-five regulars of the Turkish cavalry, after committing inexpressible horrors in the village of Sebghank, went to the village school, and ravished the girls they found there. The cavalrymen then destroyed the building.

Ibo Bey, a notorious Kurd brigand of the village of Diibran and a colonel in the regular army, went with a detachment of Turkish troops to the Armenian villages of Bahlou, Hatezgent and Komk and at each place they committed every crime which it was possible to commit.

After driving out the men they collected the female children of Bahlou together, about two hundred in all, and killed them all with guns and swords. After the massacre the Turkish soldiers regaled themselves with wine and whatever else they could find in the village.

The Kurdish regular troops from Pizan and Bahran entered the Armenian villages of Aliandzig and Aghteg, killed the inhabitants and wrecked their houses.

The number of villages devastated in this manner is thirty-two. The Armenians fled in every possible direction, but many of them were captured by the Turkish troops before they could get away and were slaughtered.

DROWNED IN THEIR CAR.

A Train Plunges Into Lake Champlain with Fatal Results.

Whitehall, N. Y., Dec. 4.—Train No. 4, on the Delaware & Hudson railroad, which left Montreal bound for New York, was thrown from the track one mile and a half north of the Fort Henry tunnel. It was in charge of Conductor McLaughlin, and the engineer was George Long. The train consisted of a mail and express car, baggage car, smoking car, emigrant car, passenger car and drawing-room car.

The engine did not leave the track, but the tender and the mail and express car went crashing along an embankment and finally plunged into Lake Champlain. One end of the smoker also went into the water. The emigrant and passenger cars left the rails, but fortunately their momentum was checked and they remained on the bank.

The express messenger and the mail messenger went down with their car and were drowned, and several others narrowly escaped the same fate. A number of persons received injuries, and for a time intense excitement prevailed.

The names of none of the injured passengers were learned, but the list of casualties as far as obtainable is as follows: Richard Quinn of Ballston, N. Y., express messenger; drowned. Samuel Rouse of Rouse's Point, N. Y., mail agent; drowned. James Coborne of Green Island, baggageman; bruised. James McLaughlin, conductor, of Whitehall, bruised. George Place, extra baggageman, bruised.

DECLARED HER INSANE.

Irene House, Who Has Had Nine Husbands, Must Go to an Asylum.

Trenton, N. J., Dec. 4.—Irene House, the woman who has had nine husbands, one of whom she shot and killed, has been adjudged insane by a jury of twenty-four men. The proceedings were brought in the interest of William Anderson, the woman's only son and her child by her first husband, to prevent her squandering property in which she has a life title with an annual income of $2,000.

The woman who is in jail charged by her eighth husband, Paul K. Redmond, with assault and battery and also with being guilty of infidelity with Harry Carson, her ninth and, as she claims, her legal husband, was visited in her cell by the jury to whom she characterized the proceedings as a conspiracy. She has been in the asylum several times, once for a year immediately after killing House, her second husband, she escaping punishment on the ground of insanity.

WERE OTHER WARRANTS.

Dr. McClintock Must Stand Trial in Pennsylvania.

Meadville, Pa., Dec. 4.—The case of Dr. C. B. McClintock, who is wanted in White Plains, N. Y., on a charge of abducting 16-year-old Hattie Pye, came before the court here. Sheriff Pugsley of White Plains presented the requisition papers. After examination Judge Henderson ruled that as there are two warrants out here anti-dating the White Plains warrant, the requisition papers could not be honored until the local cases were settled. The doctor was returned to jail.

New Torpedo Boats.

Washington, Dec. 4.—The secretary of the navy will to-day advertise for proposals for three torpedo boats for which congress appropriated $450,000. Drained Life's Dregs.

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 4.—Mrs. Edith Armstrong, once Edith Forney, of an aristocratic Virginia family, and niece of John W. THE HOUSE AND SENATE

How the President's Message Was Received.

Apparent Listlessness Greeted the Document in Both Chambers—Cheers and Applause for Reed and Chairman Wilson—Many Important Senatorial Resolutions.

Washington, Dec. 4.—The galleries were crowded when the house begun its session. Beyond some uproarious cheering when ex-Speaker Reed appeared on the floor, and a round of milder applause when Chairman Wilson came in, there were no scenes of great interest.

The house proceeded to business without any formality other than that of ordinary meeting days. Much attention was given to the president's message during the first hour of its reading but interest lagged and it did not revive until the part dealing with Mr. Carlisle's bond scheme was read. Silence marked the conclusion, and after the death of Representative Wright, of Pennsylvania, had been announced, the house adjourned as a mark of respect to his memory.

In the senate the reading of the message attracted but little attention. The voice of the secretary was so indistinct that the words could not be heard a dozen paces from his desk. When the reading had been concluded Mr. George (dem., Miss.) introduced a resolution instructing the committee on rules to report amendments to the rules giving the senate power to come to a vote at any time on any pending question after reasonable opportunity for debate. The matter was referred to the committee on rules. Mr. Hoar (rep., Mass.) introduced another, requesting the president to communicate, if not incompatible with public interests, information as to alleged cruelties committed on Armenians in Turkey, especially on those who had declared their intentions to become naturalized in the United States. Mr. Blanchard (dem., La.) also introduced another on the same subject, declaring the reported outrages a blot on the civilization of the age; and requesting the president to communicate the remonstrance to the government of Turkey.

Mr. Turpie (dem., Ind.) advocated a change in the method of choosing United States senators, and declaring that the present method tends to mar and mutilate the system of popular represenative government. The resolution was laid on the table, with a notice that Mr. Turpie will address the senate on the subject next Thursday.

Mr. Lodge (rep., Mass.) called on the president for information as to the delivery by the United States consul at Shanghai of two Japanese citizens to the Chinese authorities. Mr. Peffer (pop., Kan.) asked that the judiciary committee be instructed to inquire and report as to whether the recent issue of United States bonds was authorized by any act of congress now in force. He also called on the president to inform the senate as to the facts and circumstances that necessitated the use of United States troops in Chicago last July.

The vice-president announced his signature to the bill passed by both houses last session granting the right of way through the Arlington reservation for electric railway purposes. Mr. Gorman's comment on this announcement was his remark, in an undertone, that a railroad bill was the first thing to be attended to at this session.

The majority of the democratic senators refused to talk of the president's message. Senator Brice of Ohio said: "The message is pretty nearly all figures and, although I have not verified them I suppose they are correct. His currency scheme is a dream and like all dreams entirely too visionary to be worth anything."

The republicans heartily condemned the whole affair.

Mr. Platt of Connecticut said: "There are two things that stand out prominently in this message. If the president thinks the present evils are to be cured by further doses of free trade and an effort to get free ships, he has failed to prove it."

Mr. Hawley of Connecticut said: "The message is disappointing. It was supposed there would be something in it. It is most remarkable that it wholly omits any reference whatever to the amazing expression of opinion of the people in the recent elections.

"As to foreign affairs the president's course is reactionary and un-American. He says nothing of the immensely important Nicaraguan canal and indicates a desire to retire from our policy in Samoa. Until Mr. Carlisle's report shall appear no opinion can be expressed on his financial policy. So far as it can be understood it proposes an inflation of paper currency on an insufficient basis and means a revival in some form of the old state banks."

Mr. Hoar of Massachusetts said: "The message makes no contribution of importance to the measures for the relief of the people in their present uncomfortable condition. It indicates the president's consciousness of the fact that he will not be listened to by any considerable portion of the people, either in his own party or among his antagonists, and that he makes his communication in conformity with custom and in obedience to the constitutional requirement."

Mr. Wilson of West Virginia, the chairman of the house committee on ways and means, simply stated that he was glad the president had taken the position he had on sugar—favoring a repeal of the duty on the refined product.

"His recommendations regarding an elastic currency," said Mr. Wilson, "are important but deserve to be carefully studied before expressing an opinion."

Mr. William A. Stone of Pennsylvania said: "The message is simply a statement in detail of the executive acts of the government, confessing the fact that a deficit exists in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, of $69,803,260 brought about as we claim, and as the country has declared, by democratic tariff legislation."

Speaker Crisp and ex-Speaker Reed both declined to express an opinion.

A WONDERFUL AUTO-HARP.

It Started a Great Revival in Blue Point, Long Island.

A wave of religious feeling has struck the little settlement of Blue Point, L. I. Within a month twenty-one converts have been baptized in Great South Bay, just at the end of Blue Point avenue, the main street of the village. The Blue Pointers are very much in earnest about this awakening, and when a Blue Pointer is really in earnest about anything it means something. Religion is the only topic of town talk now, and the crowning glory of this revival is the conversion of the Cochranes.

In response to an invitation, Deacon Hillyer came down from Brooklyn bringing with him an auto-harp.

"I knew almost nothing about the instrument when I got up to play," said Mr. Hillyer to one of the congregation afterward, "and I feared that I would make mistakes, but the spirit was within me, and it made the music through my fingers."

This marked the real beginning of the revival. Many who were present went home, and, in the language of the converted, "became thoughtful." Among these was young Ralph Abrams, who has for some time been "keeping company," as the villagers say, with Miss Alice L'Hommedieu, a pretty girl who lives with her aunt, Mrs. Cochrane, near the bay. Miss L'Hommedieu had been converted, and, between her influence and that of the meeting, Abrams decided that he wanted to be converted. He brought his brother Frank and his sister Venie to the same conclusion regarding themselves.

All three of the Abrams were baptized and became regular attendants at the meetings thereafter. As Alice L'Hommedieu was also a regular attendant, it was quite natural that young Abrams should walk home with her after meeting. One night when Deacon Hillyer had made a powerful address, the young man and the girl, while walking home, agreed to pray, after separating, for the conversion of the girl's aunt, Mrs. Cochrane, and her children. Mr. Cochrane had always been a devout man, but his wife had taken little or no interest in church matters. On reaching home Miss L'Hommedieu went to bed and began to pray for her aunt. In the midst of her prayers there came a knock on her door, and in response to her call of "Come in," Mrs. Cochrane entered.

"Alice," said she, "I've had a call to come to the Lord. I felt as if something were drawing me to renounce sin and be saved, and I was compelled to come to you and tell you of it."

"Praise the Lord!" exclaimed the girl. "I knew it; I knew He would call you!"

"He will save my children, too," continued the woman. "I know they will be saved, and I feel that now is the time. Let us go and call them."

The two women dressed themselves and went to the room of Percy Cochrane, who is nineteen years old. Before they could tell him the object of their visit he exclaimed:

"I am saved! The spirit has come to me! Praise the Lord! I have heard His word and believe it!"

By this time his younger brother, Edward, and their sister, Effie, had arisen. They, too, had felt the spirit call them and had come to tell their tidings of joy.

"Let us all go to the parlor," suggested Miss L'Hommedieu," and hold a meeting of praise and thanksgiving for the wonderful light that has been shown to us."

So they all went to the parlor and spent most of the night in praying and singing. On the following day the circumstances of the wonderful conversion of the Cochranes was known all through the village, and many came to congratulate them and rejoice with them. They were baptized on the next Sunday in the open waters of the bay.

What the villagers regard as a remarkable case is that of Mr. and Mrs. Gale. They had attended one or two of the meetings. One night they entered and announced their conversion.

"The spirit has come to us," said Mr. Gale. "We have seen the error of our ways, and have turned from them. We feel that we are saved, and we want to be baptized in the faith."

So far the revival has been confined to the Baptists. The village is about evenly divided between Baptists and Methodists. The Methodists were invited to join the Baptists and make the revival unsectarian, but they declined. They said that when they wanted a revival they would get up one of their own.

Indian Runners.

An Indian has been known to carry a letter from Gauzapares to Chihuahua and back again in five days, says a writer in Scribner's, the distance being nearly 800 miles. In some parts where the Tarahumaris serve the Mexicans they are used to run in the wild horses, driving them into the corral. It may take them two or three days to do it, sleeping at night and living on a little pinole. They bring in the horses thoroughly exhausted, while they themselves are still fresh. They will outrun any horse if you give them time enough. They will pursue deer in the snow, or with dogs in the rain, for days and days, until at last the animal is cornered and shot with arrows, or falls an easy prey from sheer exhaustion, its hoofs dropping of.

An Eccentric General.

Few commanders care to imitate the conduct of Bourbaki, when called upon to deal with a spy during the Austro-French war of '59.

"You are a spy!" said the general when the fellow was brought before him.

"Si Signor," was the answer.

"And you are sent by the Austrians?"

"Si Signor."

"Very well," was the remark. Then turning to an aide-de-camp.

"Take him round our positions, and show him everything, and"—this to the spy—"when you think you have seen all you want to see, go back to those who have sent you and tell them with my compliments that I am waiting for them."

DRAMA AND OPERA.

PALMER COX'S BROWNIES GROW IN PUBLIC FAVOR.

Grand Opera Promises Greater Successes than it Achieved Last Season. Many of Sardou's Plays in America. Living Pictures Approaching Suggestiveness.

Nothing could have been more brilliant in actual achievement or richer in promise than the opening of the opera season in New York. "Romeo and Juliet," when interpreted by such artists as Mme. Melba, Jean and Edouard de Rezke and Pol Plancon, is a constant delight. To say anything new of a work that has been heard for nearly 30 years is next to impossible. It is pleasant to note, however, that this opera is at last and most deservedly meeting with that appreciation which was denied it for many years. Perhaps Jean de Reské's incomparable embodiment of Romeo has as much to do with the present popularity of the work as anything else. Mme. Melba seems to have caught something of the tenor's spirit. I for my own part took much keener delight in the beautifully poetic and tender manner which marked her singing of the balcony scene music than in the brilliant waltz which the audience insisted upon hearing the second time. But then sustained tones coming from so pure a voice always gives one more pleasure than the most intricate and dazzling feats of vocalization. Edouard de Rezke was the Friar. His is such a gloriously sonorous voice that you can never think of anything else. Like his brother, he is always bent on being dramatically discreet, but whether he happens to sing Marcel or Friar Laurence or the King in Lorengrin, you always catch yourself saying, "Heavens, what a voice!"

M. Sardou will be well represented on the New York stage this season. Besides "A Woman's Silence," two more of the great French playwright's latest works are to be produced here within the next two months, while Mrs. Langtry promises us a revival of "La Patrie," probably in January. The first of the new plays to be seen is "Gismonda," which Mme. Bernhardt has just produced in Paris with great success, if the Parisian press is to be believed; and which Miss Fanny Davenport will present to the American public for the first time at the Fifth Avenue Theatre in December. The other new play I refer to is "Mme. Sans Gene," in which Miss Katherine Kidder will be seen at the Broadway Theatre on January 14, and which Mlle. Rejane will present in the original at Abbey's about a month later. Of "Gismonda" the French critics say it is "a work of high literary merit, as well as of real dramatic power."

Few productions this winter have so minimized the usual difference between promise and accomplishment as the dramatic presentment of Palmer Cox's familiar "Brownies." The exactness with which these whimsical figures have been transferred to the stage is a matter of considerable doubt, but there is enough of the familiar characteristics of the playful people to give to the performance a refreshingly novel aspect. Of course, actors could never be found who possess, even approximately, appropriate physical qualifications for brownies, and the attempt to secure this effect by artificial means would have made them too unwieldy for activity. A good enough illusion has been secured, however, to supply new and picturesque figures to the light style of entertainment. This in itself is an accomplishment to be grateful for, but the attention that the brownies attract is deserved for more important reasons. It is not to Mr. Cox's quaint costumes, or the graceful designs of Mr. Birch, that the brownies owe their prosperity in their fleshly form so much as to the fact that they have been endowed in their new creation with nimble brains as well as heels, with a brightness of speech and a spryness of humor that their pantomimic predecessors seldom possessed. Credit for this is doubtless due to Ben Teal, the director of the production. There is no dazzling wit in the brownies' talk, nor any triumphs of humor, but it is all clear-cut. It may be simple in its intent at times, but the leaden dullness of what we have often received as stage humor in such performances is gratefully missed. The lyrics are as simple, but as effective, and are often poetical in their whimsicalities of rhyme and fancy. The costumes designed by Reginald Birch are genuinely artistic. The "Brownies" dressmaking bills are probably not to be compared in size to "Cinderella's," nor are the surroundings ever so grand. But there is noticeable in costume, scenery, and action the force of an intelligence making an effort to do something else than unroll yards of stuffs and scenery before the gaze of an audience that is dazzled into an indifference as to what it hears so long as it sees. There are some delightfully effective scenes among the brownies' surroundings, and the final one is particularly striking in its arrangement of colors and its grouping. Its success is not, however, due to any extravagance of outlay, but to an artistic taste and direction which shows how much more should be valued such a faculty in a play's production.

A new lot of "living pictures" is shown in "Little Christopher Columbus," at the Garden. There are sixteen of the tableaux, and a round dozen are imitations of masterpieces of the nude in art. The naked figures are feminine, of course, and consist of live women posed against painted backgrounds. The present set is bolder than the previous one in its preponderance of unclothed bodies. The poor creatures thus exposed to public view are symmetrical in form and often beautiful in face. They are nearly or quite nude, so far as the eye of the spectator can discern, the texture and hue of the gossamer covering, where there is any, being an undetectable counterfeit of skin. In most cases the woman is displayed almost completely in such a skin-tight envelope, from neck to the very ends of her fingers and toes, every detail of her physical exterior distinctly visible under the intense light that is thrown on the "picture," and without a seam or jointure in the thin, soft cover, or a sign of anything except skin next to its underside, to relieve the illusion that it is all her own surface that is in view. Of course there is excellent art in the wonderful fidelity with which these women reproduce the famous pictures of Bougereau, Heyse, Hottot and Bisson, and they will on that account be defended against the charge of indecency. But, what would be said of an exhibition of exclusively nude works at the Academy of Design? And would these "living pictures" draw in the money that they do if the women in them were not alive?

Manual and Grammar.

The Plainfield Manual Training School will in future be known as the Plainfield Manual Training and Grammar School. The addition of the regular school course has been found to be necessary to meet the public requirements.

A. B. Clemens is professor of Higher Mathematics, C. E. Buell instructs in Telegraphy and Motor Electricity, Miss P. S. Dalziel teaches the classes in Clay Modeling and Linear Drawing.

The morning is devoted to scholastic work and the afternoon to manual training. The result of the combination gives great satisfaction to both parents and pupils. Mr. Dalziel considers he has good reason to feel encouraged by the reception his efforts have met with, and he fully appreciates the kind remarks made about his success.

Famous Racers Coming.

There are ten thoroughbred race horses in the play "The Prodigal Daughter" which opens at Music Hall for two nights, Dec. 12-13. The horses are among the best bred racers on the English turf. Roquefort is a descendant of the famous Touchstone; Gadabout is a grandson of Newminster; Calais is a grandson of the historic Blair Athol; Bedfellow is a grandson of Scottish Chief; Hop Scotch is of the Gladiator family; Lozenge by Lowland Chief; Gazelle is a descendant of Newminster and so is Columbus. The horses have each a wonderful record on the English turf, and are the finest specimens of race horses ever brought to this country.

REMARKABLE CURES

Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.

I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR PETER G. EYCK, OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:

For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

THE TALK OF GOTHAM

A ROUSING TESTIMONIAL TO DR. PARKHURST BY PROMINENT MEN.

Flight of a Star Witness of the Lexow Committee to Europe. $25,000 Said to Have Been Furnished by the Police. Features of the $350,000 Robbery.

Mrs. Augusta Thurow, who formerly kept the establishment at 23 Second Avenue, and whose sensational testimony before the Lexow Committee resulted in the dismissal of one police captain, five sergeants and two wardmen from the force, has gone to Europe. All of these former policemen have been indicted by the Grand Jury on the strength of Mrs. Thurow's testimony, and it was on her testimony that reliance was placed to convict the indicted men. What is interesting in connection with her disappearance is the rumor that the men under indictment made up a purse of $25,000 to defeat their conviction, and that a good part of that amount went to Mrs. Thurow to insure her absence from this country for a long time.

The robbery of the Shoe and Leather Bank by a trusted bookkeeper and an accomplice continues to stir banking and police circles. There are many queer facts in connection with the theft. The officers of the bank accuse a man named Frederick Baker of stealing the sum of $54,000 by drawing it over the paying teller's desk in checks in sums of from $200 to $400 at various and frequent times during the past eight years. The fact that this man came several times a week and drew sums of from $200 to $400, it is asserted, was a matter of common note, so common that the bank employees knew him as the '$200 man.' Now, it is ridiculous to suppose that if Baker went so often to the bank to draw checks as to be known as the $200 man that other bank officers would not have noticed it. They would certainly have seen the man drawing check after check, and should have noted that he paid nothing in. This looks queer. There is only one logical way to account for the withdrawal of so large an amount, to my mind, and that is that several men drew the money on the checks, thus allaying the suspicions of the tellers and the bank officers. Then this self-confessed thief, Seely, charged it all up to Baker's account. The fact remains, however, that Baker committed suicide as soon as the robbery became publicly known.

More than five hundred men recently attended the banquet given Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst by the City Vigilance League of which he is the founder. Among them were men who are foremost among those in the city. Women came and sat in the gallery and applauded, even cheered, with the men. There was a deep-seated earnestness and enthusiasm. It was, as Dr. Parkhurst said in what was perhaps the most remarkable speech he has ever made in this city, one of the finest gatherings of men that had come together in New York for many years. When Dr. Parkhurst arose there was a mighty outburst. Cheers were given again and again. Every man was on his feet lending his voice. Bishop Potter cheered decorously. Father Ducey shouted with the enthusiasm of a boy. After bowing his acknowledgements to the cheering diners he said in part: "I cannot look upon such a throng of men, realizing that every fibre of unqualified earnestness and sincerity, and feel any particular anxiety for the future of New York city. We have to remember, however, that it is one thing to win a victory and it is quite another thing and a far more difficult thing wisely and concertedly to utilize that victory. Our future is in the hands of God and in our own. Many persons do not fully understand just what this league stands for. Some of you allied yourselves with us when it was considered neither reputable nor respectable to be associated with myself. It is funny now, but it was not funny then. You and I, young friends, are not in this business for the loaves and fishes, and let me tell you that therein lies ninety-nine-one-hundreths of our power. We do not care a rap for ourselves. But do you realize that more than 100,000 men inside this city believed on Nov. 6 in the municipal government represented by such men as Divver, Sheehan and dirty Koch? We must not forget the strength that lies in 100,000 men, and you and I must go to work to help convert them, and I believe that if our campaign had lasted three weeks longer we would have added to our majority against Tammany by 20,000. Bishop Potter followed Dr. Parkhurst. "My brother, whose services to this city and to the country have been so large, has often been challenged and criticised because he was supposed to have stepped outside his vocation," he began. "I want to say, with all my heart, from the first to the last he held himself rigidly within its dominion. No word that he has ever spoken, no act that he has ever done, is inconsistent with his office and ordination as a minister of Jesus Christ." This, coming from one of the highest dignitaries of one of the most conservative churches in the city, was greeted with a tremendous outburst of applause. "If we want justification of the course of our good brother here, we have it in the early John the Baptist, of whom he is the true successor," the Bishop went on. "Let us hope that the heroism and prophetic foresight with which God has crowned him will make us willing always to follow his lead."

Dr. Parkhurst chatted with General Horace Porter, who presided, while Charles Stewart Smith found a topic which interested Bishop Potter, who wore his clerical black waistcoat. On the end Dr. Lyman Abbott and Chancellor McCracken talked cheerfully. On the other side of General Porter was Mayor Schieren, who conversed with Mr. Choate when he wasn't talking to Father Ducey, in whom James C. Carter was also much interested. Everett P. Wheeler was at the end of the table. The gallery was filled with well-dressed women. In their centre Mrs. Parkhurst was recognized. There was a shout. Then every man stood up and turned his face towards the balcony, and they gave three good cheers for Mrs. Parkhurst, calling her name. She stood up, smiling and happy and self-possessed, and waved back her thanks with her fluttering handkerchief. ROGER LEWIS.

Ask Your Druggist For It.

Such strong proofs of the cures made by Dr David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy have been brought to public notice through the various newspaper investigations, that it has become the standard medicine for the diseases for which it is prepared.

Dr. G. H. Ingraham, of Amsterdam N. Y., states where the regular prescriptions used in a case of kidney disease and gravel utterly failed, he prescribed Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and it cured the patient.

Dr. Wm. Smith, of Jewett's Heights, N. Y., prescribed Favorite Remedy for Mrs. Casper Brooks, of Athens, N.Y., who was suffering from kidney disease and ulceration of the stomach; after the second day steady improvement was noted, and final permanent recovery.

Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy acts directly upon the kidneys, liver and blood in cases of nervousness, dyspepsia, rheumatism and Bright's disease; it has made most pronounced cures, after all other treatements have failed.

Good Trotting at the Park.

At the Gentlemen's Driving Park, Thanksgiving Day, three fine races were given.

The first was a five-mile race between horses owned by John Benner and James Guttridge. Mr. Benner's horse won, time 19 minutes.

The second race was one in which Mr. Benner drove his horse five miles to beat 18 minutes. The time made was 15:30.

Ellis Campbell's gray running horse, driven by Ed Campbell, won against Mr. Hayes's trotting horse "Andy".

The attendance at the Park was good.

A MAN OF NOTE.

One of Vermont's Foremost Citizens Speaks Out.

AND HIS POWERFUL WORDS HAVE NO UNCERTAIN SOUND.

He Regrets One Thing Which You Need Not, if You Heed His Words.

Hon. R. D. Slayton has spoken out. From the most prominent man in Stowe, Vt., his powerful words are not only of great interest to all, but carry the greatest weight.

"I have been troubled," he stated, "with nervousness, indigestion and sleeplessness for several years. My food distressed me terribly and caused much gas. If I overdid a little, my stomach would throw up any food taken.

"Any sudden start would unstring my nerves and leave me fearfully unsettled. I had heard for some time of the virtues of that wonderful medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and now determined to use it.

HON. R. D. SLAYTON.

"I can truly say that I was greatly benefited by the use of two bottles. I sleep well, my food digests all right, and my nerves are strong."

This is the kind of evidence you want, and the advice of just such a prominent man is what should decide you. Take his advice and use Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It will make you well and strong.

This great medicine is the discovery and prescription of Dr. Greene, of 35 W. 14th street, New York City, the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor can be consulted free by all, personally or by letter.

Text of the President's Address to Congress.

Little of Importance in It Relating To Either the Tariff or the Bond Issue—Against Differential Sugar Duties—The Spanish Outrages—Army and Navy Matters—Not Satisfied With the Government of Samoa—Civil Service Upheld—His Opinions on the Gold Question.

Washington, Dc. 4.—President Cleveland's message to congress was received at the senate and house at twelve o'clock. It was turned over to the clerks and read after the transaction of the usual routine business. After the usual introductory President Cleveland refers to the advantages of a consistent and firm foreign policy, and then says:

"During the past year, pursuant to a law of congress, commissioners were appointed to the Antwerp Industrial Exposition. Through the participation of American exhibitors fell far short of completely illustrating our national ingenuity and industrial achievements, yet it was creditable in view of the brief time allowed for preparation. I have endeavored to impress upon the Belgian government the needlessness and positive harmfulness of its restrictions upon the importation of certain of our food products, and have strongly urged that the rigid supervision and inspection under our laws are amply sufficient to prevent the exportation from this country of diseased cattle and unwholesome meat.

"The termination of the civil war in Brazil has been followed by the general prevalence of peace and order. It appearing at an early stage of the insurrection that its course would call for unusual watchfulness on the part of this government, our naval force in the harbor of Rio de Janeiro was strengthened. This precaution, I am satisfied, tended to restrict the issue to a simple trial of strength between the Brazilian government and the insurgents, and to avert complications which at times seemed imminent. Our firm attitude of neutrality was maintained to the end. The insurgents received no encouragement of eventual asylum from our commanders, and such opposition as they encountered was for the protection of our commerce and was clearly justified by public law.

"Although the government of Brazil was duly notified that the commercial arrangement existing between the United States and that country based on the third section of the Tariff Act of 1890, was abrogated on August 28, 1894, by the taking effect of the tariff law now in force, that Government subsequently notified us of its intention to terminate such arrangement on the first day of January, 1895, in the exercise of the right reserved in the agreement between the two countries. I invite attention to the corespondence between the Secretary of State and the Brazilian minister on this subject.

OUR FOREIGN RELATIONS.

"The commission organized under the convention which we had entered into with Chili for settlement of the outstanding claims of each government against the other, adjourned at the end of the period stipulated for its continuance, leaving undetermined a number of American cases which had been duly presented. These claims are not barred and negotiations are in progress for their submission to a new tribunal.

"On the 17th of March last a new treaty with China in furthur regulation of emigration was signed at Washington, and on August 13th it received the sanction of the senate. Ratification on the part of China and formal exchange are awaited to give effect to this mutually beneficial convention.

"A gratifying recognition of the uniform impartiality of this country towards all foreign states was manifested by the coincident request of the Chinese and Japanese governments the agents of the United States government should, within proper limits, afford protection to the subjects of the other during the suspension of diplomatic relations due to a state of war. This delicate office was accepted, and a misapprehension which gave rise to the belief that in affording this kindly unofficial protection our agents would exercise the same authority which the withdrawn agents of the billigerents had exercised, was promptly corrected. Although the war between China and Japan endangers no policy of the United States it deserves our gravest consideration, by reason of its disturbance of our growing commercial interests in the two countries and the increased dangers which may result to our citizens domiciled or sojourning in the interior of Chna.

"Acting under a stipulation in our treaty with Korea (the first concluded with a western power) I felt constrained at the beginning of the controversy to tender our good offices to induce an amicable arrangement of the initial difficulty growing out of the Japanese demands for administrative reforms in Korea; but the unhappy precipitation of actual hostilities defeated this kindly purpose.

"Deploring the destructive war between the two most powerful of eastern nations and anxious that our commercial interests in those countries should be preserved and that the safety of our citizens there shall not be jeopardized, I would not hesitate to heed any intimation that our friendly aid for the honorable termination of hostilities would be acceptable to both belligerents.

THE BEHRING SEA TROUBLES.

"Acting upon the reported discovery of Texas fever in cargoes of American cattle, the German prohibition against importations of live stock and fresh meats from this country has been revived. It is hoped that Germany will soon become convinced that the inhibition is as needless as it is harmful to mutual interests.

"The German government has also protested against that provision of the customs tariff act which imposes a discriminating duty of one-tenth of one cent a pound on sugars coming from countries paying an export bounty thereon, claiming that the exaction of such duty is in contravention of articles five and nine of the treaty of 1828 with Prussia.

"Early in the present year an agreement was reached with Great Britain concerning instructions to be given to the naval commanders of the two governments in Behring sea and the contiguous North Pacific ocean, for their guidance in the execution of the award of the Paris tribunal of arbitration and the enforcement of the regulations prescribed, for the protection of seal life in the waters mentioned. An understanding has also been reached for the payment by the United States of $425,000, in full satisfaction of all claims which may be made by Great Britain for damages growing out of the controversy as to fur seals in Behring sea, or the seizure of British vessels engaged in taking seal in those waters.

THE BLUEFIELDS DIFFICULTY.

"Prominent among the questions of the year was the Bluefields incident, in what is known as the Mosquito Indian strip, bordering on the Atlantic Ocean and within the jurisdiction of Nicaragua. By the treaty of 1860 between Great Britain and Nicaragua the former government expressly recognized the sovereignty of the latter over the strip, and a limited form of self-government was guaranteed to the Mosquito Indians, to be exercised according to their customs, for themselves and other dwellers within their limits. The so-called native government, which grew to be largely made up of aliens, for many years disputed the right to maintain therein a practically independent municipal government.

"Early in the past year efforts of Nicaragua to matain sovereignty over the Mosquito territory led to serious disturbances culminating in the suppression of the native government and the attempted substitution of an impracticable composite administration, in which Nicaragua and alien residents were to participate. Failure was followed by an insurrection which for a time subverted Nicaraguan rule, expelling her officers and restoring the old organization. This, in turn, gave place to the existing local government established and upheld by Nicaragua.

"Although the alien interests arrayed against Nicaragua in these transactions have been largely American, and the commerce of that region for some time has been largely and still is chiefly controlled by our citizens, we cannot for that reason challenge the rightful sovereignty of Nicaragua over this important part of her domain.

"For some months one, and during part of the time two, of our naval ships have been stationed at Bluefields for the protection of all legitimate interests of our citizens. In September last the government at Managua expelled from its territory twelve or more foreigners, including two Americans, for alleged participation in the seditious or revolutionary movements against the republic, but through the earnest remonstrance of this government the two Americans have been permitted to return to the peaceful management of their business.

"Our naval commanders at the scene of these disturbances, by their constant exhibition of firmness and good judgement, contributed largely to the prevention of more serious consequences and to the restoration of quiet and order. I regret that in the midst of these occurrences there happened a most grave and irritating failure of Nicaraguan justice.

HOW JUSTICE MISCARRIED.

"An American citizen named Wilson, residing at Rama, in the Mosquito territory, was murdered by one Arguello, the acting governor of the town. After some delay the murderer was arrested, but so insecurely confined or guarded that he escaped, and notwithstanding our repeated demands it is claimed that his recapture has been impossible by reason of his flight beyond Nicaraguan jurisdiction."

The president then refers with sorrow to the death of Czar Alexander, and states that two American citizens were imprisoned in his country, but that both were released through Secretary Gresham's interference. He then speaks of and deplores the semi-weekly revolutions in South American states, and then takes up the Spanish outrages upon American vessels. He says:

TROUBLES WITH SPAIN.

"Unreasonable and unjust fines imposed by Spain on the vessels and commerce of the United States have demanded from time to time during the last twenty years earnest remonstrance on the part of our government. In the immediate past exorbitant penalties have been imposed upon our vessels and goods by customs authorities of Cuba and Porto Rico for clerical errors of the most trivial character in the manifests or bills of lading. In some cases fines amounting to thousands of dollars have been levied upon cargoes or the carrying vessels when the goods in question were entitled to free entry. Fines have been exacted even when the error had been detected and the Spanish authorities notified before the arrival of the goods in port.

"This conduct is in strange contrast with the considerate and liberal treatment extended to Spanish vessels and cargoes in our ports in like cases. No satisfactory settlement of these vexatious questions has yet been reached.

"The Mora case, referred to in my last annual message, remains unsettled. From the diplomatic correspondence on this subject, which has been laid before the senate, it will be seen that this government has offered to conclude a convention with Spain for disposal by arbitration of outstanding claims between the two countries, except the Mora claim, which, having been long ago adjusted, now only awaits payment as stipulated. I regret to say that no definite reply to this offer has yet been made and all efforts to secure payment of this unsettled claim have been unavailing."

Briefly touching upon the Samoan troubles, he says that the present joint government of the Unitd States, Germany and Great Britain is too weak to last, and is most unsatisfactory. He says our entanglement in the affair is against the teachings of the men who laid the foundation of the country and suggests that the United States withdraw from the agreement.

REVENUES AND EXPENDITURES.

"The secretary of the treasury reports that the receipts of the government from all sources of revenue during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, amounted to $372,802,498.29, and its expenditures to $442,605,758.87, leaving a deficit of $69,803,260.58. There was a decrease of $15,952,674.66 in the ordinary expenses of the government, as compared with the fiscal year 1893.

"The value of our total dutiable imports amounted to $275,199,086, being $146,657,525 less than during the preceding year, and the importations free of duty amounted to $379,795,536, being $64,748,675 less than during the preceding year. The receipts from customs were $23,536,486.11 less, and from internal revenue $13,836,539.97 less than in 1893.

"The total tax collected from distilled spirits was $85,259,250.25; on manufactured tobacco $28,617,896.62, and fermented liquors, $31,414,788.04. Our exports of merchandise, domestic and foreign, amounted during the year to $892,140,572, being an increase over the preceding year of $44,495,378.

"The total amount of gold exported during the fiscal year was $76,898,061 as against $108,680,444 during the fiscal year 1893. The amount imported was $72,449,119, as against $21,174,381 during the previous year. The imports of silver were $13,286,552, and the exports were $50,451,265.

"The total bounty paid upon the production of sugar in the United States for the fiscal year was $12,100,208.89, being an increase over the payments made during the preceding year. The amount of bounty paid from July 1, 1894, to August 28, 1894, the time when further payments ceased by operation of law, was $966,185.84. The total expenses incurred in the payment of the bounty upon sugar during the fiscal year was $130,140.85.

BANKS AND BANKING.

"During the calendar year 1893 the production of precious metals in the United States was estimated at 1,739,323 fine ounces of gold, of he commercial and coinage value of $35,955,000, and 60,000,000 fine ounces of silver, of the bullion or market value of $46,800,000 and of the coinage value of $77,576,000. It is estimated that on the first day of July, 1894, the stock of meallic money in the United States, consisting of coin and buillion, amounted to $1,251,640,958, of which $627,923,201 was gold and $624,347,757 was silver.

"Fifty national banks were organized during the year ending October 31, 1894, with a capital of $5,285,000, and seventy-nine, with a capital of $10,475,000, went into voluntary liquadation. Twenty-one banks, with a capital of $2,770,000, were placed in the hands of receivers.

"The total number of national banks in existence on the 31st day of October last was 3,756, being 40 less than on the 31st day of October, 1893. The capital stock paid in was $672,671,365, being $9,67[illegible] less than at the same time in the previous year, and the surplus fund and undivided profits, less ex- $353,121,082.10, which was $16,089780 less than on October 31, 1893.

"The circulation was decreased $1,741,563. The obligations of the banks to each other were increased $117,268,334, and the individual deposits were $277,294,489 less than at the corresponding date in the previous year. Loans and discounts were $161,206,923 more than at the same time the previous year, and checks and other cash items were $90,349,963 more. The total resources of the banks at the date mentioned amounted to $3,473,922,055, as against $3,109,563,248.36 in 1893.

CHANGES IN THE ARMY.

"From the report of the secretary of war it appears that the strength of the army on September 30 1894, was 2,135 officers and 25,765 enlisted men. The abolition of all depots, it is predicted, will furthermore effect an annual reduction approximating $250,000 in the direct expenditures, besides promoting generally the health, morals, and discipline of the troops. The execution of the policy of concentrating the army at important centres of population and transportation has resulted in the abandonment of fifteen of the smaller posts, which was effected under a plan which assembles organizations of the same regiment hitherto widely separated. This renders our small forces more readily effective for any service, besides considerably decreasing the cost of its maintenance.

"Among other things is the adoption of three-battalion formation of regiments, which for several years has been indorsed by the secretaries of war and the generals commanding the army. Compact in its self, it provides a skeleton organization, ready to be filled out in the event of war, which is peculiarly adapted to our strength and requirements; and the fact that every other nation, with a single exception, has adopted this formation to meet the conditions of modern warfare, should alone secure for the recommendation an early consideration.

THE POSTAL SERVICE.

The work of the attorney general's office is the next matter discussed by the president. He advocates the abolition of the fee system in paying federal court officers, and believes that a permanent federal court should be established in the Indian territory to deal with all Indian questions.

Referring to the post-office department, he says:

"The transactions of the postal service indicate with barometric certainty the fluctuations in the business of the country. Inasmuch, therefore, as business complications continued to exist throughout the last year to an unforseen extent it is not surprising that the deficiency of revenues to meet the expenditures of the post-office department, which was estimated in advance at about eight million dollars.

"Six hundred and ten cities and towns are provided with free delivery. Ninety-three other cities and towns entitled to this service under the law have not been accorded it on acount of insufficient funds. The expense of free delivery for the current fiscal year will be more than $12,300,000.

During the year 830 additional domestic money-order offices were established. The total number of these offices at the close of the year was 19,264. There were 14,304,041 money orders issued during the year, being an increase over the preceding year of 994,306.

WORK OF THE NAVY.

"The estimates for the increase of the Navy for the year ending June 30, 1896, are large, but they include practically the entire sum necessary to complete and equip all the new ships not now in commission, so that unless new ships are authorized the appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1897, should fall below the estimates for the coming year by at least $12,000,00. I recommend that provision be made for the construction of additional battleships and torpedo boats. I feel also it my imperative duty to call attention to the recommendation of the secretary in regard to the personnel of the line of the navy. The stagnation of promotion in

LIFE WAS A BURDEN.

A Pain-Racked Sufferer Tells an Interesting Story—How He Was Tortured for Years and Finally Cured by Munyon's Remedy.

Charles Wark, of 14 N. Twenty-fourth St., Philadelphia, has been a constant sufferer from rheumatism for years. He was cured by the use of Munyon's Rheumatism Cure. This is his story:

"I was afflicted with rheumatism in the righ shoulder and suffered the most excruciating agony. Sharp shooting pains darted through it so intense I could not sleep night. Even the weight of the bedclothes was more than I could bear; neither could I lie on the right side or my back. Life became a perfect burden to me. I could not raise my hand to my head, and when I attempted to put on my coat or any article of dress, the torture was enough to drive me wild. Many remedies were suggested and tried, but none did me the slightest good, and I began to despair of ever being able to obtain relief. Some time ago, however, I procured a bottle of Munyon's Rheumatism Cure. It afforded me relief after the first few doses, and by the time the little 25-cent bottle was gone I was entirely free from pain. I have had no return of my old enemy, and I feel satisfied I am permanently cured. It seems so wonderful I can hardly realize it, and can only show my appreciation of the merits of the Cure by recommending it to other sufferers."

Munyon's Rheumatism Cure is guaranteed to cure rheumatism in any part of the body. Acute or muscular rheumatism cured in from one to five days. It never fails to cure sharp, shooting pains in the arms, legs, sides back or breast, or soreness in any part of the body in from one to three hours. It is guaranteed to promptly cure lameness, stiff and swollen joints, stiff back, and all pains in the hips and loins. Chronic rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago or pain in the back are speedily cured.

Munyon's Homoepathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggist, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

this, the vital branch of the service, is so great as to seriously impair its efficiency. I consider it of the utmost importance that the young and middle-aged officers should, before the eve of retirement, be permittd to reach a grade entitling them to active and important duty.

"The system adopted a few years ago regulating the employment of labor at the navy yards is rigidly upheld and has fully demonstrated its usefulness and expediency. It is within the domain of civil service reform inasmuch as workmen are employed through a board of labor selected at each navy yard and are given work without reference to politics and in the order of their application, preference, however, being given to army and navy veterans and those having former navy yard experience.

DISPOSAL OF PUBLIC LANDS.

"The report of the secretary of the interior exhibits the situation of the numerous and interesting branches of the public service connected with his department. The public land disposed of during the year amounted to 10,406,100.77 acres, including 28,876.05 of Indian lands. It estimated that the public domain still remaing amounts to a little more than 600,000,000 acres, excluding, however, about 360,000,000 acres in Alaska as well as military reservations and railroad and other selections of lands yet unadjudicated. The total cash receipts from sale of lands amounted to $2,647,285.79, including $91,981.03 received from Indian lands.

"In the light of experience, and considering the uncertainty of the Indian situation and its exigencies in the future, I am not only disposed to be very cautious in making allotments, but I incline to agree with the secretary of the interior in the opinion that when allotments are made the balance of reservation land remaining after allotment, instead of being bought from the Indians by the government, and opened for settlement with such scandals and unfair practices as seem unavoidable, should remain for a time at least as common land or be sold by the government on behalf of the Indians in an orderly way and at fixed prices.

"The intelligent Indian school management of the past year has been followed by gratifying results. Five institutes of Indian teachers have been held during the year, and have proved very beneficial through the views exchanged.

HOW PENSION MATTERS STAND.

The pension question is then referred to. Mr. Cleveland says:

"At the close of the last fiscal year, on the 30th day of June, 1894, there were 969,544 persons on our pension rolls, being a net increase of 3,532 over the number reported at the end of the previous year.

"These pensioners may be classified as follows: Soldiers and sailors, survivors of all wars, 753,968; widows and relatives of deceased soldiers, 215,162; army nurses in the war of the rebellion, 414. Of these pensioners 32,039 are surviving soldiers of Indian and other wars prior to the late civil war, and the widows or relatives of such soldiers.

soldiers. The remainder, numbering 937,505, are receiving pensions on account of the war of the rebellion, and of these 469,344 are on the rolls under the authority of the act of June 27, 1890, sometimes called the dependent pension law. The total amount expended for pensions during the year was $139,804,416.05, leaving an unexpended balance from the sum appropriated of $25,205,712.65. The sum necessary to meet pension expenditures for the year ending June 30, 1896, is estimated at $140,000,000. The commissioner of pensions is of the opinion that the year 1895, being the thirtieth after the close of the war of the rebellion, must according to all sensible human calculation see the highest limit of the pension rolls. The number of certificates issued was 80,213. The names dropped from the rolls for all causes during the year numbered 37,951. Among our pensioners are nine widows and three daughters of soldiers of the revolution and forty-five survivors of the war of 1812.

"The bare-faced and extensive pension frauds exposed under the direction of the courageous and generous veteran soldier now at the head of the bureau leave no room for the claim that no purgation of our pension rolls was needed, or that continued vigilance and prompt action are not necessary to the same end."

ON AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS.

The census is disposed of in a few words and with the statement that it cost the government $10,365,676.81. This is followed by a review of agriculture, regarding which Mr. Cleveland says:

"A special study has been made of the demand for American farm products in all foreign markets, especially Great Britain. That country received from the United States during the nine months ending September 30, 1894, 305,910 live beef cattle, valued at $26,500,000, as against 182,611 cattle, valued at $16,634,000, during the same period for 1893. During the first six months of 1894 the United Kingdom took, also, 112,000,000 pounds of dressed beef from the United States, valued at $10,000,000. The report shows that during the nine months immediately preceding September 30, 1894, the United States exported to Great Britain 222,676,000 pounds of pork; of aples, 1,900,000 bushels, valued at $2,500,000; and of horses 2,811 at an average value of $139 per head.

"There was a falling off in American wheat exports of 13,500,000 bushels, and the secretary is inclined to believe that wheat may not, in the future, be the staple export cereal product of our country, but that corn will continue to advance in importance as an export on account of the new uses to which it is constantly being appropriated.

"The exports of agricultural products from the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, amounted to $628,363,038, and the United Kingdom of Great Britain took more than 54 per cent of all farm products finding foreign markets.

CIVIL SERVICE REFORM.

"The advantages to the public service of an adherence to the principles of civil service reform are constantly more apparent; and nothing is so encouraging to those in official life who honestly desire good government as the increasing appreciation by our people of these advantages.

"A vast majority of the voters of the land are ready to insist that the time and attention of those they select to perform for them important public duties, should not be distracted by doling out minor offices, and they are growing to be unanimous in regarding party organization as something that should be used in establishing party principles instead of dictating the distribution of public places as rewards of partisan activity. Numerous additional offices and places have lately been brought within civil service rules and regulations, and some others will probably soon be included. The report of the commissioners will be submitted to the congress, and I invite careful attention to the recommendations it contains.

"I am entirely convinced that we ought not to be longer without a national board of health. This would involve the establishment, by such board of proper quarantine precautions, or the necessary aid and counsel to local authorities on hte subject, prompt advice and assistance to local boards of health or health officers in the suppression of contagious disease, and in cases where there are no such local boards or officers, the immediate direction by the national board or officer of measures of suppression.

COMMENTS ON THE TARIFF.

"The tariff act passed at the last session of the congress needs important amendments if it is to be executed effectively and with certainty. In addition to such necessary amendments as will not change rates of duty, I am still very decidedly in favor of putting coal and iron upon the free list.

"So far as the sugar schedule is concerned, I would be glad, under existing aggravations to see every particle of differential duty in favor of refined sugar stricken out of our tariff law. If with all the favor now accorded the sugar-refining interest in our tariff laws it still languishes to the extent of closed refineries and thousands of discharged workmen, it would seem to present a hopeless case for legislative aid.

"With the advent of a new tariff policy not only calculated to relieve the consumers of our land in the cost of their daily life, but to invite a better development of American thrift and create for us close and more profitable commercial relations with the rest of the world, it follows as a logical and imperative necessity that we should at once remove the chief if not the only obstacle which has so long prevented our participation in the foreign carrying trade of the sea.

NEW SHIPPING LAWS.

"A tariff built upon the theory that it is well to check imports and that a home market should bound the industry and effort of American producers, was fitly supplemented by a refusal to allow American registry to vessels built abroad, though owned and navigated by our people, thus exhibiting a willingness to abandon all contest for the advantages of American transoceanic carriage.

"Our new tariff policy, built upon the theory that it is well to encourage such importations as our people need, and that our products and manufactures should find markets in every part of the habitable globe, is consistently supplemented by the greatest possible liberty to our citizens in the ownership and navigation of ships in which our products and manufactures may be transported. The millions now paid to foreigners for carrying American passengers and products across the sea should be turned into American hands.

INTEREST ON BONDS.

"During the last month the gold reserved in the treasury for the purpose of redeeming the notes of the government circulating as money in the hands of the people became so reduced, and its further depletion in the near future seemed so certain that in the exercise of proper care for the public welfare it became necessary to replenish this reserve and thus maintain popular faith in the ability and determination of the government to meet, as agreed, its pecuniary obligations.

"It would be well if in this emergency authority had existed to issue the bonds of the government bearing a low rate of interest and maturing within a short period; but the congress having failed to confer such authority, resort was necessarily had to the resumption act of 1875, and pursuant to its provisions bonds were issued drawing interest at the rate of five per cent per annum and maturing ten years after their issue, that being the shortest time authorized by the act. I am glad to say, however, that on the sale of these bonds the premium received operated to reduce the rate of interest to be paid by the government to less than three per cent.

"Nothing could be worse or further removed from sensible finance than the relations existing between the currency the government has issued, the gold held for its redemption, and the means which must be resorted to for the purpose of replenishing such redemption fund when impaired. Even if one to the obligations originally meant, their cancellation, the fund would be very small. But these obligations when received and redeemed in gold are not canceled but are reissued and may do duty many times by way of drawing gold from the treasury.

DRAINS ON THE TREASURY.

"Thus we have an endless chain in operation constantly depleting the treasury's gold and never near a final rest. As if this was not bad enough, we have, by a statutory declaration that it is the policy of the government to maintain the parity between gold and silver aided the force and momentum of this exhausting process and added largely to the currency obligations claiming this peculiar gold redemption. Our small gold reserve is thus subject to drain from every side. The demands that increase our danger also increase the necessity of protecting this reserve against depletion, and it is most unsatisfactory to know that the protection afforded is only a temporary palliation.

"It is perfectly and palpably plain that the only way under present conditions by which this reserve when dangerously depleted can be replenished is through the issue and sale of the bonds of the government for gold; and yet congress has not only thus far declined to authorize the issue of bonds best suited to such a purpose, but there seems a disposition in some quarters to deny both the necessity and power for the issue of bonds at all.

"I can not for a moment believe that any of our citizens are deliberately willing that their government should default in its pecuniary obligations or that its financial operations should be reduced to a silver basis.

"At any rate I should not feel that my duty was done if I omitted any effort I could make to avert such a calamity. As long therefore as no provision is made for the final redemption or the putting aside of the currency obligation now used to repeatedly and constantly draw from the government its gold, and as long as no better authority for bond issues is allowed than at present exists such authority will be utilized whenever and as often as it becomes necessary to maintain a sufficient gold reserve, and in abundant time to save the credit of our country and make good the financial declarations of our government.

"Questions relating to our banks and currency are closely connected with the subject just referred to and they also present some unsatisfactory features. Prominent among them are lack of elasticity in our currency circulation and its frequent concentration in financial centers when it is most needed in other parts of the country.

"The absolute divorcement of the government from the business of banking is the ideal relationship of the government to the circulation of the currency of the country.

"This condition can not be immediately reached; but as a step in that direction and as a means of securing a more elastic currency and obviating other objections to the present arrangement of bank circulation, the secretary of the treasury presents in his report a scheme modifying present banking laws and providing for the issue of circulating notes by state banks free from taxation under certain limitations.

"The secretary explains his plan so plainly and its advantages are developed by him with such remarkable clearness, that any effort on my part to present argument in its support would be superfluous. I shall, therefore, content myself with an unqualified indorsement of the secretary's proposed changes in the law and a brief and imperfect statement of their prominent features.

STATE BANK TAXES.

It is proposed to repeal all laws providing for the deposit of United States bonds as security for circulation; to permit national banksto issue circulating notes not exceeding in amount seventy-five jer cent. of teir paid-up and unimpaired capital, provided they deposit with the Goverment, as a guarantee fund, in United States legal tender notes, including Treasury notes of 1890, a sum equal in amount to thirty per cent. of the notes they desire to issue, this deposit to be maintained at alltims, but whenever and bank retires any part of its circulation a proportional part of its guarantee fund shall be returned to it; to permit the Secretary of the Treasury to prepare and keep on hand rady of issue in case an increase in circulation is desired blank national-bank notes for each bank having ciculation and to repeal the porvisions of the present law imposing limitations and restrictions upon banks desiring to reduce or increase their circulation—thus permitting such increase or reduction within the limit of seventy-five per cent. of captal to be quickly made as emrgencies arise.

"Another very important feature of this plan is the exemption of state banks from taxation by the United States in cases where it is shown to the satisfaction of the secretary of the treasury and comptroller of the currency by banks claiming such exemption that they have not had outstanding their circulating notes exceeding seventy-five per cent. of their paid-up and unimpaired capital; that their stockholders are individually liable for the redemption of their circulating notes to the full extent of their ownership of stock; that the liability of said banks upon their circulating notes constitutes under their state law a first lien upon their assets; that such banks have kept and maintained a guarantee fund in United States legal-tender notes including treasury notes of 1890 equal to thirty per cent. of their outstanding circulating notes and that such banks have promptly redeemed their circulating notes when presented at their principal or branch offices."

RED BADGE OF COURAGE.

An Episode of the American Civil War.

BY STEPHEN CRANE.

[Copyright, 1894, by the Author.]

CHAPTER VII.

The youth cringed as if discovered at a crime. By heavens, they had won after all. The imbecile line had remained and become victors. He could hear cheering.

He lifted himself upon his toes and looked in the direction of the fight. A yellow fog lay wallowing on the tree tops. From beneath it came the clatter of musketry. Hoarse cries told of an advance.

He turned away, amazed and angry. He felt that he had been wronged.

He went from the field into a thick woods as if resolved to bury himself. He wished to get out of hearing of the crackling shots which were to him like voices.

He went far, seeking dark and intricate places.

After a time the sound of musketry grew faint and the cannon boomed in the distance. The sun, suddenly apparent, blazed among the trees. A woodpecker stuck his impudent head around the side of a tree. A bird flew on light-hearted wing.

Off, was the rumble of death. It seemed now that nature had no ears.

He went again into the deep thickets. The brushed branches made a noise that drowned the sounds of cannons. He walked on, going from obscurity into promises of a greater obscurity.

At length he reached a place where the high, arching boughs made a chapel. He softly pushed the green doors aside and entered. Pine needles were a gentle brown carpet. There was a religious half-light.

Near the threshold, he stopped horror-stricken at the sight of a thing.

He was being looked at by a dead man who was seated with his back against a column-like tree. The corpse was dressed in a uniform that once had been blue, but was now faded to a melancholy shade of green. The eyes, staring at the youth, had changed to the dull hue to be seen on the side of a dead fish. The mouth was opened. Its red had changed to an appalling yellow. Over the gray skin of the face ran little ants. One was trundling some sort of a bundle along the upper lip.

HE STOPPED HORROR-STRICKEN.

The youth gave a shriek as he confronted the thing. He was, for moments, turned to stone, before it. He remained staring into the liquid-looking eyes. The dead man and the living man exchanged a long look. Then the youth cautiously put one hand behind him and brought it against a tree. Leaning upon this, he retreated, step by step, with his face still toward the thing. He feared, that if he turned his back, the body might spring up and stealthily pursue him.

The branches, pushing against him, threatened to throw him over it. His unguided feet, too, caught aggravatingly in brambles. And, with it all, he received a subtle suggestion to touch the corpse. As he thought of his hand upon it, he shuddered profoundly.

At last he burst the bounds which had fastened him to the spot and fled, unheeding the underbrush. He was pursued by a sight of the black ants swarming greedily upon the gray face and venturing near to the eyes.

After a time he paused, and, breathless and panting, listened. He imagined some strange voice would come from the dead throat and squawk after him in horrible menaces.

The trees about the portal of the chapel moved slightly in a soft wind. A sad silence was upon the little guarding edifice.

CHAPTER VIII.

The trees began softly to sing a hymn of twilight. The burnished sun sank until slanted bronze rays struck the forest. There was a lull in the noises of insects as if they had bowed their beaks and were making a devotional pause. There was silence save for the chanted chorus of the trees.

Then, upon this stillness, there suddenly broke a tremendous clangor of sounds. A crimson roar came from the distance.

The youth stopped. He was transfixed by this terrific medley of all noises. It was as if worlds were being rended. There was the rippling sound of musketry and the creaking crash of the artillery.

His mind flew in all directions. He conceived the two armies to be at each other panther-fashion. He listened for a time. Then he began to run in the direction of the battle. He saw that it was an ironical thing for him to be running thus toward that which he had been at such pains to avoid. But he said, in substance, to himself that if the earth and moon were about to clash, many persons would doubtless plan to get upon roofs to witness the collision.

As he ran, he became aware that the forest had stopped its music, as if at last becoming capable of hearing the foreign sounds. The trees hushed and stood motionless. Everything seemed to be listening to the crackle and clatter and ear-shaking thunder. The chorus pealed over the still earth.

It suddenly occurred to the youth that the fight in which he had been, was, after all, but perfunctory popping. In the hearing of this present din, he was doubtful if he had seen real battle-scenes. This uproar explained a celestial battle; it was tumbling hordes a-struggle in the air. He went rapidly on. He wished to come to the edge of the forest that he might peer out.

As he hastened, there passed through his mind pictures of stupendous conflicts. His accumulated thoughts upon such subjects were used to form scenes. The noise was as the voice of an eloquent being, describing.

Presently he was where he could see long gray walls of vapor, where lay battle lines. The voices of cannon shook him. The musketry sounded in long irregular surges that played havoc with his ears. He stood regardent for a moment. His eyes had an awe-struck expression. He gawked in the direction of the fight.

Presently he proceeded again on his forward way. The battle was like the grinding of an immense and terrible machine to him. Its complexities and powers, its grim processes, fascinated him. He must go close and see it produce corpses.

He came finally to a road from which he could see in the distance dark and agitated bodies of troops, smoke-fringed. In the lane was a blood-stained crowd streaming to the rear. The wounded men were cursing, groaning and wailing. In the air, always, was a mighty swell of sound that it seemed could sway the earth. With the courageous words of the artillery and the spiteful sentences of the musketry were mingled red cheers. And from this region of noises came the steady current of the maimed.

One of the wounded men had a shoeful of blood. He hopped like a schoolboy in a game. He was laughing hysterically.

One was swearing that he had been shot in the arm through the commanding general's mismanagement of the army.

Another had the gray seal of death already upon his face. His lips were curled in hard lines and his teeth were clenched. His hands were bloody from where he had pressed them upon his wound. He seemed to be awaiting the moment when he should pitch headlong. He stalked like the specter of a soldier, his eyes burning with the power of a stare into the unknown.

There were some who proceeded sullenly, full of anger at their wounds and ready to turn upon anything as an obscure cause.

The youth joined the crowd and marched along with it. The torn bodies expressed the awful machinery in which the men had been entangled.

Orderlies and couriers occasionally broke through the throng in the roadway, scattering wounded men right and left, galloping on, followed by howls. The melancholy march was continually disturbed by the messengers and sometimes by bustling batteries that came swinging and thumping down upon them, the officers shouting orders to clear the way.

There was a tattered man, fouled with dust, blood and powder stain from hair to shoes, who trudged quietly at the youth's side. He was listening with eagerness and much humility to the lurid descriptions of a bearded sergeant. His lean features wore an expression of awe and admiration. He was like a listener in a country store to wondrous tales told among the sugar barrels. He eyed the story-teller with unspeakable wonder. His mouth was a-gap in yokel fashion.

The sergeant taking note of this gave pause to his elaborate history while he administered a sardonic comment. "Be careful, honey, you'll be catching flies," he said.

The tattered man shrank back abashed.

After a time he began to sidle near to the youth and in a diffident way tried to make him a friend. His voice was gentle as a girl's voice and his eyes were pleading. The youth saw with surprise that the soldier had two wounds, one in the head, bound with a blood-soaked rag and the other in the arm, making that member dangle like a broken bough.

After they had walked together for some time, the tattered man mustered sufficient courage to speak. "Was pretty good fight, wasn't it?" he timidly said. The youth, deep in thought, glanced up at the bloody and grim figure with its lamb like eyes. "What?"

"Was pretty good fight, wasn't it?"

"Yes," said the youth, shortly. He quickened his pace.

But the other hobbled industriously after him.

"Was pretty good fight, wasn't it?" he persisted, in a small voice. And then he achieved the fortitude to continue: "Dern me, if I ever see fellers fight so. Laws, how they did fight. I knew the boys would lick when they once got square at it. The boys ain't had no fair chance up to now, but, this time, they showed what they was. I knew it would turn out this way. You can't lick them boys. No sir. They're fighters, they be."

He breathed a deep breath of humble admiration.

His homely face was suffused with a light of love for the army which was to him all things beautiful and powerful.

After a time, he turned to the youth. "Where you hit, old boy?" he asked in a brotherly tone.

The youth felt instant panic at this question, although at first its full import was not borne in upon him.

"What?" he asked.

"Where you hit?" repeated the tattered man.

"Why?" began the youth. "I—I—that is—why—I—"

He turned away suddenly and slid through the crowd. His brow was heavily flushed, and his fingers were picking nervously at one of his buttons. He bended his head and fastened his eyes studiously upon the button as if it were a little problem.

The tattered man looked after him in astonishment.

CHAPTER IX.

The youth fell back in the procession until the tattered soldier was not in sight. Then he started to walk on with others.

But he was amid wounds. The mob of men was bleeding. Because of the tattered soldier's question, he now felt that his shame could be viewed. He was continually casting side-long glances to see if the men were contemplating the letters of guilt he felt burned into his brow.

At times he regarded the wounded soldiers in an envious way. He conceived persons with torn bodies to be peculiarly happy. He wished that he, too, had a wound—a little red badge of courage.

The spectral soldier was at his side like a stalking reproach. The man's eyes were still fixed in a stare into the unknown. His gray, appalling face had attracted attention in the crowd, and men, slowing to his dreary pace, were walking with him. They were discussing his plight, questioning him and giving him advice. In a dogged way he repelled them, signing to them to go on and leave him alone.

The shadows of his face were deepening and his tight lips seemed holding in check the moan of great despair. There could be seen a certain stiffness in the movements of his body, as if he were taking infinite care not to arouse the passions of his wounds. As he went on he seemed always looking for a place, like one who goes to choose a grave.

Something in the gesture of the man as he waved the bloody and pitying soldiers away made the youth start as if bitten. He yelled in horror. Tottering forward, he laid a quivering hand upon the man's arm. As the latter slowly turned his wax-like features toward him the youth screamed:

"Gawd! Jim Conklin!"

The tall soldier made a little commonplace smile. "Hello, Flem!" he said.

The youth swayed on his legs and glared strangely. He stuttered and stammered. "Oh, Jim—oh, Jim—oh, Jim."

"GAWD! JIM CONKLIN!"

The tall soldier held out his gory hand. There was a curious red and black combination of new blood and old blood upon it. "Where yeh been, Flem?" he asked. He continued in a monotonous voice. "I thought maybe you got keeled over. There's been thunder to pay to-day. I was worrying about it a good deal."

The youth still lamented. "Oh, Jim—oh, Jim—oh, Jim."

"Yeh know," said the tall soldier, "I was out there." He made a careful gesture. "An', Lord, what a circus. And, b' jiminy, I got shot—I got shot. Yes, b' jiminy—I got shot." He reiterated this fact in a bewildered way as if he did not know how it came about.

The youth put forth anxious arms to assist him, but the tall soldier went firmly on as if propelled. Since the youth's arrival as a guardian for his friend, the other wounded men had ceased to display much interest. They occupied themselves again in dragging their tragedies toward the rear.

Suddenly, as the two friends marched on, the tall soldier seemed to be overcome by a terror. His face turned to a semblance of gray paste. He clutched the youth's arm and looked all about him, as if dreading to be overheard. Then he began to speak in a shaking whisper:

"I tell yeh what I'm 'fraid of, Flem—I'll tell yeh what I'm 'fraid of. I'm 'fraid I'll fall down—an' then yeh know—them damned artillery wagons—they like as not 'll run over me. That's what I'm 'fraid of."

The youth cried out to him hysterically: "I'll take care of yeh, Jim. I'll take care of yeh. I swear to Gawd I will."

"Sure—will yeh, Flem?" the tall soldier beseeched.

"Yes, yes, I tell yeh—I'll take care of yeh, Jim," protested the youth. He could not speak accurately because of the gulping in his throat.

However, the tall soldier seemed suddenly to forget all those fears. He became again the grim, stalking specter of a soldier. He went stonily forward. The youth wished his friend to lean upon him, but the other always shook his head and strangely protested: "No—no—leave me be—leave me be—"

His look was fixed again upon the unknown. He moved with mysterious purpose. And all of the youth's offers he brushed aside. "No—no—leave me be—leave me be—"

The youth had to follow.

Presently the latter heard a voice talking softly near his shoulder. Turning, he saw that it belonged to the tattered soldier. "Ye'd better take 'im outa th' road, pardner. There's a bat'try comin' helitywhoop down th' road an' he'll git runned over. He's a goner anyhow in about five minutes—yeh kin see that. Ye'd better take 'im outa th' road. Where th' blazes does he git his stren'th from?"

"Lord knows," cried the youth. He was shaking his hands helplessly.

He ran forward, presently, and grasped the tall soldier by the arm. "Jim, Jim," he coaxed, "come with me."

The tall soldier weakly tried to wrench himself free. "Huh," he said, vacantly. He stared at the youth for a moment. At last he spoke as if dimly comprehending:

"Oh, inteh th' fields? Oh."

He started blindly through the grass. The youth turned once to look at the lashing riders and bouncing guns of the battery. He was startled from his view by a shrill outcry from the tattered man.

"Gawd. He's runnin'."

Turning his head swiftly, the youth saw his friend running in a staggering and stumbling way toward a little clump of bushes. He and the tattered man began a pursuit. There was a singular race.

When he overtook the tall soldier, he began to plead with all the words he could find. "Jim—Jim—what are you doin' a—what makes you do this way—you'll hurt yourself."

The glare of purpose was in the tall soldier's face. He protested in a dulled way, keeping his eyes fastened on the mystic place of his intentions. "No, no—don't tech me—leave me be—leave me be—"

The youth, aghast and filled with wonder at the tall soldier, began quavering to question him. "Where yeh goin', Jim? What you thinking about? Where you going? Tell me, won't you, Jim?" The tall soldier faced about as upon relentless pursuers. In his eyes there was a great appeal. "Leave me be, can't yeh? Leave me be fer a minnit."

The youth recoiled. "Why, Jim," he said, in a dazed way, "what's the matter with you?"

The tall soldier turned and, lurching dangerously, went on. The youth and the tattered soldier followed, sneaking as if whipped, feeling unable to face the stricken man if he should again confront them. They began to have thoughts of a solemn ceremony. There was something rite-like in these movements of the doomed soldier. They could not understand; they were awed and afraid. They hung back, lest he have at command a dreadful weapon.

At last, they saw him stop and stand motionless. Hastening up, they perceived that his face wore an expression telling that he had at last found the place for which he had struggled. His spare figure was erect; his bloody hands were quietly at his sides. He was waiting with patience for something that he had come to meet. He was at the rendezvous. They paused, and stood expectant.

There was a silence.

Finally the chest of the doomed soldier began to heave with a strained motion. It increased in violence until it was as if an animal was within and was kicking and tumbling furiously to be free.

This spectacle made the youth writhe. He raised his voice in a last supreme call: "Jim! Jim! Jim!"

The tall soldier opened his lips and spoke. He made a gesture. "Leave me be—don't tech me—leave me be—"

There was another silence, while he waited.

Suddenly his form stiffened and straightened. Then it was shaken by a prolonged ague. He stared into space. To the two watchers there was a curious and profound dignity in the firm lines of his awful face.

He was invaded by a creeping strangeness that slowly enveloped him.

His tall figure stretched itself to its full height. There was a slight rending sound. Then it began to swing forward, slow and straight, in the manner of a falling tree. A swift muscular contortion made the left shoulder strike the ground first.

The body seemed to bounce a little way from the earth. "God," said the tattered soldier.

The youth had watched spell-bound, this ceremony at the place of meeting. His face had been twisted into an expression of every agony he had imagined for his friend.

He now sprang to his feet and, going closer, gazed upon the paste-like face. The mouth was open and the teeth showed in a laugh.

As the flap of the blue jacket fell away from the body he could see that the side looked as if it had been chewed by wolves.

The youth turned, with sudden, livid rage, toward the battlefield. He shook his fist. He seemed about to deliver a phillipic.

"Hell—"

The red sun was pasted in the sky like a fierce wafer.

Anyone who has children will rejoice with L. B. Mulford, of Plainfield, N. J. His little boy, five years of age, was sick with croup. For two days and nights he tried various remedies recommended by friends and neighbors. He says: "I thought sure I would lose him. I had seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised and thought I would try it as a last hope and am happy to say that after two doses he slept until morning. I gave it to him next day and a cure was effected. I keep this remedy in the house now and as soon as any of my children show signs of croup I give it to them and that is the last of it." 25 and 50 cents bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy T. S. THE DAILY PRESS

ESTABLISHED MAY 10, 1887. PLAINFIELD, N. J., MONDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1894. TWO CENTS A COPY. $5 A YEAR.

THE HOME NEWSPAPER.

A Matter of Local History Briefly Told.

EVERY CITIZEN IS CONCERNED.

The Daily Press Proves Its Steadfast Devotion to Plainfield's Progress, Its Loyalty to All the People—Cleanly Edited, and Best Informed, It Is the Choicest Family Paper for Every Plainfield Fireside.

Every newspaper has a following, greater or less.

The Plainfield Evening News had a following, but The Plainfield Evening News has passed.

The Daily Press lives on.

Lives on for Plainfield's progress, lives on for all the people.

The following of The Daily Press is large; it steadily grows greater.

Of the people's favor and support The Press is justly proud, and it is pleased already to accept a portion of the patronage The Evening News has yielded.

The News having turned from its readers, its readers turn elsewhere to find the news.

They find the news in The Daily Press.

The doings of town and society are freshest and fullest told in The Daily Press.

The news of the world at large is most concisely recorded in its columns up to date.

The Daily Press is Plainfield's best diary of current events; miscellany, literature, and special features, are carefully selected to suit the wants of all.

It is cleanly edited, and a favorite with women and in the home.

And just as no Plainfield household is complete without The Daily Press, so Plainfield owes much to that same paper for its part in spreading Plainfield's fame among households abroad and bringing desirable newcomers to the town.

Freely and fully The Daily Press has been devoted to Plainfield's progress. It has maintained a faithful record of the town's good points. The many agencies of higher civilization here at work have found in The Press a ready, powerful ally. Through The Press the world at large has been kept fully informed by constant chronicle and by complete annual reports of the deeds and developments of the people, industries, societies and institutions of the city. Plainfield's excellencies are everywhere quoted from The Daily Press. Frequent special efforts at town-booming have been made by The Press, with gratifying results; and when the editors of the nation came here through the hospitality of Walter Scott, it was the hustle and enterprise of The Daily Press, and the devotion of The Daily Press to Plainfield, that placed in national circulation the illustrated story of what Plainfield has been, is now, and is to be.

The best citizens, the leading tradesmen, applauded The Press for that great work with unanimity and delight.

"The best thing ever done for Plainfield!"

That's what they said of the Editorial Souvenir of The Daily Press.

And it was.

And no other paper had thought of it!

The files of The Daily Press, a stack of eight thick volumes, are a record of Plainfield's growth which show the unwavering devotion of The Press to all the people. The Press is cosmopolitan. Its columns are open to everyone and for everyone.

Take the matter of politics. Some people who would not think of letting politics interfere with any other business transactions nevertheless let their politics bias them in the selection of their paper. Some people therefore like an organ, and some don't. The Daily Press is not an organ. It is the only paper in Plainfield that enjoys the distinction of being quoted throughout the State as "a newspaper, not an organ". The Press has its views, like every other mortal, but it does not intrude them upon its readers to the exclusion of opposing views. Every creed, political, social, religious, finds in The Daily Press free welcome, full credit, and fair treatment. The Press is the only paper in Plainfield that publishes all the news of all political movements in Plainfield, regardless of party. It is the only paper in Plainfield that honestly reports all political meetings as they take place, stating the facts clearly and without bias. And as it is the only fair chronicler of Democratic and of Republican events alike, so it is generally first to make important announcements concerning either party.

Deeds of the current campaign being fresh in mind, the public will easily recall that while the local Republican organ was insisting that the Plainfield delegates would present to the congressional convention no Plainfield name for Congress, The Press was announcing and reiterating that James L. Anthony of Plainfield would be named, and that while the local Republican organ was still persisting that The Daily Press was mistaken the Plainfield delegates went into the convention and unanimously voted for James L. Anthony.

They will recall that The Elizabeth Journal, the Union County Republican organ, during that congressional discussion acknowledged The Daily Press to be the accepted oracle of Plainfield and vicinity.

They will recall the gallant fight which The Press made for the prerogative of the Plainfield Republicans to nominate this year the candidate for Congress. Early in the campaign everyone was acknowledging that the nomination belonged to Plainfield. Elizabeth Republicanism had been boasing Plainfield Republicanism a long time, and yet even Elizabeth admitted it was Plainfield's turn. The Daily Press and The Daily Press alone warned the Plainfield Republicans of the trick that was planned to secure the nomination to Elizabeth. And on the eve of the convention, in its issue of Tuesday, Oct. 9, The Press repeated its warning: "How long are Plainfield Republicans going to submit to the party dictation of Elizabeth? If this year, then forever!" The Plainfield Republicans did submit, understanding that Plainfield's turn was merely transferred to the next convention. And in speedy fulfilment of the prophecy of The Press, the Plainfield Republican organ was drawn by continued Daily Press publication of Republican doings into acknowledging, in its issue of Oct. 30, 1894, that "Altogether the possibility of any Plainfield man being named for Congress is removed quite a dozen years". This weak submission of the local Republican organ to the dictation of Elizabeth ringsters, demonstrates to the local Republicans just how much of a friend and faithful champion that local Republican organ is. Its remissness in keeping even its own party posted on even its own party facts proved it to be not even its own party newspaper. Yet all the time The Press was keeping everybody posted about everything.

Everybody supposed the mayoralty contest lay between Charles Fisk and S. A. Ginna. The Daily Press was first to undeceive them, and told exclusively how instead Messrs. Fisk and Ginna were working for Mr. Gilbert's renomination. Then again last Saturday The Press gave first news that it had been absolutely and unanimously agreed that Mr. Gilbert was to be the nominee.

As in politics, so concerning church matters, court news, the cycling world, and all local organizations, The Press uniformly keeps Plainfield better posted than does any other paper. The Press first established a department of school news, keeping parents posted on pupils' progress. In social matters likewise the leader is The Press. The interested parties in the numerous Autumn weddings have accorded to The Press highest praise for best reports, and Editor Morrison circulated copies of the Daily Press and of no other paper among his friends and relatives who wanted the best report of his daughter's wedding. "It was a beautiful story!"—he said—"So nicely done!"—and he chose The Press account even in preference to his own. As an indication of The Press leadership as social-world chronicler, note the fact that the dates and patronesses of the season's Assemblies have already been published in The Press and in no other paper; that The Press alone has announced the Christmas holidays fancy dress ball.

And so it goes.

The Press is not accustomed to much talking of itself, but this much it does say today as a reminder to ex-News readers, and to all, that the best journal for them to take is a newspaper that is not an organ.

The Daily Press has spoken. With loyalty to the town, with the steadfast purpose of giving all the news of all the people, The Daily Press continues to do business at the old stand.

QUESTIONS ON SUNDAY.

Christian Endeavorers Have an Interesting Discussion.

The regular monthly consecration meeting of the Y. P. S. C. E. of the Congregational Church was held last evening at 7:30. After the opening service, the following questions on the topic were answered: "What recreation is permissible on the Lord's Day?"—by Rev. C. L. Goodrich; "What work should be done on Sunday?"—by L. R. Allen; "What should you read on Sunday?"—by J. A. Robinson; "How do you keep thoughts of your week's work out of the Sabbath?"—by A. C. LaBoyteaux; "What signs will tell us whether or not we are rightly keeying the Sabbath?"—by E. L. Suffren. A selection was rendered by a sextette from the Junior society, composed of Miss Emma LaBoyteaux, Miss Agnes LaBoyteaux, Miss Alice Morgan, Warren Weseman, Elmer Weseman, and Harold Nomer. The attendance at the meeting was very large, filling the lecture room to overflowing, and a great deal of interest was manifested in the discussion of the topic. The room was very prettily decorated with chrysanthemums.

—Do n't have a disagreeable night tonight just because of the weather. Go with the cheerful crowd to Music Hall, which will be clean, comfortable, dry and warm. It is thoroughly heated for the Ragan lecture.

ACTIVE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS.

Hymn-Writer Lowry Tells of Changes They Have Wrought—Steady Congregational Growth and Continued Prosperity Traced to the Movement—Delightful Anniversary Celebration.

The first anniversary of the Y. P. S. C. E. was celebrated in the German Reformed Church last evening. The building was completely filled with members of the church and visitors from the other societies in Plainfield. About the pulpit flowers were arranged, and above it hung the motto "Welcome" and the initials "C. E." in red and white flowers on a silver background. The ushers of the evening were John Utzinger, W. J. Trembath and Fred Vanderweg.

The meeting opened at 7:45 by Miss Nettie Kreitling rendering on the organ a prelude, "TeDeum", arranged by the pastor, Rev. George Hauser. A fifteen-minute song service followed. The pastor next read the One Hundreth Psalm, and then P. Ludwig Conde played an exquisite violin solo.

Rev. Robert Lowry was introduced by President Fred Bach. He spoke of the importance of the first anniversary compared with those of later years. The Christian Endeavor movement was one in keeping wtth the times. When he was young the churches were run entirely by old people. One had to be nearly gray-haired before he was entitled to take in prayer-meetings. Things had changed since then and with the age of activity had come the Christion Endeavor, a great power in bringing the young people into the work. It was only by keeping everlastingly at it that the churches could succeed, and the Endeavor movement fostered activity. Encouraging the Society to be bold in Christian work, Mr. Lowry closed his address.

Miss Nettie Kreitlng, secretary pro tem, presented an interesting report of what the Society had accomplished during the single year of its existence. It was organized Thursday, October 26, 1893, with 17 charter members. Four officers, president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer, were then elected. Twenty members have been added to the Society, including the total 37. At the end of the year the roll included 24 members, 18 active and six associate. The work is divided among four departments, lookout, prayer, social and missionary.

During the last six months the average attendance has been 17. The last Friday of each month a consecration meeting is held at which all answer to the roll-call. These meetings are always very helpful and are looked forward to with great pleasure. The Society has $7 79 in the treasury, having expended over $40 for hymn-books and Bibles and in other ways. The greater part of this money was raised at an entertainment held December 4, 1893.

Rev. C. L. Goodrich of the Congregational church brought a cordial greeting from his Society to the German Endeavorers. He thought that the cause of Christ was being greatly advanced by the young people combined in religious effort. Belonging to such an organization he compared to being in a party of Alpine tourists, roped together so that each could aid the other in the dangerous places.

After Mr. Goodrich had finished, ex-Mayor Charles Place spoke. He said the Christian Endeavor Societies were doing a great work. Those who aided in the movement would receive their reward. He believed the Society was destined to become even a stronger element in Christian success than the Sunday-school.

Pastor Hauser made a brief speech in German in which he referred with congratulations to the year of labor and success and encouraged the members of the Society to do still greater good. Then he thanked those from other Societies who had attended and acknowledged the gratitude of his people to the speakers of the evening. Mr. Conde played another solo, a collection was taken up and Elder B. W. Hand of the First Church of Christ then closed the meeting with the benediction.

ANOTHER TIE.

Dunellen and Westfield Football Players Evenly Matched.

The Dunellen football eleven went to Westfield Saturday afternoon to play a return match with the eleven there. Both teams were somewhat strengthened, although Dunellen miseed the efficient services of F. H. Freeman behind their line. After a game full of brilliant plays by both sides, the final score was 0—0, another tie which will probably be played off some afternoon later in the month. Owing to the severe rain of the morning, the ground was rather slippery, and somewhat retarded the running of the backs. As the Westfield team averaged a number of pounds more than the Dunellen boys, the Dunellen eleven deserve the most credit for not permitting their opponents to score.

HOT STUFF.

LIVE COALS CAUSE AN ASH BOX TO BREAK OUT.

Its Complaint Soon Cured and the Canned Fruit Relieved from Danger—A Star-Route Fire Alarm.

Hot ashes again came near causing a destructive fire in North Plainfield yesterday afternoon. Fortunately the smoke was soon discovered, and although there was a long delay in sending an alarm the firemen reached the place before the flames had spread.

Mrs. R. F. M. Chase of Somerset street, near Johnston's drive, filled a box with wood ashes yesterday morning, intending to keep them for the flower-garden. Then she went to call at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Audsley, 150 Grove street. The box was left at the foot of the cellar stairs, near a closet full of canned fruit.

Shortly after 3:30 in the afternoon the workman, Anthony Seabar, discovered that the house was full of smoke. He at once decided to notify Mrs. Chase, not thinking it best to send on alarm without her permission. Accordingly he rode bareback to Mr. Audsley's house and told his mistress of the fire. She hurried out and boarded a car on Somerset street. Anthony rode to Warren Engine house and alarmed the firemen.

The hose wagon was drawn out by Peter Seader's team. Foreman Stahl jumped off at Hudson's lane and pulled box 145. In the meantime T. W. Morrison of Mountain avenue, who happened to be nearby, with several others, entered the house. They were unable to locate the fire, the kitchen part being locked up. When Mrs. Chase came she at once felt certain that the fire had started from the ashes. Two extinguishers were used by the firemen, the flames were put out, and no damage was done. Mr. Chase has been in England two months.

PARK CLUB ENTERPRISE.

Delightful Saturday Evening Entertainments to Be Provided.

Messrs. B. A. Hegeman, Jr., Charles A Reed and Jules Erickson, House Committee of the Park Club, announce that they have decided to inaugurate a series of informal entertainments at the club-house, Saturday evenings from 9 to 10.

The first will be given Saturday of this week, and will consist of music and recitations by several members, who have kindly agreed to contribute their talents.

Twenty Are Needed.

It was expected that Dr. Hornsby of the National School of Electricity would address the Y. M. C. A., Saturday evening, on the subject of electricity, for the purpose of forming a class here. But Dr. Hornsby was unable to be present. Mr. Levera, a member of his school, gave a short talk on the school and its work. He then tried to form a class, but as there were not enough present to do this, enrollment blanks were left and when sufficient applicants have been secured further steps will be taken. The requisite number to organize a class is twenty.

Rally by the Bound Brook Democrats.

Last Saturday evening Columbia Hall was filled with earnest Democrats to listen to the issues of the campaign. A large percentage of the audience was composed of mill hands, who showed plainly that they saw through the fallacies of Protection. The first speaker was Hon. Jas Mehan, Prosecutor of Somerset; his address was a telling one. J. E. Martine was then introduced as a farmer from Union County. He spoke for over one hour, pressing the claims of the Democratic party, and exposing the wrongs and humbug of so-called Protection.

Death of a Veteran Engineer.

Charles Rogers, engineer on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad, died at his home at Carbondale, Pa., yesterday. Many years ago he was in the employ of the Central Railroad, and ran one of the first freight trains over the Central. He also was honored as engineer of the train that pulled the cars on which General Grant was a passenger, during his first term as President. He was a brother-in-law of Augustus M. Frazee of this city.

The Germans of Plainfield.

Every German should vote for Mr. Dunn if they show gratitude. t was he who introduced and had enacted the law under which their Benevolent Association was formed, by which their sick, their widows and orphans were taken care of in the days of need.

It was he who assisted in establishing it after the law was passed.

Germans, can you forget the man who has done so much for you!

Window-Breakers Fined.

Philip Sheridan and Thomas McInnerney, two young men of the West End, broke windows on West Second street Hallow E'en. Policemen Frederickson and Vanderweg arrested them and they appeared in the City Court this morning. Judge Coddington fined each $5 with 30-day alternatives. The fines were paid.

AS JOB MALE WISHED.

At Last the Library Possesses the Cloisonne.

INNER FACTS NOW FIRST PUBLISHED

How Counselor Charles A. Reed Cleverly Accomplished the Restoration—A Rare Collection Now Plainfield's Permanently—How It Was Done.

The Schoonmaker collection of cloisonne, porcelains, and other Chinese ware, has been restored to the Public Library, where Mr. Male desired it. Plainfield is indebted chiefly to one of its able lawyers for the restoration, and The Press today tells how. The Press learned that the astuteness of Charles A. Reed was responsible for this public benefit, and though Mr. Reed declined to discuss the matter the following facts were obtained from another reliable source:

When Mr. Male died, a large part of the Schoonmaker collection was in the possession of the Public Library. After the contest over the so-called nuncupative will of Mr. Male was decided, the administrators demanded the collection, and the officers of the Library seeing no way to resist the demand, allowed it to be taken. It was taken to Tunis J. Carey's auction rooms and advertised for public sale. Catalogues were printed and sent all over the country. The Library had given up all hope of securing the collection and it seemed doomed to be broken up and scattered.

A few days before the sale, Mr. Schoonmaker was in the office of his lawyer, Mr. McClure, and talking of the proposed sale when Charles A. Reed happened in. Schoonmaker then told how he had sold the collection to Mr. Male, with the understanding that Mr. Male would give it to the Library. He said he thought there ought to be a way by which it could be saved, but that there were several good lawyers, Mr. Tracy, Mr. Cox, Mr. Stillman, and others, among the Directors of the Library, and they thought it was impossible.

Mr. Reed told him he thought a bill in Chancery could be framed upon which an injunction could be obtained restraining the sale for a time; that the Court of Chancery moved slowly, and that the heirs might get tired and finally consent to let the Library have the collection, particularly as the estate could not be settled until the suit was disposed of.

Mr. Schoonmaker jumped at the idea and arranged a meeting of the Board of Directors to which Messrs. Schoonmaker, McClure and Reed were invited.

There the subject was fully discussed. The Board was anxious to save the collection, but thought the plan proposed was a forlorn hope; they did not believe an injunction could be obtained, and almost decided to do nothing, but finally gave orders to go ahead. Time was short, but a bill in Chancery was drawn which contained a very interesting story of the collection and its history, the years which had been required to gather it together, and the shame it would be to sell and scatter it at public auction. The Chancellor saw the point, and granted the injunction the day before the sale, and thus it was stopped.

A policy of "masterly inactivity" followed, and sure enough the heirs finally became anxious to get the estate settled. The suit about the collection stood in the way. The late Gov. Bedle represented the administrators, and defended the suit. He tried hard to get it on for trial, but some good excuse was always offered by the other side.

Finally they decided to remove the obstacle by giving the collection up and thus was won a case which could hardly have been won on a fight. The city gets the collection, and the heirs deserve credit for their gift, but it would have been sold piecemeal except for the courage of the Board in ordering on a fight which seemed hopeless, and which they were induced to make only because of Mr. Reed's persistency.

NOT TO PARDON M'KANE.

A Report Denied by Gov. Flower.

Albany, November 5.—Governor Flower this morning denied the report published in the New York Tribune which stated that he had secretly pardoned John Y. McKane from Sing Sing prison. He said: "The publication is an absolute falsehood. The idea of pardoning McKane never entered my mind."

Night Classes.

The night classes of the Plainfield Manual Training School for instruction in telegraphy and free hand drawing, will begin tomorrow evening. They are to be held Tuesday and Thursday evenings, from 7:30 to 9. C. E. Buell will conduct the class in telegraphy, and Mr. Dalziel will give instruction in the minor arts.

—It would be foolish for me to say that the butter I advertise for 25 cents is the finest there is, for it is'nt, but I do say it is finer than any offered for the finest at the same price. J. F. MacDonald.

PRESSING THE WORK.

TEMPERANCE SENTIMENT BEING STEADILY FOSTERED.

The Local Union Continues Its Music Hall Meetings—Mr. McGee Makes a Rousing Speech.

The attendance at the public meeting of the W. C. T. U. in Music Hall yesterday afternoon was larger than that at the previous meeting. Horace J. Martin led the short song service. The President, Miss Cara Peck, was the chairman of the meeting.

The first speaker was James McGee. He laid down three propositions: First—Things are not so bad as they seem to be. Second—Things are worse than they ought to be. Third—It is our duty to make things better. Under the first head he said that in a conflict such as was now being carried on there was often more dust than there was dirt. One fact that was not always remembered was that 30 years ago there was no W. C. T. U. or any similar organization. Things were a great deal better now than then.

Secondly, said Mr. McGee, it was plain the situation was worse than it should be. Politics had become very corrupt, and not alone in Tammany Hall. The saloon was now a political power, working great harm, not only to the community but to the State. The saloon was among the very worst enemies of the church, now having other evils connected with it. It was a shame and a disgrace that such a power for evil was permitted to exist. We could not stand still and let things go on in this way, for God would hold us responsible. It was our business to help our neighbors. We could not neglect this duty without incurring guilt.

Rev. E. M. Rodman spoke next. He referred to the case of Johanna Haley, who had just been arrested again and sent to Elizabeth for 60 days. He had from time to time heard of what had been done for the poor woman. The women who were interested in her told him she had reformed. But she had fallen again. Could there be any licensed saloon-keeper in Plainfield so base as to sell liquor to the woman, knowing her weakness? It did not seem possible.

And yet she had obtained liquor again and was now in jail. Had those who tried to help her done all they could? Was it not possible that they had left some means untried? Thus illustrating his address with local allusions Dean Rodman preached a powerful lesson on personal responsibility.

Miss Peck then announced that John G. Wooley of Chicago would speak next Sunday in Music Hall at 4:15. She told of the life and the eloquence of the great temperance worker and said that Plainfield would then have a chance to show its feeling towards the Union and the movement. It would be greatly to the city's discredit if the house was not crowded at that meeting. She asked the Endeavorers of Plainfield to wear their badges, as Mr. Wooley was identified with their organization. At the first meeting the Union had said it had a purpose in holding these meetings. It was the educating of public sentiment on the temperance question. The meetings were being held at no little cost to the Union and the women hoped the public would support them better, in the future. Rev. W. E. Honeyman then pronounced the benediction and the meeting ended.

BERT BOE'S ESCAPADE.

He Is Reprimanded for Pulling a Bell Rope.

Wm. A Boe of Pearl street was tried in Justice Mosher's Court this morning for pulling a bell-rope on a Central train a week ago. Detective Corsa represented the railroad company. Boe's counsel was his father.

Conductor J F. Bedell of Jersey City and Baggage-master J. A. Case testified that Boe stopped the train by pulling the rope Boe admitted that he had, but said he had slipped and grasped the rope unintentionally. Patterson Bros. furnished evidence of their employe's good character, and Detective Corsa asked the Justice to be lenient.

The complaint against Boe was accordingly dismissed after he had been been severely reprimanded. He promised to be careful hereafter in walking through trains. The maximum penalty for interfering with railroad traffic is a $200 fine and a year of imprisonment.

AT REST.

John Kyle.

The funeral services held over the remains of John Kyle at 2 yesterday afternoon were very largely attended. At the house on Watchung avenue the pallbearers were delegates from the Coachmen's Association, 40 members of which were present.

At St. Mary's Church Rev. Father Murphy preached a very tender discourse on death. He spoke very highly of Mr. Kyle's life, his earnest Christian character and the patience with which he endured suffering during the year he was ill. The interment was made in St. Mary's Cemetery.

CAMPAIGNING AT AN END

The Great Battle To Be Fought To-morrow.

It Will Practically Determine Which Will Be the Dominant Party in 1896—Forty-one States Elect Representatives and Twenty Elect Governors and Other Officers.

New York, Nov. 5.—The campaign of 1894 is at an end. It has been a stirring one in many states and the American people are aroused as seldom before in a year in which the presidency is not at stake. Issues of importance have been presented, and the verdict of the people at the polls to-morrow is expected to practically determine which will be the dominant party in 1896. Forty-one of the forty-four states in the union elect representatives to the fifty-fourth congress, and twenty-one states elect legislatures which choose United States senators. The make-up of both houses of congress is therefore before the people. Besides this twenty states elect governors, nine elect minor state officers, and three states, New York, California and South Carolina, vote upon important constitutional amendments.

In three states, Maine, Vermont and Oregon, elections of congressmen and state officers have been held. Each of these states has elected full republican delegations. Republicans claim that this is a republican year, and predict a reversal of the present status of the two parties in the house. They have made the tariff the main issue, and count upon gains in nearly all northern and western states and also in several southern states.

The democrats, on the other hand, claim that they will hold their own except in two or three states where the populists have made rapid strides. It is pretty generally conceded by unbiased observers that the democratic majority in the lower house will be decreased, while both the populists and republicans will make gains.

While the republicans may not get a majority they will come so near it that the populists with the gains they expect to make will hold the balance of power. The present house has 214 democrats, 126 republicans and 12 populists. There will be 356 members in the next house and either of the leading parties must elect 179 men to obtain control. The republican managers express themselves as confident of electing at least 210 representatives, while the democrats say that though they may lose one or two of their present congressmen they will surely gain enough others to make their representation 230 in the next house. Greater popular interest centers in the fight for re-election of William L. Wilson, chairman of the ways and means committee and author of the original features of the present tariff bill. Both republican and democratic campaign committees have sent orators of national renown into his district in West Virginia, and the result of the election will be anxiously watched.

In New York city four congressional districts which are easily democratic in other years are in danger of being lost to that party by reason of two democrats being in the field against one republican in each district. The State democracy and Tammany Hall have failed to come to an understanding and the republicans stand a good chance of carrying three out of four districts.

In Louisiana the stampede of the sugar planters to the republican party some weeks ago made a gain of three congressmen in that state possible. Recently the democrats have injected the race issue into the campaign and now claim that they will hold the state intact. In Georgia the populists carried several districts at the recent state election, and claim that they will carry them again Tuesday. They also expect to gain several representatives in North Carolina, Texas and the silver states.

Legislatures have already been chosen in Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Maine and Oregon, which will elect United States senators. These legislatures will choose men of the same political party as that of senators whose terms have expired. The states which will elect legislatures to-morrow which will have the naming of United States senators are California, Colorado, Delaware, Idaho, Illinois, Kansas, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, New Jersey, New Hampshire, North Carolina, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Washington, West Virginia and Wyoming. Each of these states elects one senator except Michigan, Montana, North Carolina and Wyoming, where two senators are to be chosen. In the upper house there are at present forty-four democrats, thirty-six republicans, three populists and the two silver senators from Nevada. In addition to the twenty-one new legislatures which will elect United States senators, there is a possibility of New York's legislature having to name a successor to Senator Hill. His election as governor and the election of a republican legislature at Albany would lose the democrats a vote in the United States senate. The states which elect governors on Tuesday are: California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Idaho, Kansas, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New York, North Dakota, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas and Wyoming.

ALL EYES ON NEW YORK.

Both Democrats and Republicans Sure of Victory.

New York, Nov. 5.—All eyes are upon the empire state. With every condition favoring a sweeping republican victory one month ago David B. Hill has thrown himself into the breach and attempted to stop the tide. He has made a campaign which will be memorable for years to come. He has spoken two and three times a day to vast crowds of people and has undoubtedly greatly diminished the avalanche of votes which was going to the Hon. Levi P. Morton. Whether he has changed the tide or not, will only be known Tuesday night. Should he lose or win his untiring fight for democracy has raised him in the estimation of most people irrespective of party. The Shepardites and anti-Hill men have kept Everett P. Wheeler in the race, but he will only draw a few thousand votes and his candidacy is not expected to affect the result. The republicans are confident of winning. Charles W. Hackett, chairman of the state committee, predicts Morton's election by 50,000.

Thomas C. Platt says: "I am entirely confident of the election of Mr. Morton."

The betting is in favor of Morton at odds of ten to seven, and many heavy wagers have been laid that Morton's plurality will exceed 25,000.

The democratic managers declare themselves satisfied that Hill will be elected. Claims of a 10,000 to 20,000 plurality are made, and the enthusiastic receptions given the senator are pointed out as certain indications of the feeling all over the state. The A. P. A., has been one of the leading issues presented by the democratic speakers. The proposed reapportionment and the tariff have also figured prominently in the campaign. These factors and the uncertainty as to how they will affect the independent voters, make the result uncertain. Both parties await the verdict of the ballots with confidence.

The democrats say they willl hold their present number of representatives in congress and gain the one in New York city which was carried by Lemuel E. Quigg, republican, last year. The republicans claim they will gain three in this city, three in Brooklyn, and five up the state.

The republicans also expect to elect a republican legislature and to carry the constitutional amendments framed by the constitutional convention which sat all summer. The democrats are making a desperate fight against the new apportionment, and claim they have it beaten.

In this city Tammany hall has one of the hottest fights in its long history on its hands. The revelations of the Lexow investigating committee have been used by the republicans, the committee of seventy, and all the other anti-Tammany organizations to down the local machine.

An attempt was made by Dr. Parkhurst and others to induce women to go into the campaign in large numbers but it has not been a success. Col. William L. Strong, the anti-Tammany nominee, has had the support of the ministers, the press with only two or three exceptions, and the reformers. Ex-Mayor Hugh J. Grant, the Tammany champion says he is confident of winning by from 10,000 to 20,000 votes, but the general opinion prevails that this is not a Tammany year. John W. Goff, the anti-Tammany candidate for recorder, is certain of election over Recorder Smyth, who has been on the bench for fourteen years.

This city will also vote upon the proposition to build an underground rapid transit road by the municipality, and upon the consolidation of Brooklyn, parts of Queens and Westchester counties and Staten Island into the Greater New York.

SOUTH AMERICAN NEWS.

Excitement in Rio Janeiro over the Missiones Question.

New York, Nov. 5.—The Herald's correspondent in Rio Janeiro, Brazil, telegraphs that the house of delegates has approved President Peixoto's actions during the recent revolution. The vote on approval was 108 in the affirmative and 12 in the negative. The house also passed the bill providing for the expulsion of foreigners. Much excitement was caused in Rio Janeiro by a London dispatch saying that President Cleveland had not decided in favor of Argentina in the Missiones question.

President-elect Moraes, of Brazil, has sent for many leading politicians to consult with them relative to the formation of a good cabinet.

It is fully evident that a cabinet crisis is imminent in Argentina. General Roca is an active agent in bringing about this crisis. It is reported that Vice-President Uriburu is likely to resign. President Pena is worried over the way affairs are going.

Paraguay has ceded to Bolivia twenty leagues on the bank of the Paraguay river for the free exchange of products for ten years, thus affording Bolivia an outlet to the Atlantic ocean. A railroad will be built to connect with a line of steamboats of light draught to carry products.

Weston's Long Tramp.

Newburgh, N. Y., Nov. 5.—Edward Payson Weston, the veteran long-distance pedestrian, concluded his long tramp Saturday at 7 p. m. Weston, who was 55 years old on March 15 last, undertook to walk 496 miles through New York state. The old-timer started from here on Monday afternoon, Oct. 22. He was to return to Newburgh in twelve full days. He was ahead of time by just one hour. Throughout the trip Weston did not experience any discomfort, and he wound up in splendid condition.

For Women's Advancement.

Knoxville, Nov. 5.—The association for the advancement of women elected these officers: President, Mrs. Julia Ward Howe; vice-presidents, one from each state; secretary, Mrs. Elizabeth Lord Tefft, Buffalo; treasurer, Mrs. Henrietta L. Wolcott, Deadham, Mass.; auditors, Cornelia S. Bigelow and Louise A. Stemms, New York. The association received invitations to meet at New Orleans and Salt Lake City next year.

New Spanish Cabinet.

Madrid, Nov. 5.—Premier Sagasta, who resigned with all his colleagues several days ago, has reconstructed the cabinet. The ministers are: Sagasta, premier; Maura, justice; R. Capdepon, public works; Lopez Puigcerver, colonies; Groizard, foreign affairs; Gen. Dominguez, war; Gamazo, finance; Admiral Pasquin, marine. All took the oath of office before Queen Regent Christina yesterday.

Annie Pixley's Ashes.

London, Ont., Nov. 5.—Robert Fulford of New York, the theatrical manager, has arrived here with the ashes of his wife, Annie Pixley, the actress, who died in England last winter. They will be placed in the lot with the body of her only son, Thomas, and a handsome monument will cover both. Mrs. Fulford visited London every summer to renew the flowers on the grave of her child, whom she adored.

GERMAN CABINET CRISIS

Dr. von Schelling Resigns, Others Ready To Go.

Requested by the Kaiser To Defer Action for the Present—Richter Again Exposing the Emperor's Bad Appointments—Clericals Only Moderately Satisfied with Hohenlohe.

Berlin, Nov. 5.—The resignation of Dr. von Schelling, minister of justice, is announced. He will, however, retain his post until Dec. 12, and thus complete his fiftieth year in the state service. Even with this change the cabinet crisis will not be finally settled. Dr. von Boetticher, secretary of the interior, and Freiherr von Berlepsch, minister of commerce, are shifting uneasily in their places, and may go at any time. Both have offered to retire, but were requested by the emperor, who fears to disquiet the country with more political sensations, to defer all action for the present.

The emperor had a long conference with Prince Hohenlohe and Freiherr Marschall von Bieberstein as to minor appointments, but he reached no decision. Probably Freiherr von Vilamowitz, governor of Posen, will succeed Herr von Heyden in the ministry of agriculture and Herr von Puttkamer, now imperial secretary of the Reichsland, will accept the post left vacant by Herr von Koeller's removal to Berlin. It as been reported that Freiherr von Hammerstein, tory reactionist, might succeed Koeller. This has aroused the apprehensions of the liberals who think it would prove the reactionary tendency of the new cabinet. Prince Hohenlohe has nominated Capt. Count Schoenborn-Wiesentheid, a Catholic member of an old mediatized family and a relative of the chancellor by marriage, to be his aide. The other changes under consideration include the creation of a minister of colonies, and the appointment of Dr. Miquel to be vice-chancellor. The latter step is taken to relieve Prince Hohenlohe of any conspicuous part in the parliamentary debates. Whatever the arrangement, however, Miquel will remain Prussian finance minister. The personnel of the chancellery and foreign office is in the midst of an overhauling. Resignations and transfers are the order of the day. Until quiet be restored in both departments, the government will be at a great disadvantage, hence the postponement of the opening of the reichstag. Had the deputies met the middle of this month, as at first arranged, they would have found the government in an embarrassing state of solution.

The first Prusssian cabinet council in which the new chancellor and premier presided, was held on Wednesday. Koeller and Marschall, the two other new members, were present with the full force of older ministers, but, in view of the impending changes, all discussion of a legislative programme was avoided. What the policy of the new government will be can be only surmised. The retention of Freiherr Marschall von Bieberstein is taken to mean the continuance of Count von Caprivi's policy of reciprocity treaties. Koeller's advent is supposed to imply stricter repressive measures against the social democrats.

Eugene Richter, the radical leader, is already at his familiar business of exposing the badness of the emperor's selections. His Freisinnige Zeitung recalls Koeller's reactionary utterances in the reichstag and repeats his ultra-conservative epigrams, such as "the government ought to protect the people from their own folly;" and "Free speech tends to lead the people astray." Koeller's friends say that he has learned much since he talked in this strain, that he has modified his tory prejudices, and that he is a firm and discriminating adviser or administrator.

The clericals get only a moderate amount of satisfaction from Hohenlohe's appointment, because his attitude toward the Catholic church is not that of an extremist. He, like his cardinal brother, is an opponent of the vatican's aspirations for temporal power and disproves of the pope's foreign policy in general. The Koelnische Volkszeitung, organ of the Rhineland Catholics, says: "The nomination is commendable only in so far as it shows that he does not share the sectarian prejudices of some other persons."

The report that the chief crown prosecutor, Tessendorff, will succeed Dr. von Schelling in the ministry of justice is received with general regret and some incredulity. Tessendorff is a notorious bulldozer with very elementary ideas on the subjects of personal liberty and constitutional government. The Vossische Zeitung, radical, says: "We fear that this is a further sign of the dark reaction that is to unsettle and becloud the bright outlook for free national development which seemed to dawn after Prince Bismarck's fall. The change may conciliate the Bismarckians but it must lead to serious convulsions. Those statesmen who further the revolutionary cause most, are the ones who disregard the demands of the times and place their entire confidence in repressive measures."

The fervid tone of Emperor William's decrees concerning Alexander III.'s death, has confirmed the belief that Nicholas II.'s accession adds to the security of the German empire. The Koelnische Zeitung says the people may now be confident that the old ties between Russia and Germany, once ruptured by want of tact and mutual misunderstandings, will be reunited and strengthened. The Berliner Tageblatt expresses hopes that Nicholas II. will respond to Germany's expectations by repudiating the pan-slavist and Chauvinist tendencies in St. Petersburg and by stopping the religious persecution of the Germans in the Baltic provinces.

The painter, Zichy, who is attached to the Russian court, has written to a friend in Berlin concerning the Princess Alix's conversion to the orthodox Greek church. Her entrance into the church on Friday, he said, would cause her no difficulties, as she was prepared for the ceremony with a full study of the doctrines and spirit of her new faith and as she would find in the czarewitch's betrothal promise a true and durable guarantee of her happiness.

BEGINNING EARLY is half the battle. Don't wait for your cough to run into Consumption. There's always danger of it. The germs or seeds of this disease are all around you. All that they want is an inactive liver and the scrofulous condition that follows it, to develop them.

You need Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, now, to thoroughly purify your blood, build up sound, firm, honest flesh, and make every weak spot strong. It's a certain remedy for the earlier stages of Consumption.

Campbell, Ohio.

DR. R. V. PIERCE: Dear Sir—Two of our best doctors pronounced my case consumption. I spent nearly $300, and was no better. I concluded to try the "Golden Medical Discovery." I bought eight bottles, and I can now say with truth that I feel just as well today as I did at twenty-five, and can do just as good a day's work on the farm, although I had not done any work for several years. I give you all the thanks.

Truly, your friend,

COULD HARDLY BREATHE.

Catarrh of the Nose, Throat, and Stomach—Life Made Miserable by Headaches, Pain and Cough.

Lida McCandless, No. 1230 South Thirty-fifth street, Philadelphia, in conversation with a reporter, said: "I had a very bad case of catarrh of the nose, throat and stomach, with frequent headaches, pain under the shoulder blades and a horrible cough. I had to keep my mouth constantly open day and night to breathe, and felt as miserable as one possibly could. I was advised to try Munyon's Catarrh Cure. I am happy to say that from the beginning I felt relieved and continued to grow better until now I am entirely well. I am so thankful that this remarkable remedy was ever discovered, and hope others will take advantage of my experience."

Have you Catarrh? Are you willing to investigate a treatment that cures Catarrh by removing the cause? If so ask your druggist for a 25c bottle of Catarrh Tablets. The Catarrh Cure will eradicate the disease from the system, and the Tablets will cleanse and heal the affected parts and restore them to a natural and healthful condition.

Munyon's Homœopathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

EARTHQUAKE IN MEXICO

People Killed and Buildings Destroyed.

Terror-Stricken Audiences in the Theatres—Prayers and Confessions Succeeds Song—Drivers Dessert Street Cars and Coachmen Their Hacks and Kneel in the Streets.

Mexico City, Nov. 5.—The earthquake which visited this section of the republic Friday evening was the most severe which has been felt since 1858. Reports of damage to life and property are slow in being collected, but it is known that thirteen people were killed in this city and at least three at outside points. Many roofs of old buildings fell and in some instances crushed to instant death the occupants of the houses. All the killed are among the lower classes.

The earthquake was preceded by a rumbling subterranean noise followed by a movement of the ground from north to south. This was followed in a few seconds by another undulating and stronger vibration from west to east, which in turn was succeeded by a shock from northwest to southeast. The three shocks coming as they did from different quarters badly cracked the strongest buildings. Tall chimneys fell and walls standing north and south suffered great damage.

From telegraph advices from central and southern Mexico the disturbance is shown to have covered the state and federal districts of Mexico and lasted from one to four minutes. Seven distinct shocks were felt at Jojutla, in the state of Morelos and smart shocks were felt at Tulancingo in the state of Hidalgo. At Ojusco, an Indian and his wife were crushed to death under the roof of their adobe house. Being a holiday and one of the chief festivals of the year, the theatres were thronged and panics ensued. Several people were hurt in the rush of exit and many women went into hysterics. The songs on the stage were succeeded by impassioned prayers for forgiveness and confession of error. The plays were generally abandoned and the audiences remained in the seats kneeling in prayer. Traffic was completely abandoned at the first premonition. Drivers deserted the street cars and coachmen their hacks to kneel in prayer along with the throngs sending up their supplications. In palace and in humble home nothing but prayer was to be heard. The threatened destruction was made more solemn by the ringing of bells in the swaying church towers. Not a church was injured by the twisting. The entire police force of the city was kept busy during the night in attending to the casualities occasioned by falling walls and brought in for temporary treatment before being removed to the hospitals. In Belem and other prisons where many desperate criminals are confined the scenes witnessed were curious as the walls swayed and the earth cracked, threatening to entomb the imprisoned inmates. The convicts, almost without exception fell upon their knees or groveled on the floors of their cells with loud voices crying out prayers and supplications. Many, supposing their end had come shouted out confessions of past crimes. This was one of the most dramatic passages in the passing of the event and may be of use to the officers of the law in unraveling a number of mysterious crimes in Mexico.

The supply water pipes leading from Chapultepec to the city were broken and the greater part of the city is in danger of a water famine unless the connection is soon restored, which will take some time. The electric lights were extinguished the dynamo axle in the plant leaping from the bed. Great cracks in the earth appear in various parts of the city especially in northern sections.

BOMB EXPLODED IN LONDON.

Nobody Hurt, But All the Windows in the Vicinity Shattered.

London, Nov. 5.—A bomb was exploded at midnigt in front of 1 Tilney street, corner of Park lane, west London. Reignald Brett, son of Lord Esher, lives in the house at this number. The door was shattered and the windows were blown to powder.

The windows for a dozen numbers up the street were smashed, plaster was loosened from the ceilings and the occupants fled panic-stricken to the street. Nobody was wounded.

The neighborhood is a fashionable one. At No. 5 is the house of Justice Hawkins, who sentenced the Walsal' anarchists and more recently condemned Francis Polti and Giuseppe Farnaro, alias Emile Carnot. It is surmised that the bomb was set by anarchists who mistook Brett's house for that of Justice Hawkins.

Alexander III.'s Disease.

Berlin, Nov. 5.—The disputes as to the czar's malady and treatment continue. Many experts here believe in Dr. Zacharin's diagnosis of cancer of the kidneys. Dr. Hirsch, Alexander III.'s body physician, agrees with Zacharin. Prof. Leyden, if permitted by the family, will disclose his side of the case and describe the symptoms pointing to Bright's disease. It is reported that in a letter to a Berlin physician Leyden has admitted the correctness of Zacharin's diagnosis. It is not likely that the imperial family will permit any statement as to Leyden's treatment or the results of the post mortem examination.

Eugene Oudin Dead.

London, Nov. 5.—Eugene Esperance Oudin, the noted singer, who was stricken with paralysis two weeks ago, is dead. Mr. Oudin's illness is attributed directly to overtaxing his strength in caring for his friend, the late Charles Chatterton, Sig. Perugini's brother. Mr. Oudin was the son of Mrs. Kilbreth, wife of Collector Kilbreth, of New York, by her first husband.

Tears Cause a Strike.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 5.—Because Maud Cullen, employed in the Detroit pearl button factory, was forced into tears by the treatment of the foreman, who told her to quit work when she refused to pack buttons that had been finished by non-union hands, the 250 girls in the factory struck.

FENG-HUANG-CHENG BURNED.

The Chinese Defense of Moukden Road Collapses.

London, Nov. 5.—A dispatch to the Times from Tien-Tsin says: "Feng-Huang-Cheng has been burned. The Chinese defense of the Moukden road has collapsed. Cold weather has commenced and snow has fallen in Manchuria. The Japanese cleverly landed at Pitzwo while making a demonstration off the coast of Shantung, and cut the wires, thus preventing the news of their position reaching the Chinese.

The admiral of the Chinese fleet with fourteen vessels, besides torpedo boats, afterwards started to attack them, but was recalled. Prince Kung, the emperor's uncle, has been appointed dictator, thus indicating the further centralization of authority. The Manchu princes favor reforms, but the Chinese oppose them."

From Shanghai the Times hears: "Li Hung Chang will go to command the first army. Lutai, viceroy of Nankin, will become viceroy of Tien-Tsin, and the viceroy of Wuchang will succeed him in Nankin. Huyuff, the judge of Kuangsi and Col. von Hanneken have been ordered to raise a new army on German lines, as the nucleus of a new grand army of China."

The Times prints also a dispatch from Tokio saying that Gen. Oyama reports an important naval battle on Nov. 3. No details of the battle have been received.

BETTING IN NEW YORK.

Plenty of Republican Money Offered at Good Odds.

New York, Nov. 5.—The roll of republican money that has been afloat in the town for two weeks beat down the betting odds $1,000 to $350 in favor of Morton and $1,000 to $600 in favor of Strong. Wall street, the centre of Saturday's betting, was flooded with money. The democratic end went up at a report that Hubbard, Price & Co. of the Cotton exchange had a $40,000 commission to lay against $100,000 of Morton money. A set was made for Hubbard, Price & Co. to get a share of it, and the firm said they had merely been asked if they could place the money. They had replied that they thought they could, but had heard nothing from the people that was to put up.

F. T. Adams bet $1,000 to $700 with J. O'Connor that Morton would have 25,000 plurality. Warren James bet B. C. Williams $1,000 to $600 that Strong would be elected, and he announced that he had $5,000 to bet against 3,250 the same way. Adams announced that he had $20,000 to put up against $8,000 Hill money.

MORTON'S COACHMAN.

Secretary Carlisle Decides That Howard Cannot Be Deported.

Washington, Nov. 5.—Secretary Carlisle has decided that J. J. Howard, Mr. Morton's under coachman, comes within the first proviso of section 5 of the contract labor law as a "domestic servant," and therefore should not be deported.

Upon receipt of Mr. Carlisle's ruling Herman Stump, superintendent of immigration, sent a telegram to the commissioner of immigration at Ellis island, ordering that Howard be released, and that transportation be furnished him to the place from which he was taken, if he so desires.

A New Cup Defender.

New York, Nov. 5.—A company of Baltimore shipbuilders and capitalists is being formed to build a yacht to contest with the fleetest yachts of the world and to become the American cup defender. Several models are now under consideration. The yacht will be built in this city under the supervision of a number of the older shipbuilders, who made Baltimore famous for its swift sailing craft years ago. Among them will be William T. Malster, of the Columbia Iron Works and Dry Dock company, the builder of the United States cruisers Detroit and Montgomery, who is reported to be largely interested in the proposed yacht.

Bad Weather at Sea.

Southampton, Nov. 5.—The captain of the steamship Berlin, which arrived here yesterday, says that he experienced the worst weather he had seen since 1877. For five days it was especially bad. Tremendous seas swept over the decks, the passengers were kept below and the hatches were battened down. Third Officer Bromley was washed overboard and drowned. Two of the crew were dashed against the bulkwarks and injured. The vessel, however, was not damaged much, as the officers handled her admirably. All vessels arriving here report storms and casualities.

Cannot Use the Mails.

Washington, Nov. 5.—Orders have been issued by the postoffice department against three companies, declaring their business fraudulent and denying the use of the mails to them. They are the "Artisans' Saving and Loan association of Pittsburg," which is a bond investment concern; the Omaha (Neb.) Co-operative Supply company, which induces people to subscribe weekly in order to secure suits of clothes, etc., and the American Saving and Loan association of Chicago, conducted on the bond investment principle.

Bismarck Again Ailing.

Berlin, Nov. 5.—Prince Bismarck is suffering again from neuralgia of the face and his departure from Friedrichsruh has been deferred until the 10th. Dr. Schweninger has relieved him somewhat by making him chew his food with as much muscular exertion of the jaws as possible, and drink strong wine. He does not allow the prince to use anaesthetics.

Typhoid Fever at Wesleyan.

Middletown, Conn., Nov. 5.—The epidemic at Wesleyan university is rapidly increasing and the last two days it has added ten to its already large list of victims. There no longer remains any doubt that it is typhoid fever. At chapel was announced the first death from the disease, A. W. Clark, '98, of Newport, Vt.

Didn't Shake with the President.

Washington, Nov. 5.—John David Daniels, the old man who walked from his home near Birmingham, Ala., in the hope of shaking hands with President Cleveland, will start on his return trip to-day without having accomplished his object.

REVILING DR. ZACHARIN

The Dead Czar's Physician Called a Poisoner.

Princess Alix Anointed at Livadia—Rumored Changes Impending in High Government Offices—Vienna and Berlin Papers Commend Nicholas II.'s Manifesto.

London, Nov. 5.—The Daily News correspondent in St. Petersburg says that Nicholas II. is expected to reach St. Petersburg at he end of the week, after a day's sojourn in Moscow where he will receive the homage of the officials and conspicuous citizens. All taverns in Moscow have been closed. A mob has been in front of Dr. Zacharin's house all day shouting that he is a poisoner and the murderer of the czar. The government caused much needless suspicion and excitement by withholding the news of the czar's death until the morning of the following day.

The Daily News has this dispatch from Livadia: "Princess Alix, the governor and the mayor received Prince and Princess of Wales upon their arrival. The departure of the family with the body probably will take place on the 8th. The post mortem examination and embalming were performed yesterday and the body now lies in state in the imperial chapel. The ceremony of receiving the Princess Alix into the church passed off without any noteworthy incident. After the usual questions and responses and the giving of absolution, the priest anointed the princess with consecrated oil on the temples, eyes, nose, lips, ears, hands and feet. Then he touched these spots with a sponge dipped in holy water. He proclaimed her conversion and exhorted the onlookers to pray for her.

"It is stormy weather here, and the waves off the coast are running house high. It is cold and there is a piercing wind."

St. Petrsburg, Nov. 5.—A dispatch dated yesterday at Yalta says that everybody at Livadia praises enthusiastically the czarina's devotion, bravery and coolness throughout the last trying days.

There are rumors here of changes impending in the highest government offices. One is that Prince Lobanoff will be recalled from the Vienna embassy, to replace M. de Giers. On the other hand, M. de Giers is said to have the czar's full confidence, to be prized by him as a cautious and moderate statesman, and to have been selected to compose the imperial manifesto.

Berlin, Nov. 5.—Prof. Leyden has telegraphed to a medical friend here that the czar's death came from complications do to infraction of the left lung. Obstructive clots were conveyed into the lung owing to the failure of the circulation three days before death. The czar died during an attack of dyspnoea, Leyden says, sitting up, surrounded by his family and fully conscious till the last.

Vienna and Berlin newspapers commend the dignified, promising and pacific tone of Nicholas II.'s manifesto.

Milan, Nov. 5.—The Secolo publishes a letter from Prince Alisoff, a Russian nihilist, now in Lugano. He says that he learns from nihilistic sources which are above suspicion as regards trustworthiness, that the czar was poisoned with small doses of phosphorus. The process of poisoning, he says, began on March 1, last. Alisoff adds: "The saviors of Russia will now be safe."

Berlin, Nov. 5.—The Russian authorities are allowing unusual privileges to newspaper men and are sparing them much of the usual trouble with dispatches and passports. Permits to accompany the funeral train from Odessa to St. Petersburg have been issued, but all persons concerned are very reticent as to the funeral preparations and access to the palace is virtually impossible for all save princes and a few state councillors.

Vienna, Nov. 5.—Emperor Franz Joseph has ordered mourning for four weeks at the Austrian court. The Russian diplomatists and many other Russian subjects took the oath of allegiance yesterday in the chapel of the Russian embassy. The Austrian lower house adjourned out of respect of the czar's memory, after the president had spoken at some length of the czar's death.

WANTS TO BE FREE.

Mrs. Bullitt Tells Her Husband To Get Out.

Louisville, Nov. 5.—Mrs. Mary Ransom Bullitt has filed a petition for divorce from her husband, Col. Cuthbert Bullitt. She charges him with cruelty and failure to provide for her, and also says they have lived apart for more than six months. Another charge is that Col. Bullitt has circulated "most unusual, unseemingly, violent and untruthful accusations concerning her.

Mrs. Bullitt was married to her present husband two years ago. She was the widow of Gen. Ransom, and was worth $1,000,000. She was 50 years old and Col. Bullitt past 70. He had no property, but was a great beau and man of fashion in spite of his years. He was deeply mortified when his wife notified him to leave. Mrs. Bullitt was about the only woman in Kentucky who sympathized with Col. Breckinridge during the last campaign. She wrote several letters to the newspapers in his favor.

THE PASSING OF THE NEWS.

The Plainfield Evening News was issued for the last time Saturday night. Because its proprietor, Thomas W. Morrison, who founded it in 1884, desired to devote his energies to an important invention he claims in the line of color printing, The News has for some time been in the market. It was sold Saturday to Frank W. Runyon, who merges it into his own paper under the title Courier-News. The name and goodwill are all that Mr. Runyon bought. The standing accounts and mechanical plant remain Mr. Morrison's.

Since The News was to be sold, Mr. Runyon in purchasing it warded off the chance of its being revived by somebody else to the disadvantage of The Courier. The agreement is that Mr. Morrison cannot dispose of his plant to a new newspaper enterprise, and cannot start another daily here.

Plainfield is therefore left with two dailies, The Courier-News, and The Daily Press. The one will continue to be a political partisan organ; the other will maintain its record as a newspaper for all the people.

Considering the lamentable personal attacks which have from time to time been directed against The Daily Press, whose policy has been and is to shun such controversies and to scorn the abuse of rivalry, it is proper to record the sentiment of pleasant feeling expressed by Mr. Morrison in his valedictory to his readers. Speaking of the "notable things" The News has done, he says: "It was The News which brought to this city that undoubtedly brilliant journalist, Walter Irving Clarke, now managing editor of The Daily Press. He served faithfully as city editor of The News for several years." And in referring kindly to the success of The Press, he compliments "the present gentlemanly proprietor, A. L. Force".

The Press expresses its esteem of Mr. Morrison's goodwill, and wishes him abundant prosperity in his new venture.

HELPING THE TOWN.

Plainfield is getting mighty good advertising through H. H. Ragan's latest lecture, "Footprints of Washington". In escorting the American people over the pathways of the immortal George, Mr. Ragan conducts them to the summit of our own beloved Rock, tells its history, and points to Plainfield in all its glory on the panorama spread before them. The lovely landscape with its beautiful city of homes is fixed in the public mind, and Plainfield's fame and fortune gain. The clebrated traveler and lecturer deserves the thanks of the community for this eloquent and delightful way of introducing Plainfield to the nation, yet he insists that the credit belongs more to The Daily Press. It was The Press, he reminds us, that urged him to incorporate the Rock in his new lecture. Previously he had not known of the Plainfield lookout, but when The Press told him its story he brought his camera to Plainfield and took the best view ever secured of the Rock and of its vista. As an example of photography it is superb, and when spread on the huge canvass it is a magnificent panorama. Thus the Rock is becoming a material advertisement everywhere for the city that keeps its face clean; and as the achievement is traced to the enterprise of The Daily Press, that paper has a right to renew attention to the fact it is the paper of the people printed for Plainfield's progress.

The great Six-Day Serial service in The Daily Press improves with each issue. The superb new copyrighted serial by Conan Doyle begins soon. $1,000 was paid to Dr. Doyle for the serial rights, and Plainfield people will read it in The Daily Press alone.

The ticket you honestly want to triumph is the one you should vote for tomorrow. If you believe in Democrcy, vote the regular Democratic ticket. By all means vote. Be a man, and don't lose you ballot.

No vote can be cast for a better man than for William M. Oliver for County Clerk. He has faithfully and honorably fulfilled the duties of the office for the past year, and is entitled to retention.

MR. DUNN ANSWERS MR. WADSWORTH.

At last the voice of "Veritas" is heard outside of the narrow limits which covered him in his "nom de plume". What were you afraid of, Louis? Why did you assume the name of "Veritas" Louis? You are now and always have been a Knownothing; go for your record to the First ward in Newark, and you will learn it there.

You did not vote for me in 1892 and yet you covertly assail me. As man, as boy, and as child, I have lived in this State more than fifty years, and I defy you or any other man to prove that I have not always been a good citizen, a good husband and a good father, as well as an honest representative of the people.

My home has been Elizabeth for twenty-five years, twelve of which I have been a successful lawyer. My language may not be quite as eloquent as yours. You had a father who educated you, while I never stood inside the door of a schoolroom in my life. I begged and borrowed my education, you may, say, but as between the results of your life and mine, decent men must judge where the truth lies.

When you say that I was nominated two years ago as a reward for treason to my party, you say what you know to be false, in order to excuse yourself and the three or four Knownothing kickers whose mouthpiece or pen you are.

A. P. A., I believe is what the knownothing brat is now called.

If there was a single wrong in the record of my life the venom yourself and your friends have displayed, is sufficent evidence that you would spread it before the people as a sweet morsel.

But why do I argue with you? It is like taking a cannon to shoot a mosquito with, and you are only dignified by the notice of myself or of any truthful man because of the cowards and traitors behind you, who push you forward as their masked battery

I can afford to be beaten for Congress if such as you have the power to do it, but I cannot and will not afford to be maligned by even such as you. I could pity you for the misfortune which your own conduct has brought upon you, were you not continually obtruding yourself into matters about which you know nothing, and in your lack of knowledge draw upon your envenomed imagination for your facts. Poor fellow, I pity you, and your ilk. I can only pray that Divine mercy will reach and alter that wicked heart which has originated so many ill favored reports about me.

Respectfully, etc,
JOHN T. DUNN.

REMARKABLE CURES
Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:
I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.
I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.
JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR. PETER G. EYCK, OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:
For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.
So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.
I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.
PETER G. EYCK,
Bissell, Hunterdon Co., N. J.

ADVANCE IDEAS.

Gleanings from Plainfield's Churchly Monthly.

Clarence Manning Dunham, the new superintendent of the Grace Church Sunday-school, is reorganizing the school and grading the classes; the results so far are very gratifying. A young men's Bible class has been formed, and it is hoped that every young man in the parish will avail himself of the privilege offered.

The December number of The Advance will be issued as a Christmas number, and will contain a history of the parishes of Plainfield and North Plainfield, and portraits of the clergy. When issued, extra copies of this edition can be obtained at the various book stores, or at the office of The Advance, 163 North avenue.

It was in a colored mission Sunday-school in our city, and the teacher of the infant class was instructing them in the story of Daniel, and the other children of Judah, who refused the king's meat. After repeating the story very fully and particularly, the teacher said: "Now, children, what did Daniel say when the king's servant brought the children of Judah their portion of the king's meat?" Whereupon one of the little ones, in a high-pitched voice, answered: "He said, 'I'll not take any ham, sir.'"

The Sunday-school on the Hill (Church of Our Saviour) has on Saturdays a distinct industrial flavor. The girls make with a needle in the afternoon various useful domestic articles, while the boys with a jack-knife in the evening, are not much behind in the matter of productiveness. The one is a Sewing Class, and the other is the Whittlers' Club. In the latter there is strict attendance to whittling from 7 30 to 9, when the boys reluctantly drop their self-imposed tasks. The articles made by these busy workers are to be sold for the purpose of buying new books for the library of the Sunday-school.

CHURCH CHIMES.

Three new members joined the Crescent Avenue Church on confession of faith yesterday morning.

There were seven new members received into the Methodist Church yesterday, two of them by certificate.

Aaron M. Powell preached eloquently before the Society of Friends in the Peace street meeting-house yesterday.

At the Communion service in the First Presbyterian Church yesterday morning seven members were received by letter.

Dr. H. K. Carroll preached an excellent sermon in Pastor Randolph's place in Grace M. E. Church yesterday morning.

Rev. Edward H. True of All Saints Church, Scotch Plains, assisted in the service at Holy Cross Church yesterday afternoon.

A number of visitors from New York and England attended the meetings of the Christian Brethren at 314 West Second street yesterday.

Two members were received by letter into the Congregational Church yesterday morning. The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered.

AN APPEAL FOR FUNDS.

PLAINFIELD ELOQUENCE EXERTED IN A GOOD CAUSE.

Mrs. William E. Honeyman Says More Money Is Needed for Home Missions.

At the meeting of the Women's Board of Home Missions Friday afternoon in the First Presbyterian Church parlors, Newark, Mrs. William E. Honeyman of North Plainfield, president of the Women's Synodical Society of Home Missions in the Synod of New Jersey, was introduced for a few remarks. She spoke of the reports submitted at the annual meeting of the society over which she presides and made an urgent and earnest appeal for more funds. The need of $1,000 for the Asheville School was commented upon and Mrs. Honeyman also had this to say about the training schools for Indians and Alaskans:

"During this year we entirely renounce the assistance heretofore received from the United States Government toward the maintenance of the large training school for Indians and Alaskans. This necessitates the apportionment of $30,000 as a 'special object' among our local synods to maintain a principle of right. It is the premium paid by the Presbyterian women for protesting (as the last Assembly did) against the union of Church and State, whereby the Catholics have such a tremendous hold upon the National Treasury.

"For a number of years Congress has made a certain appropriation to several religious denominations to aid them in educating the Indians, but the National League, composed of some of the wisest and best men of our land, urged the different church boards to refuse further aid, partly because it is contrary to the spirit and form of our Government for any church to receive aid from the State to carry on its own work, and partly because the practical working of the system brings evil with it. They, therefore, propose to ask for an amendment to the the Constitution that will forever put an end to grants from Government to denominational schools, and our Board of Home Missions has approved this purpose, while the Woman's Executive Committee has heartily indorsed the action of the board.

"The Presbyterian Church last year received $30,000 from the Government and the Roman Catholics $369,000, or nearly thirteen times as much, thus enabling them to reach and influence tribes. This $30,000 must be made up by the Church at large, and we are sure that it is a work that will commend itself to the the heart of every loyal Presbyterian woman."

The meeting closed with an address by Miss Pearlie, of Spanish Fort, Utah, who told of her experience among the Mormons and the Southern mountaineers.

DISHONEST SERVANT GIRL.

She Robbed Members of the Household of Personal Effects.

Mrs. John H. Krymer of 217 West Second street hired a new girl, Annie Olsen, a week ago. As soon as she began her duties in the boarding-house small articles of value began to be missed, so Mrs Krymer warned her boarders to be careful to lock their jewelry up and watch the girl.

Miss Powers, who is employed in White's store, went away yesterday to spend the day. She put her jewelry where the girl would not be liable to get it. The clothing that she left in the closet of her room included a $28 cloak and a new suit. Annie went upstairs at 8 in the evening and threw the cloak out of the window.

Mrs. Krymer saw it drop and went out and brought it in. The girl went away then and Mrs. Krymer wondered if she had left for good and would be afraid to return The police were notified at once to watch for the girl. Miss Powers returned home soon afterwards and finally the girl came back and went to the room. Miss Powers remained up all night, awaiting some new action on the part of the dishonest girl.

This morning at 8 she was going through the hall when she caught Annie in the act of returning to the boarder's room with the suit, evidently intending to put it back in the closet. The girl was held until Chief Grant arrived. She explained at first that she had wished only to wear the clothes during the evening, but finally she confessed that she had intended to steal. Miss Powers decided not to prosecute and the girl was allowed to leave the house, the stolen articles having been returned.

Pete Seader's carriage still holds the fort on top of his barn on Race street, where it was placed on Hallow E'en night by the boys of the borough. Pete says it could never have been placed there without the knowledge of the marshals and he doesn't propose to take it down until he gets the assistance of those who placee it there. He says it may be an eyesore to some, but to him it is a good advertisement, and he doesn't care how long it stays where it is.

A RETIRED BUSINESS WOMAN.

A Page From Her History.

The important experiences of others are interesting. The following is no exception: "I had been troubled with heart disease 25 years, much of that time very seriously. For five years I was treated by one physician continuously. I was in business, but obliged to retire on account of my health. A physician told my friends that I could not live a month. My feet and limbs were badly swollen, and I was indeed in a serious condition when a gentleman directed my attention to Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and said that his sister, who had been afflicted with heart disease, had been cured by the remedy, and was again a strong, healthy woman. I purchased a bottle of the Heart Cure, and in less than an hour after taking the first dose I could feel a decided improvement in the circulation of my blood. When I had taken three doses I could move my ankles, something I had not done for months, and my limbs had been swollen so long that they seemed almost putrified Before I had taken one bottle of the New Heart Cure the swelling had all gone down, and I was so much better that I did my own work. On my recommendation six others are taking this valuable remedy."—Mrs. Morgan, 569 W. Harrison St., Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, a discovery of an eminent specialist in heart disease, is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. Good-Bye SALE?

That is what we call it as we are going to say Good-Bye to about fifteen thousand dollars worth of new seasonable dry goods, underwear, hosiery, dress goods and coats that we have just bought at half the usual prices. It has not been a case of the early bird catching the worm this season. Retailers who bought their stock early got caught, paid high prices as all Fall and Winter goods are from 30 to 50 per cent lower now than they were two months ago. Late buyers reap the benefit. It's a question with manufacturers and jobbers of selling their goods to cash buyers, regardless of profit and cost, and we do the same. It's anything to sell goods and we sell them lower than ever before. All we ask is an inspection of the goods and prices and you will be convinced that you can make one dollar do the work of two at

HOW TO PRESERVE PENCIL SKETCHES

Valuable Ones May Be Kept Indefinitely by a Little Care at First.

Pencil drawings may be rendered ineffaceable by a very simple process. Slightly warm a sheet of ordinary drawing paper; then place it carefully on the surface of a solution of white rosin in alcohol, leaving it there long enough to become thoroughly moistened. Afterward dry in a current of warm air. Paper prepared in this way has a very smooth surface. In order to fix the drawing, the paper is to be slightly warm for a few moments. This process may prove useful for the preservation of plans or designs when want of time or any other cause will not allow of draftsmen reproducing them in ink. A simpler plan than this is to brush over the back of the paper containing the pencil sketch with a weak solution of shellac in alcohol. Chalk and pencil drawings may be fixed, though not so thoroughly as by the above methods, by washing them with skimmilk or with water holding in solution a little isinglass or gum. When milk is used, great care must be taken that no cream remains in it, as it would cause the drawing to look streaky. An easy way to apply these fluids is to pour them into a shallow vessel and lay the drawing flat upon the surface of the liquid, after which remove gently and lay it in an inclined position on white blotting paper to drain and dry.

How to Make a Delicious Ice Without a Freezer.

Pour half a pint of boiling milk, sweetened, into a basin containing two well whisked eggs. Stir the ingredients, put them into a clean saucepan and stir steadily over the fire until a thick custard is produced, taking care it does not boil, or it will be spoiled. Remove from the fire and put aside until cold; then add half a pint of whipped cream to the custard and either a little liquor or a teaspoonful of vanilla essence. Ascertain that the mixture is sweet enough and add some dried cherries and pineapple cut into small pieces and a few drops of carmine, just sufficient to give a pale pink tint.

Put the mixture into a pudding mold with a cover, or an ordinary round cocoa tin that will hold a pint will do quite as well, provided it has a well fitting cover. Stand the tin in a zinc pail, and pack it around tightly with equal quantities of rough ice, broken up into fairly small pieces, and freezing salt. About 3 pounds of each will be required. Then cover the pail entirely with a thick blanket and stand it in a warm corner of the kitchen, near the fire, but not too close, for 3½ hours. Then turn the pudding out of the tin, knocking it on the table if necessary to loosen it, and serve at once.

How to Clean Chamois Gloves.

The best way for cleaning chamois gloves is to put them on the hands and wash them in lukewarm water with white soap. Rinse them in clean lukewarm water and squeeze them as dry as possible. Then dry thoroughly while still on the hands with a clean towel, peel them off the hands and hang in an open window, first carefully pulling them into shape.

How Artists' Models Are Paid.

The regular rate in the art schools is 33⅓ cents an hour, or $10 a week for six days' work of four hours each. If no complaints are made by the art student or class monitor, the model gets a 25 per cent premium. "Good days" are few and far apart, for the poses are 25 minutes long, with only five minutes' rest, and in difficult positions more than human nature can endure. To get off the pose an instant or to keep it in a lazy manner provokes complaint, and although the croaker may be the veriest bungler, it counts against the poor model, who may be trying to earn an honest livelihood.

How to Choose Good Lip Salves.

Bad digestion will often assert itself in broken or chapped lips, sores in the corners of the mouth, fever blisters and a coated tongue. Chronic sore mouths should be rubbed with sweet oil or pure glycerin at night. In the morning wash with a solution of alum or borax, a teaspoonful in a tumbler of water. Camphor ice is both healing and cleansing. Good cold cream is not a bad salve. All the druggists have supplies and cheerfully dispense 5 cent quantities. Citron ointment is one of the old reliable lip salves kept by all chemists. It is applied to the sore with a soft linen cloth. When the mouth is sore, the diet should be changed to vegetable foods.

How to Boil Halibut.

Tie it nicely in a linen cloth, put it in a kettle of cold water, enough to cover it, and add a tablespoonful of vinegar and a little salt, and after the water begins to boil let it boil from 15 to 20 minutes, and the fish is done. Lift it out carefully and let it drain a couple of minutes before serving. Egg sauce is a drawn butter made of milk instead of water, with hard boiled eggs chopped fine and stirred in just before serving. Pour this sauce over the fish and garnish with sprigs of parsley, and it is ready to serve. The potatoes should be peeled, and if not small enough cut as small as walnuts, boiled or steamed, and rolled in melted butter and chopped parsley before serving.

How to Remove Dried Paint.

To remove paint that has dried in a fabric put the soiled spot over a dish and pour spirits of turpentine over it and let it stand for several hours. Then take the fabric in the hands and rub briskly. To remove paint that has just been acquired pour coal oil on the fabric. A brisk rubbing with a clean cloth will bring the paint right out. Hang the garment in the air, and the coal oil and turpentine will evaporate. If in haste, rub in gasoline and hang in the sun.

FASHIONS OLD AND NEW.

Welcome Revival of the Sash—New Ribbon Cravat—Costumes For Second Mourning.

A happy revival of an old fashion is the sash. It is either black or white soft satin, with the ends richly fringed. Some colors are used, but black and white are a necessity, as colored satins are apt to look vulgar. There is a change in the arrangement of the sash. The former long loops are now short bows, with the long ends falling to the lower edge of the skirt. The sash gives such a thoroughly feminine and youthful finish to the costume that it is sure to be received with pleasure.

One of the airiest caprices of fashion is an enormous tulle cravat forming a large bow, tied directly under the chin, which looks like a big delusive butterfly. The latest fad of ribbon cravat is made of several yards of ribbon, quite narrow, which is used up in loops and two long ends nearly reaching to the feet. Ruches are very much worn also about the neck of gowns, spangled black tulle being the favorite now in Paris, although one can form them out of any of the lovely thin stuffs that are so plentiful. Black velvet belts are in vogue too.

A smart costume designed for a young widow in the last stages of mourning and described in the New York Sun is made of white silk muslin with the tiniest of black dots, a black lace application in a large bowknot design on the front of the skirt, a smaller one on the waist. It is all accordion plaited and made over a white peau de soie, the wrinkled belt and collar of soft white and black silk. The large picture hat worn with this lovely gown is a lace foundation trimmed with knife plaited black silk mull and soft white silk folded about the crown, black tulle plaited and standing up straight, giving a chic finish to the filmy structure. It looks so cool and such a relief after the heavy black. Another extremely striking gown for the same person was made with the skirt of gray and black silk pekin, stylish double breasted coat of black satin, the pointed basque cut away in front and fastened with large jet buttons. It had huge revers, covered up with the cravat of white silk muslin, elbow puffs of black satin, long gray suede gloves and a gray chip hat with parma violets.

How to Remedy a Few Annoyances.

To drive red ants out of a cupboard place in it an earthen dish containing a pint of tar, over which two quarts of hot water have been poured.

If irons be rough and sticky, rub them on fine salt sprinkled on a board.

Sprinkle clothes with a whisk broom dipped in hot water.

A spoonful of vinegar put into the water in which meats or fowls are boiled makes them tender.

The rubber rings of preserve jars will recover their elasticity if soaked for awhile in weak ammonia water.

Souvenir Cushions.

The latest fads in cushions are what are called "souvenir cushions." A young bride possesses an entire set of these. One is made of pieces of the dress she wore the first time she met her husband, another from pieces of her engagement dress, while the most gorgeous of all is one made of pieces of her wedding dress. Of course these cushions are strictly ornamental.

Oatmeal Nectar.

A cheap, refreshing beverage is made from oatmeal. Into a large earthenware or porcelain lined kettle put 4 ounces of fresh oatmeal, 6 ounces of white sugar and a lemon sliced very thin. Mix with just enough cold water to melt the ingredients; then pour on one gallon of boiling water, stirring all the while. When cold, this will be found a delightful drink.

If the road is shaped up right, and the loose stones off, and iron sluice pipe set for proper drainage, and the roadbed rolled down hard with an ordinary farm roller, the water will run off from instead of soaking into the road, and then it is dry and good. Surprising what a few iron sluice pipes and a day's work with a farm roller will do.

Get your road shaped up and iron sluice pipe set so a rider or driver never knows where a sluice is, roll it down, and you have a hard, dry road that is a thing of beauty and a joy forever at an expense that is nearly nil.—Old Roadmaster.

SACHET PERFUMES.

A Feminine Fad That Is Expressed In Many and Varied Forms.

There is one fad that has come to stay. This is the use of sachets, which, owing to the fastidious sister's ingenuity, now take form and scent as varied as the uses to which they are put. This sweet scented craze starts with the chiffonier pads, large enough to infold whatever articles they are placed near, and is carried out even to the perfuming of madam's shoe and hosiery bags.

There are skirt sachets, 32 inches long and about 3½ wide, which are attached to a seam of the garment; bodice sachets, sprinkled with the subtle perfume that the wearer affects; glove, underwear, ribbon, lace, fan, veil and handkerchief sachets. The modistes make up whole sets of scented fancies for use here and there about one's frocks, and orders are frequently given for elaborate specimens which are to serve as bridal presents.

Especial attention is paid by the lover of fragrant belongings to bed and wardrobe sachets. The former is a French novelty, made in pongee silk in various tints and embroidered in iris flowers.

Some delicious sachet, such as Florentine violet, orris, heliotrope blanc, marechale or Russian violet, is sifted upon the lining of batting. The sachet is laid across the bed after it is made, giving it a decidedly dressy appearance and imparting a delightful odor both to the bed and apartment. The same conceits are designed, in less elegant guise, for perfume pads in bureau drawers, on wardrobe shelves and in trunk trays.

A very dainty idea that carries along with one's best wishes to an invalid friend a waft of fragrant blossom is the envelope sachet. In making this the perfume is first decided upon, so that the color scheme may develop the notion. If violet sachet is to be used, a violet envelope is selected—one of the big, square shapes that are so much employed in fashionable correspondence. The envelope is run all around with bebe ribbon—violet in tint—which is pased through tiny slits, ending in fluffy bunches at the corners. If an artist has the fashioning of one of these sweets, she paints a few violets, scattered as if by a careless hand, across the tender toned paper. Then the violet powder has only to be inclosed in a tissue wrapping the size of the envelope, slipped inside of it and the flap caught down with a bit of violet wax pressed upon the stems of a few violets so that they are held in place.

Sleep With the Scent of the Sea.

The woman or girl who loves the smell of the sea, but can't get away to revel in it for more than a day's excursion at a time, can have it with her always if she will take pains to bring home from each trip a basketful of sea moss. In four or five trips she will secure all that is needed and not be loaded down uncomfortably. The moss can be used for filling pillows, and a woman who has tried it declares that nothing injures it, for even if the pillow is soaked through the sun dries the moss off again quickly. Pongee silk, with an interlining of cheesecloth, makes an excellent cover for these cushions and, if embroidered with sea anemones, starfish and seaweed designs, will be especially appropriate. The moss must be thoroughly dried before it is used. It will retain something of the salt sea smell, which is said to have the virtue of wooing sleep for those who need it.

five seams, and each front has a dart. A large, full shaped collar, cut in silk, can be either made plain or have the lace points, as also the cuffs, which should match the collar. Three ornamental buttons adorn each side.

The jacket would take 2¼ yards of double width material, and the collar and cuffs require three-fourths of a yard if reversible or 1⅜ in fancy silk, etc.

Our "Miller" Oil Heater will warm a room. We also make Brass Tables with Onyx Tops, The "Rochester" lamp, etc. Established 1844. We make only the best.

The "Miller" gives bright, steady light, flame does not "climb" to smoke ceiling; lighted without removing chimney; a simple turn of button (which a child can do safely), adjusts the wick so the flame is always even (a great improvement over the old way of pulling up the wick); to put in new wick is no trouble. An Indicator tells when lamp is full of oil; the draft is so controlled that chimneys are not broken by the flame. THE "MILLER" A WONDERFUL LAMP; EVERYBODY WOULD BUY IT. CHILDREN'S DRESS.

PICTURESQUE STYLES GIVING WAY TO SIMPLE DESIGNS.

Girls and Boys Now Have Fashions of Their Own—These Admit of Freedom of Motion and Are Otherwise Suited to Little People.

It is rumored, and the early autumn styles accentuate the rumor, that children are to have fashions of their own—fashions from which will be evolved hats and frocks possessing individual appropriateness for the wearer. This is as it ought to be, for few little people are adapted to the picturesque requirements of a Lord Fauntleroy, a vandyke small boy or an empire period little girl. Elaborate costumes and expensive materials are not in good taste and are sure to take away rather than add to the attractiveness of children. Most deplorable of all, however, are clothes that impede the freedom of movement. This is a point that cannot be too seriously considered. It is quite depressing to see a little child so dressed that she cannot run and jump. The first essential in the child's costume should be its ease. And a curious indifference to the advantages of civilization is shown when the lace or silken drapery, tight collar or intrusive belt stand in the way of a good skip.

DRESS FOR YOUNG GIRL.

The reefer jacket and plain serge skirt so popular this season is one of the best possible styles for children, especially when completed by one of the popular blouse shirts with turndown collars and bows. But even in the case of the skirt and coat style individual appropriateness ought to have a hearing, for this style is more especially suited to children who are thin. For those who are stout the loose dress with the yoke may be adopted with complete success, while those who are awkward in their movements should be carefully dressed in a blouse made in the old fashioned style, with three box plaits from neck to hem, neatly belted round the hips with a leather or suede belt. This style, of course, when all made in one piece, is only suitable up to the age of 7, but the jacket bodice, cut on the same lines, worn with a plain skirt, may be induced to do service until childhood merges into young womanhood.

For dress occasions simple designs are readily made ornate by a dressy sleeve and the application of extra trimming. In illustration may be cited a costume in fine woolen material, with a bodice fashioned with a short crosscut basque. The turndown collar opens in front over a vest trimmed with bands of embroidery. The double puffed sleeves are also divided with an embroidered band, and collar and skirt are similarly adorned.

For little boys not yet in trousers the three piece suit of jacket, underblouse and skirt is simple, convenient and comfortable. This model may be made entirely of cheviot, or the skirt and underblouse may be in flannel. For dressy occasions silk may be employed.

In New York many little girls still wear the guimpe dress. This consists of a tight fitting bodice, cut square back and front, reaching to the waist, onto which the full skirt is gathered, while the guimpe, which is often white, is made with full sleeves gathered into tight cuffs. The bodices are trimmed in various ways, sometimes bearing braces of ribbon to tie on the shoulders, at other times giving evidence of the industry of the mothers, with hand embroidery in the front, the embroidery again appearing on the hem of the full skirt.

LITTLE BOY'S SUIT.

But it is not alone the children's frocks which claim attention. Their petticoats are matters for thought. The white petticoat is par excellence the petticoat of childhood, and a pretty but by no means economical way of making this is with a deep bodice and a flounce trimmed with a broad band of torchon insertion, a hem of cambric and a frill of torchon, the torchon to be of the best quality and about 2½ inches in width.

Vanity

is a virtuous vice. The world is better for it. It makes men ambitious—and it makes women careful of their personal appearance. It doesn't take much money to keep well-dressed now-a-days. Cleaning or dyeing makes it possible to use soiled or faded garments. And there's where our ax comes in. We are in the Cleaning and Dyeing business. Our cleaner is ready, and our dyer has his fall shades mixed.

A LYNCHING IN MOSINEE.

[Copyright, 1894, by Bacheller, Johnson, & Bacheller.]

III.

The mob halted—wavered. Most of them were spectators merely; and they would have turned away, but again that implacable, howling voice arose, with only curses for words.

"Go on, you sneaks! Smash 'im!"

Instantly a dozen desperate men began fighting their way toward the door. Dan waited immovable.

Friends shouted: "Open up, for God's sake, Dan—" Those nearest him leaped up as if to seize his hands.

"Back! Stand off!" was his terrible cry, "or by the livin' God, I'll shoot." His words had death in them, and the crowd fell back and there was another pause which was portentous.

Dan shivered with a sort of awe. As far as his eye ranged, he saw a flood of human faces on which the moonlight and the electric lights, intermingling, fell. It began at his feet, this flood, it extended into the shadow at every point. And he stood there alone.

Suddenly the door behind him opened and shut with a slam. His wife stood beside him with a revolver in her hand.

"Annie, for God's sake." He turned his head and his hands fell. One of the shadowy figures near the wall sprang toward him. A shot rang and the figure sprang back with a scream.

"Don't look at me, Dan," cried the heroic little woman. "Watch out!"

Some of the crowd cheered, others cursed in a wild uproar. This was the unexpected again. A sort of daze fell on them. Then they called back and forth jests, suggestions, imprecations. But the nucleus of insatiable spirits did not surrender. They raised a new cry.

"The back door! Bring sledges."

"That's the talk. Roun' to the back!"

"Keep the sheriff where he is and we'll be inside—"

Dan turned to his wife bitterly:

"We're beat. We can't do anything here, and we can't get in."

The crowd jeered. "They ain't enough o' yeh, Dan."

"Let me stay here, Dan, while you—"

"No. I won't do it." He couldn't tell her that it was her coming that had broken his hold on the crowd. He turned to them again in appeal. As he spoke the crashing of the sledges began.

"For God's sake!—am I alone? Ain't they any law-abidin' citizens in this county? Where's the mayor? Where's all the lawyers and judges?"

The crowd laughed.

"In bed, Dan, where you ought to be."

"Open the door, Annie. I'll face 'em alone."

"I can't. I left the keys inside."

"What holds it? the spring catch?"

"That's all."

He threw his great weight with terrible force against the heavy door. Once, twice.

"Let us help, Dan," suggested the jocular mob. But Annie's steady hand kept them back. The door gave way. They sprang through and threw it shut; but could not hold it against the mob.

They were too late, anyhow. The main corridor was filled with a crowd of men hammering, wrenching at the iron door that led into the corridor before the cells.

Dan's heart swelled with grief and rage till he nearly choked. Had he been alone, such was the blind rage in his soul, he would have emptied his revolver into the massed faces and then assailed them with his bare hands.

"O, if I only stood on the other side of that door!" he moaned to his wife, whose white, set face had not a trace of fear.

He took his revolver by the barrel and flung it through the grating at the window of the cell where the prisoner cowered.

"Defend y'rself, y' fool!" he shouted, but the revolver struck crosswise and fell to the floor outside the cell. The mob of densely-packed men turned upon him with hell in their eyes: "Kill the damn fool!" Dan presented his other weapon to their eyes. "Keep y'r hands off us—" They would have crushed and trampled them both under foot, only for a circle of friends who saw death in the air, and struggled to prevent shooting.

The gate gave way, and a deafening, reverberating shout went up. The prisoners, whose pale faces had been peering from the barred windows, shrank back and shivered.

The assailants were at a loss. "Which is him?" they called, as they halted before the lower row of cells. "Tell us, Dan."

Dan shook his hand. "Not by a d——n sight."

"This is the fellow!" yelled a big man in a spotted jacket.

The occupant of the cell gave a scream of fear. "Oh, no, no! My God, no! I ain't the man! It's that next—"

"We'll hang every d——n man—"

"Next door to the left," said a calm voice from one of the upper cells. "The man in red stockings."

"Defend y'rself!" cried Dan again. But the prisoner was powerless. The revolver was out of his reach, and he couldn't have used it anyway. He could only cling to the bunk and to the door as they wrenched him out; his dry lips uttered no sound, and his eyes had the wide-open look a hunted animal wears. He made no other resistance than to catch at everything in reach.

"Out with 'im!"

"Here he comes. Get out o' the way."

Everybody was as mad now to get out as they had previously been to get in. They swept Dan and Annie into a corner by the door and held them there; but as they went by he called:

"You ain't done with me yet, John Haynes, Nick Gootz, Sam Morris." They were too intent on getting outside to do more than glance at him. A wild roar arose outside. For the first time Annie weakened and Dan saw it.

"Go inside, Annie."

He took her revolver from her hand and pushed her into the living room, then turned and rushed to the doorway.

The sight made his hair tingle and stir. Few men in their lifetime ever see such a scene. Thousands of human beings packed closely together, their faces concentered, each man strained to tiptoe and motionless. Something—some vast mesmeric influence—seemed to emanate from the mass.

In the center of the lawn two nimble figures were mounting into a slender elm tree. As they went up, a deep expectant hush fell on the crowd, as if they stood waiting the bursting of a burning shell. Each ear was strained forward to taste the sweet horror of hearing the condemned man's agonizing prayers for life. But they were disappointed. Either he was dazed with fear, or he had reached that reckless mood where shudders and cries cease. He remained silent, and the raucous voice that had dominated and directed the crowd the whole evening, rose:

"String 'im up! Up with the black-hearted—"

A twisting, writhing form rose into the air. A cold creeping shudder touched all but the few incarnate demons who were pulling at the rope with jovial shouts.

"Ooop-a-daisy!"

"Heave ho!"

"Up she rises."

"Now, all together!"

The sheriff wept in his helpless horror and rage; but suddenly without noise the writhing shadow fell into the sea of men again. Then a new cry arose:

"Bring another rope. Another rope."

There was a little delay. Now again the crowd relented, and would have given up. But a rope came whizzing over their heads, and was thrown from hand to hand till it reached the hangman. As they knotted the noose and flung it over the head of the reviving prisoner, he raised his voice in agonized cries and prayers for mercy.

"Up with 'im! Shut his guzzle," commanded the leader.

"Stop!" shouted Dan. "F'r God Almighty's sake don't hang the man twice!"

"Here she goes—now, yo—hee!"

Dan raised his revolver and fired at the men in the trees.

"Get down! (Bang.) Drop out o' that. (Bang—bang.) You hellions!"

They dropped from the tree like ripe fruit. Snarling howls arose as the faces turned upon the sheriff. But he was oblivious to all danger now. His soul was at white heat. He faced them in a sort of delirium of joy.

His arm was struck down by a friend. "Drop it, Dan—they'll string you up, too—drop it, I say!"

A half dozen friendly arms seized him and dragged him away around the house, raving, lashing out like a madman.

When he came back it was after twelve o'clock, the town was quiet, deserted. There was no sign of that monstrous outbreak of savagery, save the trampled grass, the broken branches, and the swinging shape in the tallest elm, moving fitfully in the soft wind, the quiet moon shining upon the contorted face, crushed close against the limb.

He went in to Annie, his wife, with a grim face. "I go before the county with this as an issue," he said. "We'll see whether this represents the people of Pine county."

A Greater Charm Than Years of Study.

Concerning Mr. Ragan's "Footprints of Washington", to be given in Music Hall tonight, the Rockford (Ill.) Morning Star says: "It was a magnificent lecture superbly illustrated. Mr. Ragan is an entertaining speaker, a consummate master of the English language, and his delivery is so easy and graceful, so free from artificialities, that it is indeed a pleasure to listen to him. The audience was privileged to enjoy a rare intellectual treat. The subject last evening was Footprints of George Washington, and in its development the life of the great leader was followed from boyhood to death, and all the places made historic by him were charmingly described. Not only is the lecture a delightful one to listen to, but it impresses the places and events of Washington's life upon the mind ineffaceably, and gives them a greater charm than years of study can impart."

BIG-HEARTED BRETHREN.

PASTOR BRAKER PRAISES THE ROYAL ARCANUM.

Sees in the Order the Virtues of Unselfishness, Philanthropy and Mutual Friendship, and an Instrument for Lining Clouds with Gold.

Rev. J. S. Braker of Scotch Plains preached to the local Royal Arcanum Council Sunday evening. The church was well filled. The Council met at their rooms and marched in a body to the church, where front seats were reserved. The church was prettily decorated with Autumn verdure, and hanging over the pulpit was the word Welcome, made of flowers.

After extending a greeting to the members, the preacher announced for his texts Gen. 4:3, "Am I my brother's keeper?"—and Rom. 14:7, "No man dieth to himself". He said:

The organization to which you belong has three features which hold it together. There is the feature of unselfishness. A man joining the Royal Arcanum carries with him a supreme thought of those who may survive him, for it takes the hand of death to bring about pecuniary benefit. There are no dividends accruing from any additions to the order to be given to the one securing a new member. The thought of benefit and generosity prompts each one to multiply the blessing. Such a feature tends to liberalize the soul. Young manhood looking to a long stretch of years to live feels as each assessment is paid that some widow, mother or sister reaps the benefit of the $3,000 given at death.

Philanthropy is embodied in each payment. There is another feature appealing to the heart and not the pocketbook. It is the element of mutual friendship. In this feature is exhibited the same mutualities as are seen in orders not having any pecuniary benefits. We are composed of men ranging in age between 21 and 55 years, men young enough to feel the blood-bound of each heart beat, and men who have not entered the period of dotage before coming into the association.

We are not lost in the extensive operations of the multiplied organization; for such a sense of brotherhood has entered our ranks that 1536 sub-councils do not weaken our devotion to the local council, nor does the multiplied membership (we now number 150,000) lessen our devotion to principle of individual support and interest.

A just appreciation of mutual benefit can be known when the ratio of expenses to benefits paid during the last year was about 2¼ per cent. So far we have considered features of mutual benefits, monetary advantage and the support of friendship. But the most important feature of Royal Arcanum is that which the text sets forth; "No man dieth to himself". There is, then, the feature of a living memory in death.

How often the widows of our former members, as they gather about the hearthstone with the children, say, "He thought of these and me." When the hushed voice of the mourner shall be heard over our bodies there will be one left whose bruised heart shall in part be healed by the thought that the dead one had not left her without a substantial token of love.

Besides, we give what money cannot buy. "Because you are our brother, death itself shall not put out the fire on the hearthstone; neither shall embarrassment add the last dregs of bitterness to the cup of your family's bereavement, when it shall be made overflowing by your departure". Eighty-two hundred families, representing 400,000 souls, have reaped the benefit of a provident mind and heart.

How strongly this appeals to the mothers, the wives, the sisters of these men who are not so mutually protected! If there were need of benediction to be pronounced, its sentiment would be that you speed on in your errands of mutual help, making you unselfish, that you liberalize your souls in the reciprocities with your fellow-members of the multiplied organization, that you live the lives of provident men who know their hand must fall palsied when smitten by the arch enemy of life, so that a slight lining of gold shall be seen in the black cloud of bereavement by those who wear the crepe of widowhood.

TO BLOCK APPEALS.

Plainfield Will Ask for Legislative Amendments.

CITY COURT TO BE PROTECTED.

Counselor Marsh Will Seek to Prevent Its Decisions from Being Taken Before County Juries That Know Nothing About Plainfield Affairs—Venino and Lyon Dishonored—Other Municipal Doings.

The November meeting of the city Common Council held last evening was attended by all except Councilmen Bird and Stockton. President See presided. City Clerk MacMurray read the minutes, and after they were approved the Council proceeded with the ordinary routine of business.

The consideration of the following matters was referred to the proper committees: The Y. M. C. A. and other property-owners asked that a fire-alarm box be placed at the corner of Watchung avenue and Front street. Residents of Church and Second streets petitioned that a lamp be placed on that corner. Asa Collier asked for permission to erect a lean-to, 5x18, at 416 Sycamore street, the Olympia building. Jacob Sacher and P. Regan applied for peddlers' licenses. Fred Westphal requested permission to place an awning in front of 500 West Fourth street, leaving three sides of the building open for approach of firemen. J. P. Homan desired to build an addition to his barn on West Fifth street.

In a communication W. H. Moore said he had purchased from the estate of S. F. Randolph land on the northerly side of West Front street and that he desired to revoke the consent given Oct. 19, 1893 for the extension the Plainfield Street Railway Company past the property. The letter was filed. Residents near the Monroe Avenue Chapel asked that lamps be placed along that avenue between Third and Seventh streets. This petition was referred with power. Mayor Gilbert's appointment of Edwin H. Dobbs as a special policeman was confined. Alert Hose Company having expelled A. F. Venino and W. H. Lyon, Jr., for having moved away, leaving an indebtedness and not attending meetings, the Board of Engineers so reported to the Council. The expulsion of the two men was approved. Chief George W. Grant's application for a ten-days leave of absence was referred to the Police Board. City Physician Simpson's report was referred to the Alms Committee and the regular report of the collector to the Finance Committee.

Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh made his semi-annual report of the legal affairs of the city. It was, in short, as follows:

In the Supreme Court the case on contract of Charles K. Moore against the city was ordered dismissed in the last term of court. In the case on certiorari of the treasurer against Michael Watson, Judge VanSyckel allowed the writ and it is the purpose of Mr. Marsh to force argument if possible. In the Common Pleas the case on appeal of Patrick Bergen agrinst the treasurer has been set down for trial November 14. Peter Schneiderwind's appeal was dismissed on Mr. Marsh's motion because of a defect of precedure on the part of the appellant.

Watson has appealed from the decision of the City Court, November 1, when he was sentenced to pay a $100 fine and go to jail for 59 days for illicit liquor selling. "There should not be allowed to a person convicted after a trial before a court and jury in the City Court an opportunity to be tried over again before another court and jury in Elizabeth. In the days of special legislation an attempt was made to change the charter which allows such an appeal and an act of the Legislature was passed purporting to take away the right to appeal, and restricting the defendant to his remedy by certiorari. The act was carelessly drawn and was subsequently declared unconstitutional, thereby leaving the old method of appeal still in force. Mayor Gilbert has requested me to draft a general act to be presented to the next Legislature with a view of remedying this serious defect in Plainfield's charter.

"There have been a number of cases finally disposed of in the City Court, among them two convictions of William Lee for unlicensed sales of liquor, one on the verdict of a jury and the other on a plea of non vult. In the former case a fine of $50 was imposed and in the latter sentence was suspended with a view to imposing the sentence later on in case of formal complaint against the same man. Another case against Michael Watson for illicit liquor selling remains to be tried in the City Court and has been set down for Nov. 13 at 2 in the afternoon."

The Board of Health requested the Council to appoint a committee of three to confer with a committee of the board to draft a plumbing ordinance. On motion of Mr. Erickson the Sewer Committee was appointed by the president. The renewal for 45 days of three notes, $2,500 for the general fund, $1,000 for the fire department, and $500 for the poor fund, was authorized. A loan was ordered negotiated of $3,000 for the sewers construction. Two lights were ordered placed on Eighth street near Grant avenue. The matter of putting a light on Church street was left in the committee's hands.

In regard to Chief Grant's application for leave of absence, Mr. Millington said that the chief did not state when he wanted the ten-days of vacation. He might desire to go before election. He thought the request should be granted subject to the restrictions of the Police Board. On motion of Mr. Fisk the matter was referred to the board with power. Mr. Fisk said that it had been his intention to introduce a resolution for sidewalks on Belvidere avenue but had not because he found that he would have to wait until the next meeting when the new ordinance had gone into effect.

Mr. Frost reported the progress of sewer construction as follows: Feet already completed, 3,166; to be laid, 24,323; total number of feet, 27,489. He said there remained a little over a month to do the rest of the work in. If the weather was not very unfavorable it was probable that most of it would be finished. The 50 Italians now employed would rush the work through.

Mr. Fisk moved that two official papers, The Courier and The News, having consolidated, the resolution appointing them be rescinded and The Courier-News appointed in their place. The motion was carried. A new ordinance accepting Stelle avenue and part of Madison avenue, published in another column, was read twice and ordered advertised. Mr. Erickson said that Mr. Homan did not give the dimensions of the addition he wished to build, and the application was therefore returned. The bond of the old water works company was ordered returned. The sidewalk ordinance was read for the third time and adopted. A number of bills was ordered paid and the Council then adjourned.

ANCIENT WHIPPANY.

The Old New Jersey Village Awakens to a Newer Life.

With the prospect of the extension of the Rockaway Valley Railroad from Morristown through Morris Plains to Whippany, the citizens of that old New Jersey village have awakened to a new life of industry and activity. There are already three paper mills in the village in active operation, the one of the McEwan Bros. being now in the process of enlargement, and there are other manufacturing enterprises in a small way. The people of Whippany are preparing to make a fight on the excise question. For the purpose of especially directing workingmen's efforts in a thorough and systematic way, they have organized "The Whiponong Club for Workingmen". The plans and work of this association have received the energetic and earnest support of the citizens of the community.

The Whiponog Association has purchase a three-quarter acre plot of ground, centrally situated in the village, which has been finely graded, fenced and laid out with walks, and planted with rows of maple trees. Situated in the middle of the lot has been begun and nearly completed a two-story building 30 by 50 feet in size. It is the intention of the management, which is composed of some of the leading citizens and most prominent business men of Whippany and Morristown, to open at once, upon the lower floor, a reading room, a room for games, a dining room, and kitchen, and devote the entire area of the upper floor for an assembly hall with a stage and two small ante-rooms in one end, where entertainments and lectures or literary courses may be given, and where also the people of Hanover township may find a hall suitable for the purposes of public meetings. It is also ultimately intended to enlarge the building so as to include the further attractions of a bowling alley and gymnasium. Another feature will be a $4,500 public library, the nucleus of which has already been provided by the gift of 2,000 volumes by Jonathan W. Roberts of Morris Plains, and 600 volumes by Mrs. Julius Catlin of Morristown.

Election Night in the Newspaper Office.

(Julian Ralph in Harper's.)

There is one night in every year, in every great newspaper office, when work is done that is least understood of all that goes on in the making of a daily paper; one night when the highest state of fever attends the excitement and strain of the most intense work that falls to the lot of any men, except soldiers in war. That is election night. That is the night when a few men sit down at six o'clock before virgin sheets of paper, with the knowledge that before two o'clock the next morning they must cover those sheets with the election returns of a nation, digesting mountains of figures, and apprising the public of the results in the most condensed forms, weeks in advance of the official announcements, as sparks might be counted while they fly from the shapeless iron on a blacksmith's anvil.

THE SCHOOL BOARD.

IT PREPARES TO FILL VACANT MEMBERSHIP.

Janitors Reappointed, Sidewalk Improvements Authorized, and the Matter of Flags Discussed.

The regular November meeting of the Board of Education was held last evening. President Probasco was in the chair, and Messrs. Jenkins, Lovell and Finch were present.

Clerk L. E. Clark read the minutes of the previous meeting, which were approved. Secretary E. L. Finch read the bills, which were approved and ordered paid.

The statement of Collector John Johnson was received, showing that $2,280.54 had been deposited in the bank.

A communication was received from Street Commissioner Robert Meeker requesting them to curb the sidewalk at 601 613 Central avenue, Wadsworth property, also to relay the sidewalk in front of Franklin School and curb the walk at the Irving School. It was stated that if the work was not attended to the Common Council would have it done and charged to the Board. The Board decided to ask for bids with a view to having the work done at once.

Dr. M. J. Whitford of New Market, secretary of the schools in Piscataway township, communicated with the Board in regard to children attending the Plainfield school, and asked that the matter be attended to. Another communication from F. A. Muench of Dunellen, on the same subject, was received, and the matter referred to Superintendent of Schools for adjustment.

Franklin Council No. 41, J. O. U. A. M., asked the Board to see that the flags were properly displayed on the schools. The Board said that Janitor Mundy found it difficult to raise the flag on the Washington School on account of the position of the pole. The matter was referred to the building committee with power.

Mr. Lovell made a motion that a sufficient amount of money be borrowed for expenses, in anticipation of taxes. The funds were getting low and the State appropriation was not as large this year as previously.

The statement of the Auditing Committee was received and filed, and it was ordered published in the papers. The clerk was authorized to post three notices for the purpose of filling vacancies on the Board. Superintendent Maxson reported $600 in tuition fees received, and it was decided not to hold school Tuesday on account of election. The question of reappointing janitors was brought up. Mr. Pugh's salary was increased from $50 to $65 a month, and all janitors were ordered reappointed. The Board adjourned subject to the call of the President.

AUDIBLE ELECTRIC BLOCK SIGNALS.

Tried On the Reading Railroad with Great Success—To Replace Towers.

Philadelphia, Nov. 5—On Saturday afternoon a successful test exhibition was given on the Reading Railroad, in the presence of a number of prominent railroad men of this city and from Buffalo, of the new patented device of the audible electric block signal company. As the "feelers" of the engine passed over the block plates, the approach of a similar train more than two miles away, hidden by a curve in a deep cut, was indicated by the electric gong in the cab of the engine, and in about 3½ minutes the train came in sight.

After it had passed the presence of an open switch was indicated, also the fact of danger from an overhanging end of a car partly on a siding and from an iron wire laid across the tracks. As this device works automatically and sounds a gong by the ear of the engineer there is little chance of an accident arising from defective or impeded vision, or inattention on the part of engineers or firemen. The cost of equipping a road is said to be about $200 per mile, and the expense of signal towers and switch-tower men is saved.

Birthday of Father and Twins.

The sixty-seventh birthday anniversary of Moses D. Brown was very pleasantly celebrated last evening at his home, 404 East Fourth street. It was also, by a happy coincidence, the birthday anniversary of his twin daughters, Mrs L. J. Denton and Mrs. Walter Runyon.

Twenty-eight relatives were present and spent the evening in a very enjoyable way. A beautifully decorated cake, bearing the initials of the organization, was presented by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers of Brooklyn. Another handsome tribute was a pillow of flowers with the figures "67" upon it. There were many other presents.

—Manager Schermerhorn will be in personal charge of the Union County Country Club returns tonight. He will be assisted by Mr. Norman, a member of the club. The Republican Headquarters operator will be Mr. Potter of Jersey City. The Country Club returns will be announced from the Casino stage.

NEW YORK VOTE SHORT.

Supt. Byrnes Estimates a Loss of One-third.

TOO MANY BALLOTS, HE SAYS

And Some Men Couldn't Fold Them in the Ten Minutes—Polling Reduced to a Question of Physical Endurance.

New York, Nov. 6—At 10:30 this morning Superintendent Byrnes reported the situation in this city as follows:

"All is quiet everywhere. There is no bad blood or trouble in sight. There have been a lot of complaints of interference with watchers, but they were dictated by too great zeal. No complaint has turned out to be serious on the investigation.

"The trouble is with polling the vote. It seems to have come down to a question of physical endurance. The great number of ballots is confusing to voters and causes much delay. The constitutional amendments complicate matters greatly. From present indications it will be difficult to get two-thirds of the vote polled, even if that much."

There is a big vote up the State, the weather being clear and cold.

$30,000 FIRE IN HACKENSACK.

The Plant of Edison Electric Light Company Totally Destroyed.

Hackensack, Nov. 6—The plant of the Edison Electric Light Company located here was totally destroyed by fire at 4 this morning. The loss is about $30,000. The plant was well insured. The fire started in a barn adjoining the engine room. Foreman Brockman's horse was burned to a crisp. The house of John Townsend was also burned. The company will rebuild at once.

Counselor Marsh to Decide.

George Mundy and his wife of Westfield, who are in destitute circumstances, and who have been helped by the Overseer of the Poor of Westfield, were brought to Plainfield yesterday and turned over to Overseer Vanderbeek, under an order from Judge Collins, declaring Plainfield to be chargeable with their support.

Mundy is 27 years old, and was born in Plainfield. He has lived in Westfield for nearly twelve years. His wife is ten years older than he is. Overseer Vanderbeek saw no reason why Plainfield should care for them and accordingly refused to receive them. The two were accordingly taken back to Westfield by the constable. Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh has been asked for an opinion in the case.

The Vote at Noon.

The total vote in each of the various districts of the city at 12 noon today was:

Second Ward, first district	324
second district	37
Third Ward	294
Fourth Ward, first district	217
second district	151
In North Plainfield:

The Final Rally.

The Democratic rally in Reform Hall last night was largely attended. Ex-Councilman Spengenberg was the efficient chairman, and beside him sat Lawyer Walter L. Hetfield and Judge W. A. Coddington. Hon. John T. Dunn made a manly speech on national issues, and Geo. Hooker of Mississippi spoke powerfully for the Democracy. It was a harmonious and enthusiastic gathering.

MOONSHINE.

A Tale in Prose and Verse of the Deeds of Evona Cyclers.

The Evona Cycle Club, an independent organization consisting of three members, has during the Summer and Autumn made several enjoyable trips on their wheels over the roads leading to and from Plainfield, taking in Staten Island, Newark and New Brunswick. During the bright evenings in late October they improved the opportunity to enjoy a moonlight ride, on which occasion they were joined by a Plainfield avenue resident and his wife, thus losing their right to the title of "The Triplet Gay" with which one of the original members had christened the club. The following was written in commemoration of the moonlight ride, on which occasion the only watch in the party was found to be, in some unaccountable way, an hour behind time:

CYCLING BY MOONLIGHT.

Oct. 15, '94.

Five cyclers went forth one cool, clear night,
When the round, full moon was shining bright,
On their silent steeds, with spirits gay,
Toward Brunswick town to speed away.

'T was the "Triplet gay" first started out,
'Mid the laughing jokes, and cheery shout
Of the friends, too young or too old, they say,
To be out at eve, from home astray.

Over shad'wy path to broad highway,
Where the moonlight gleams as bright as day,
On the rolling wheel, in natty suits,
They proceed to meet their new recruits.

These, in number, two, thus making five,
Who with cycling blood are all alive,
Through the darksome street to open road,
O'er the route, speed on, with one accord.

Through the shadows dark, of shady dale
In the silvery light of moonlit vale,
Fly the five right on through bracing air,
And they scarcely feel the road is there.

Till perchance a hill appears in view,
When they know at once there is work to do;
Just enough to start the quicker flow,
Of a glowing warmth from head to toe.

When the crest and crown is gained at last,
And a searching glance ahead is cast,
Their reward the cyclers gladly greet,
E'en a long straight coast; no teams to meet.

For a full ten miles their wheels roll on,
Through the streets of fair Metuchen town,
And away beyond, 'mong elms and pines,
And the maples, 'long the roadway lines.

Then for homeward run they turn about,
And though now and then a light went out,
There was little heed; with silvery light
Shone the fair moon still: no cloud in sight.

When the sheltering homes were reached at last,
'Twas the hour of ten, a little past:
By the Deacon's watch; three hours from seven,
But the old house clock said, nay, eleven.

As the rolling wheels of time glide on
And the moments fleet are quickly gone,
As each passing year adds one more mile
To the score of time we've made the while,

Be the way o'er which life's pathway's laid,
Through the shad'wy vale or darksome glade,
Be it o'er the smooth or level way,
Or along the untrod path we stray,

Be it up the steep and rugged climb,
We must journey on through passing time,
It is sure the light is shining still,
And that rest awaits at crown of hill.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTEBOOK.

A number of the members of that flourishing society of the High School, the Kappa Delta Phi, and some of their friends, attended the Ragan lecture last night, and occupied two of the boxes on the lower floor. The party, which consisted of George A. Horne '95, Henry B. Drake '95, Edgar I. Serrell '95, Charles B. Morse '95, Thomas D. Blair '95, F. Wilbur Cornwell '96, Ralph Campbell '93; N. Y. U. '98, Arthur B. Crane '97, J. Vincent Bittenhouse '97, Ernest Rapalye '97, J. Hazelwood Craig '96, Carl C. Gallup '96, and Henry Eggerding '96, met at The Daily Press office and marched in a body to Music Hall. The boxes have been engaged for the entire course, and will be occupied by the Kappa Delta Phi boys. This is a new departure for a High School society, but certainly a very good one. The Kappa Delta Phi should be congratulated for being the first to provide entertainment for its members outside of the regular weekly meetings.

Diocesan Bowling Union.

The Schedule Committee of the Diocesan Bowling Union met Sunday in Jersey City. J. F. Murphy of that city presided. It was decided to give out a schedule in about a week.

The entries are as follows: Catholic Club and St. Joseph's of Jersey City, T. A. B. of Newark, the Orange Valleys, the C. Y. M. L. of Rahway, and the C. Y. M. L. of Plainfield. Each plays two games with every other team. The Orange Valley enter a tournament for the first time.

Chimney Fire.

A chimney in the house of S. A. Cruikshank on Belvidere avenue caught fire last evening, and at 8:20 the firemen were notified by 'phone. No. 2's hose wagon sent to the house but as it was thought best to let the fire burn out the extinguishers were not used.

A FACE IN THE GLASS

Why it was that George Edmonds, who had been known as the pervicest man in a football game and the best boxer at college, could not summon up enough courage to propose to little Arline Phillips was a mystery. But it was so. He could not do it.

George had arrived at his twenty-fourth year without falling a victim to any feminine fascinations, but now he was badly in love, and that little blonde, Arline Phillips, was the only physician who could help his particular complaint.

The time was Halloween, and George was to take Arline to a party at the house of a friend. He knew all of the old Halloween games, and he decided that tonight, of all nights, was the time for him to make the plunge, if he ever were to do so.

He stood in front of his mirror, surveyed himself, and wondered how it was that a six-foot man, with the determined looking chin that he had, could not propose to a little girl who stood five feet nothing in her high-heeled boots.

"Halloween is the time," he said as he turned from the glass, "and I'll settle it to-night forever."

He got into the cab that had been waiting for him and ordered the driver to go on to the house of Arline—his Arline he hoped she would be before the night was over.

Miss Phillips received George with the careless, almost sisterly familiarity which is as much of a set-back to lovers as a decided coldness would be. He would have liked it had she been a little more distant with him.

As it was already late, they went at once to the house where the party was to be, and were received at the door by Miss Katie Edmonston, their hostess.

Miss Edmonston, a little girl with a freckled face and red hair, whom no one could call pretty, but whom all called attractive, received them at the door and told them to hasten, as the games were already in progress.

In the parlor was a large crowd of young men and women, busily engaged in the sport of diving for apples. In this sport, as every one knows, a lot of apples, each bearing the name of a man, are placed in a tub of water, and the girls try to catch them in their teeth. The name on the apple caught is sure to be the name of the future husband of the young woman who dives. There was another tub filled with apples in which there were the names of girls, but that was for the men, and consequently of comparatively little interest.

There was much diving, much laughter and much disgust when it was found that carefully curled hair was, owing to the water, hanging down, before the eyes of the owners, straight and stiff. But no one cares about hair at a Halloween party, and so the disgust was short-lived, indeed.

At last it came Arline's turn to dive, and, while the laughing crowd of girls were busy dragging her to the tub, George Edmonds slipped into it five apples, each bearing his own name.

He thought that should Arline get an apple with his name on it she would then expect the proposal that he was mustering up his courage to make.

Arline leaned over the tub and bit an apple, but it floated away from her, and so she tried again, but with no better success than before. She was persistent, however, and in about five minutes dripping and triumphant, she stood up with an apple held fast between her teeth.

An inspection revealed the fact that the apple bore instead of the name of George Edmonds the name of Frederick Hopkins. This Hopkins was a dapper little fellow who all the girls said was "nice," and he sat in the corner and smiled a huge smile when he heard the fair Arline read his name. To make matters worse, the festive Frederick had been a frequent visitor at Miss Phillips's house, and George had often been jealous of the attention she paid him.

The evening wore on and poor George was in evident agony over the fact that Arline had not chosen him for a partner in any of the games, and had, on the contrary, taken the dapper Hopkins more than once. George wished for some time that young Hopkins was playing full back to his end on rival football teams.

"Oh; wouldn't I down him!" he muttered; but fortunately for Hopkins, it was Halloween, and not Thanksgiving day, and that young gentleman wouldn't have played football anyway—it was too rough.

Midnight struck, "the witching hour when graves give forth their dead." And now was the time for the final and positive test. A girl took a candle in one hand and in the other a looking glass and walked backward up the stairs. It was supposed that at the top of the flight she would see the face of her future husband in the glass, but under no circumstances was she to turn around, for that would break the spell.

Several girls tried it, each one solemnly declared that she had seen a face in the glass, and then came Arline's turn.

"I suppose she'll see that fellow Hopkins," muttered George, as Arline went to get a light for her candle.

Just at this moment Katie Edmonston rushed up to George and said:

"Be quick, run up the back stairs and look over Arline's shoulder when she reaches the top. Hurry up now or she'll see you."

George hesitated but a moment and then obeyed. He reached the dark top floor and groped his way to the head of the front stairs. There he paused.

"Suppose," thought he, "that this should give her a fright from which she never could recover. Shall I do it?"

He had almost decided in the negative when he heard Arline coming slowly up the stairs. Up one flight she came and then on up the next. Very slow work it was and George could hear his heart thumping wildly as she came on.

But a few steps remained for her and then George bent over and almost touched her shoulder with his chin.

Arline sighed in a pleased sort of way, and then, without turning commenced her downward trip.

He rushed down the back stairs and when Arline Phillips reached the lower floor George was leaning against the wall trying to look unconcerned, but only succeeded in looking as if he had committed petit larceny and been caught in the act.

Miss Phillips was besieged with questions. "Whom had she seen?" "Did he look natural?" "Just tell us his first name, or even the color of his hair?"—but Arline refused, but said that he was a very nice young man.

George and Arline did not ride home that night, but as they were walking along he told the story that for so long had troubled him, and she, with just the proper diffidence, said:

"Yes."

The wedding took place with the beginning of the new year, just two months after All Hallows Eve, and as George Edmonds, the proudest man in New York, walked down the aisle, he saw Miss Edmonston looking at him from the corner of her eye, and as he passed her seat he bowed and murmured:

"Thanks."

Once in the carriage with Arline, George grew grave.

"Arline," he said, "I have a question to ask and a secret to tell you. Didn't Halloween night influence you some in accepting me?"

After a moment she answered with reluctance, "Yes."

"Well, Arline," he said, "I stood at the head of the stairs and looked over your shoulder that night. Now don't get angry," he continued as she raised her handkerchief to her face.

She remained silent while one could count ten and then said with a little laugh:

"Why should I be angry, when it was I who told Katie Edmonston to send you up the back stairs.

CALLING A HALT ON PICKLES.

Boston School Girls to Be Deprived of Their Favorite Luncheon.

Considerable interest is being manifested in regard to the luncheons now provided at recess time for boys and girls in the high schools. At almost every high school in the city the majority of the pupils buy their luncheons from the lunch counter kept by the janitor, and the food so provided consists largely of pies and cakes—"bakehouse stuff"—as some people call it, and pickles. The janitors keep that kind of food because the pupils buy it in preference to other more wholesome kinds and also because there is probably more profit in it. Nevertheless the parents of the pupils are anxious that some different system may be adopted in the manner of furnishing luncheons. They think it high time that something was done about it, for in schools where there are no lunch counters peddlers of cheap candy, cocoanut cakes, and other unwholesome compounds make their appearance at recess, and are generally well patronized by the hungry boys and girls.

The first official step toward bettering this state of things was taken when an order was passed by the School Board providing that all luncheons sold in the public schools should be such as are approved by the Committee on Hygiene and Physical Training. The committee was instructed to report at the next meeting of the Board a plan for providing suitable luncheons at proper places for the high school pupils.—Boston Transcript.

RACE WITH A MOOSE.

He Leads a Railroad Train for Over a Quarter of a Mile.

The morning express on the Bangor and Aroostock, from Houlton, had a race with a moose one afternoon, that is vividly described by the Boston Herald. Between Island Falls and Crystal, about thirty miles out of Houlton, the engineer saw a huge moose on the track, watching the approaching train and evidently undetermined whether to derail it or jump off and let it go about its business.

The engineer blew a succession of sharp blasts with the whistle, and this the moose evidently took for the word go for a race between himself and the train. At any rate, he turned, and, with the train not more than a dozen rods from him, he started down the track. The train was moving at the rate of forty miles an hour, but the moose flew like the wind and kept his distance. The passengers heard the warning blasts of the whistle and knew that something was on the track, but not until the train reached Crystal Station did they learn that they had been racing with a moose.

For a quarter of a mile the big animal kept up the almost incredible pace necessary to keep ahead of the train, and then, as if satisfied that he had convinced his competitor that there wasn't anything in the steam engine line that was coming into Aroostock to do him in a sprinting match, he left the track and plunged into the woods without so much as looking behind him.

THE GIRL WITH THE HARP.

Fashion Has Taken Up the Angelic Instrument as a Fad.

To fit the fashion of our resurrected grandmother's gowns, worn low over the shoulders, and crinolined skirts, with hair brought over the ears and loosely parted down the center, comes the harp this winter as the fashionable instrument for young girls to play.

Banjos and mandolins are laid aside. Whether the instrument has come in from the eternal fitness of things or not, girls, to be smart, should train for the harp.

It not only requires good execution, strong fingers, but Delsartean poses to make it picturesque. Quite a number of New York young girls are preparing for this winter. Their mothers are having them trained in a most proficient manner, that they may play at the afternoon receptions in their own parlors. Lovely gowns are fashioned for these children in soft old colors that harmonize with the yellow of the harp. The music is soft and full, not too brilliant to hush all other sounds, but serving as a delightful accompaniment to the singing or talking voice.

An instrument costs from $300 to $800, quite as much as a piano. Lessons are rather expensive, too; but the whole does not cost more than an education on the piano. The only difficulty comes in hardening the fingers. This is difficult. The thumbs are protected, but the other fingers will suffer during the first months, and nothing but continuous practice will remedy this.

THE DUMB OYSTER.

HIS ANATOMY DISSECTED FOR THE ENLIGHTENMENT OF ALL.

A Brave Man Who First Ate an Uncooked Oyster Known to Fame, But Not Identified. Oyster Farms of Long Island Sound.

When you "plant" oysters and start in to grow a crop you are relieved of many of the afflictions which come to disturb the lot of other agriculturists.

You don't have to look up at the sky every night before going to bed, and whether or not it rains is a matter of indifference. Then again you don't have to rush to gather the crop in one or two days when it is just ripe. A week or two makes no appreciable difference in the ripeness of an oyster. But there are some drawbacks to the business.

You have to wait three years before you can gather your first crop. You do not have the satisfaction of looking out of the window every morning to see how the crop is getting along, but then you are not bothered by the Russian thistle or the potato bug.

But everything in nature has its hereditary enemy which skulks in the shadows with a knife up its sleeves and breathes hard when it comes upon its prey. The dragon fly is the enemy of the mosquito, the mongoose eats the snake and the drumfish lives on oysters.

The drumfish illustrates one of the curious freaks of nature. Usually when nature arms an hereditary enemy of some other living thing it is equipped with means to conceal its approach. The feet of a heron fold up so that when it walks in the water it sticks its leg in like the point of a knife and the webs open out under the water. The tiger approaches its prey noiselessly and the chameleon adapts itself to the color of the tree so that it cannot be seen.

But this interesting principle of nature is reversed in the case of the drumfish. The drumfish notifies the oyster of its approach. It is provided with a natural drum which it beats, and when a shoal of drumfish come along they make a noise like a fife and drum corps. But the drumming does not help the oyster the least bit, because the oyster cannot run away. He hears the drummers coming. Their loud booming can be heard on any oyster bed on a still night, and the more the drumfish thinks of the helplessness of the oyster the more he drums.

Fig. 5. Vertical section of Left Valve of an Oyster Shell, Showing Laves of Growth.

When you eat an oyster he must be at least three years old. You can take up the shell and count each year of growth. It seems funny to a good many people that the oyster should not only grow in size, but the shell should grow with him. The shell only grows frontward. All the increase is made about the lips by the layings on of thin layers of shell from lime extracted from the water. Where the hinge is there is never any material growth.

Very few people are aware that the tail of an oyster contains its mouth. This will appear plain from the accompaning diagram of an oyster under a microscope. The oyster feeding at the wrong end gets his food in a nicely purified condition, as it must first pass through a multitude of gills and thin lips, which clear it of many ingredients.

The stronghold of the oyster is in his adductor muscle. This is the scientific name of the thick, heavy muscle holding both shells together, and it is here that all the physical strength is concentrated. His heart, his lung, his stomach and other organs are scattered about in a curious medley, seemingly held together by light filaments.

Young oysters are caught up Long Island Sound in millions and are called "seed oysters." They are sold to oystermen by the bushel and are "planted" by simply throwing them overboard on the feeding grounds. There they are allowed to lie for about a year. The second year they may be taken to another bed and again taken up for the third year's growth.

New York is said to be supplied with better oysters than any other city in the world. This statement is borne out by the testimony of travellers who have tried oysters in all countries. In Australia they have an oyster that is bigger than a dinner plate, and the oysters of England have the taste of old copper nails. This is said to arise from the fact that the oyster beds of England lie over copper mines.

The End of All.

He was plunged into the vortex of perplexity, and the girl was standing resolutely upon the brink, gazing down at him.

He looked up at her helplessly.

"And you object to my calling so frequently?" he said.

"Yes," she nodded.

"And I am not to be your escort on all occasions, as heretofore?"

"No."

"Nor call you by your first name?"

"No."

"Nor think of you any longer as my sweetheart?"

"No."

He gazed upon her as one standing upon the shore gazes at a receding ship.

"Well," he groaned, "the end of our romance has come, and we must get married."

The light that shone in her face gleamed in triumph.—Detroit Free Press.

THE CZAR WAS KIND.

AN AMERICAN GIRL'S MEETING WITH HIM IN COPENHAGEN.

He Was Frolicking with a Batch of Infant Royalties, and was Very Courteous to the Young Woman Who was Patronizing the Same Toy Shop.

Every autumn at about this time the Czarina has been in the habit of going with the Czar to Copenhagen to visit her parents, the aged King and Queen of Denmark. At the same time the Princess of Wales would journey northward to Denmark's shores accompanied by the Prince, and from Greece would come King George and Queen Olga, until the Danish King and Queen had all their children about them. Three years ago an American lady and her daughter were visiting in Copenhagen at the time of the royal gathering. In vain they tried several times to get near enough to Fredenborg, the castle of the Danish hosts, to see some of the royalties; and when once the daughter caught a glimpse of the Princesses Victoria and Maud driving a pony through the town, she felt herself well rewarded for the hours of watching. For so do mortals love the sight of royalty.

One morning the younger lady wanted to do a little shopping. She went to a toy store to buy a few of the queer-looking Danish playthings to take home to her little nephews, and she also wanted to buy a box of the queer-shaped candies made there. The toy store was crowded. There were nearly a dozen children, and with them half a dozen maids. The whole party seemed to be in charge of a tall stout man with a full beard and a pleasant face. He had the build of an athlete and the mild expression of a woman.

"Wait on the lady first," he said pleasantly in Ru sian to the shopkeeper, and then to the young lady he said in English: "I will not allow you to wait and be served after this horde of youngsters. They can well wait."

At this the youngest child of all, a boy carried in the big man's arms, began to kick and cry and behave very badly.

"I will wait," said the young lady, laughing at the youngster's screams and kicks, "for I see you have an impatient member in your party."

With a bow of thanks the athletic-looking man picked up a small drum with the Danish colors upon it and handed it to the struggling child in his arms. Then the others each received a pretty present, while some town children who had wandered in were treated to gifts of toys and pretty trifles. When all had been served with playthings the gentleman whispered to the child in his arms, and a minute afterward the little one, stretching out his little hands toward the young lady, handed her a book.

"Uncle 'Xander says I must give you you this because I was so rude," he said in fairly plain English, "and I will give you this myself," handing over a stick of many-colored candy.

EMPEROR ALEXANDER III.

When the company had filed out a great sleigh-like affair on wheels drove up to the door and all piled in. There was a struggle to get near the gentleman whom the little lad had called "Uncle 'Xander," and a tiny but pretty child who spoke nothing but English began to cry and show as much temper as the other had. But they were well-behaved children considering that they were all the way from two years up to fourteen; and the American girl and the shopkeeper cast admiring eyes after them as they drove away. From the back seat of the queer-looking vehicle a child waved his little hands as far as he could be seen.

"That is the Czar of Russia," said the shopkeeper. "He is on his annual visit to Copenhagen, and this is the way he amuses himself. He buys alternately of all the shopkeepers and is a friend to everyone.

"And who was the child in his arms? Oh, that is the son of our Crown Prince. He may be the King of Denmark some day. And the little girl who cried because she could not sit on the Czar's knee was Lady Alexandra Duff, who comes here every fall with her mother and grandmother. This year her father, the Duke of Fife, is here also. The child is a dainty mite, and if she were to come to the English throne (the Duke of York had not then married the Princess May) everybody around here would rejoice. The baby waving his hands from the back of the wagon is the Crown Prince of Greece. His father is the best of all the family, I think, and that is saying a great deal.

The Czar nodded back at the young lady and the shopkeeper just before the vehicle went out of sight and his tall shoulders and fine head were outlined like a silhouette against the sky.

"I have read a great many pretty things about the Czar, and have known people who received friendly words from him at their presentation to the Russian court," the young lady said afterward; "but I think I am the only American girl who ever saw Alexander at his best, among his little nephews and nieces, laughing with them over a toy counter."

Is It not for Company?

I have inquired in vain of all the horsemen I know why horses when standing along a sidewalk almost invariably stand with their fore feet on the curb. I cannot imagine any reason for it, and all my questioning of those who one might very well suppose would know have remained unanswered. It is interesting to notice the number of horses which indulge in this sort of elevation when pulled up alongside a sidewalk. Perhaps they do it to ease the strain on their check reins, though how it does it I cannot imagine.—Louisville Post.

"A SMALL, SWEET WAY."

"There's never a rose in all the world,
But makes some green spray sweeter;
There's never a wind in all the sky
But makes some bird wing fleeter;
There's never a star but brings to Heaven
Some silver radiance tender;
And never a rosy cloud but helps
To crown the sunset splendor;
No robin but may thrill some heart
His dawnlight gladness voicing.
God gives us all some small, sweet way
To set the world rejoicing."

FOUR FAMOUS QUEENS.

Two Found the Executioner; One Was Exiled, One is a Happy Ruler.

"More than half a century ago," a French lady said the other day, "two simple children at a garden fete at Versailles took a fancy to me, and would have me talk to them, play with them and prepare their fruit. Their own very fine ladies bribed and coaxed to no avail; the children returned to me and sat upon my knees. Destiny has strange surprises in her lottery! Those children are now Queen Victoria and the ex-Empress Eugenie. At that time who could have foretold their future greatness, for they were both many moves from holding the scepter? So you see that on my lap were seated at one moment the future sovereigns of two mighty kingdoms."

It is told of Marie Antoinette that she was a "true lady," and Mary Queen of Scots, whose life was only equal to Marie Antoinette's in tragic trouble, seems to have been much the same kind of a martyr, who in no strait forgot her dignity. Two little incidents connected with them, showing what true gentlewomen they were are little known and worth notice. On that wretched morning at Fotheringay Castle when the executioner offered to tie the handkerchief over Mary's eyes, she politely thanked him, and said: "By your leave, sir, I will do it myself." As stately Marie Antoinette ascended the incline of the guillotine and reached the summit, she inadvertently stepped on the executioner Sampson's foot; turning to him with a slight curtesy, this daughter of haughty Marie Teresa, and lawful Queen of France, said: "Monsieur, I beg your pardon. I did not see."

MONTANA'S PAINT MINE.

Four Colors in Which the Indians Used to Dress Themselves for War.

It is not generally know that we have in this locality, very near the "Geyser" a paint mine. We might say it was a quarry, there is so much of it. One of our enterprising citizens, Mr. Joseph Blessing, recently took a wagon and shovel and loaded up with two colors (there were three or four colors to be had) and brought it home, pounded it with a hammer, mixed it up with linseed oil, and put it on his picket fence. He now has one of the handsomest fences in the State—the upper part a rich old gold and the lower a beautiful maroon.

The mine seems to be simply inexhaustible. This mine and the "Geyser" which is near it, were discovered, or rather, located, about 18 years ago by that veteran old-timer, and prince of good fellows, Naylor Thompson, who everybody knows and likes. It was shown to him in the first place by a friendly Indian chief who took a liking to Naylor and assured him (Naylor) that this was the source of supply for all the Indians west of the Missisippi River and has been for centuries.

Those were the days when Naylor could draw his chair up to a table and sit down without knocking the table over—he was very active. Well, the Indians came thousands of miles for this paint and used it to decorate their persons when on the war path; trails led from the mine in all directions, showing that it had been a natural centre of meeting for the red men just the same as the well-know pipe-stone quarry of southwestern Minnesota. Naylor never made any use of the paint; he was in the habit of reaching a high state of exhilaration at times, when he would mount his bronco and let out a few yells and get out for some fun—and then woe to the tenderfoot or any one else who got in his way.

At such times he was in for fun and nothing else, and a Gatling gun would not make him change his mind when his neck was bowed. He would then paint the town in lurid colors, but he did not use any paint from the mine—that was all long ago. He still retains his interest in the mine, and claims he can furnish paint in four colors, by the train load, sufficient to paint all creation. If any one doubts this Naylor would like to see him. It is a big mine.—Townsend Messenger.

Obedience is nobler than freedom! What's free?

In the bonds of a boundless obedience dwells.

We need to bring our religion down from the clouds, where men don't live, to the earth, where they do.—Ferrer Martyn.

The Sacrifice.

"George," said she, in a low voice, "would you make a sacrifice for my happiness?"

"Certainly," he replied.

"Would you give up smoking for my sake?"

"Give up smoking for your sake?" he repeated. Then, after a silence, he exclaimed, hoarsely: "I can refuse you nothing. I will do so. Hereafter when I smoke it will be for my own sake.—Kansas City Gossip.

A Matrimonial Compromise.

"You and your wife always seem to get on admirably together. How do you manage it?"

"We came to an understanding early in our married life and have kept things up on the basis we established then."

"Tell me all about it."

"Well, when we first went to housekeeping my wife wanted linen sheets and I wanted cotton ones, and——"

"Well?"

"Well, we compromised by having linen sheets.—N.Y. Herald.

He is feeling in fine spirits, and has accepted a situation as engineer at Echo Mountain, having charge of the machinery which runs the inclined railway and all the electric works in Pasadena.

RAGAN ON WASHINGTON.

The Prince of Travelers and Lecturers Welcomed Back to Plainfield.

The warmth of affection in which H. H. Ragan is held by Plainfield people was testified to last night in Music Hall when a representative gathering braved the wildness of the bitter storm and followed the lecturer with delight over the pathway of the Father of His Country. "Foot prints of Washington" gives a masterly delineation of the immortal patriot's career from boyhood to final sleep, and Mr. Ragan's tribute kindles a renewed veneration and love for the purity of his manhood, the nobility of his soul. The views were matchless, and the Plainfielders gave enthusiastic approval of the excellent reproductions of their own beloved Rock, Harberger House, and other local features. "Footprints of Washington" is an education for the young, a revelation of newer delights and glories for even those who thought they knew Washington. Mr. Ragan is a genial entertainer, splendid traveling escort, philosopher, friend and tutor. He was given warm welcome back to Plainfield. The next lecture of the series is "The Rhine and Switzerland", Music Hall, Nov. 28.

—Prominent Republicans heartily endorsed the article in The Daily Press last night proving the fairness and honesty of The Press in its treatment of all political parties—giving the news, and giving it first, regardless of politics.

Governor Levi K. Fuller of Vermont.

Governor Levi K. Fuller of Vermont has long been known as an active factor in the good roads movement, and when the good roads conference was called to order at Asbury Park last July the governor was nominated for chairman by half the delegates and his nomination seconded by the other half, so there was hardly any need for a vote. At the close of the proceedings a central committee was elected to take in hand the matter of future conferences, and very naturally all hands wanted Governor Fuller to be chairman of that committee, and it was so ordered. The other two members of the committee are General Roy Stone, United States special agent and engineer for road inquiry and department of agriculture, and Colonel E. H. Thayer of Clinton, Ia.

GEOLOGY OF ROADS.

Decayed Stone Does Not Cement and Is Poor Material For Road Metal.

Practical information for the guidance of all interested in the good roads movement is embodied in an important report of the United States geological survey on the geology of the common roads of the United States, prepared by Geologist N. S. Shaler. The report outlines the history of American roads, discusses the geological relations of common roads and the geological condition of road materials and reviews the sources of supply of road stones.

"With the invention of macadam," says Professor Shaler, "a new path in road construction was opened. The peculiar advantage arising from his discovery is that roads can be constructed at a relatively small expense as compared with pavements made of blocks, and the work can be done in many regions where suitable paving blocks cannot be obtained. If a mass of broken stones is allowed to lie with the fragments resting on each other, no evident trace of cementation takes place, but if the materials be repeatedly traversed by heavy wheels or a roller of great weight then as soon as it is wet the cementation sets in.

"This fixing of the bits of stone together has been attributed to the interlacing of their rough surfaces when they are driven together. The effect, however, is due mainly to the fact that the friction of bit on bit produces by the grinding action a sufficient amount of powdered rock to form the required cement. The binding strength of the cement exists in some measure with all the species of stone.

"No decayed stone retains the capacity of cementation when powdered, though in some few cases where material is charged with iron oxides it may undergo a certain binding, and no ordinary flinty gravels free from iron oxides can be made to form a firm roadbed. Pebbles, even though they cannot be made to cement in their natural state, will do so when broken into bits. Thus the macadam invention can be applied in three ways—breaking stone which is taken from the quarry, using stone broken by natural processes and which is not decayed, and by rebreaking pebbles which in their natural state cannot be made to unite by the cementing processes.

"The volcanic rocks, the dykestones and large crystalline masses and the superficial lavas are the best fitted for road-making, and of these the material known as basalt is much the best. The lavas which have cooled in fissures are stronger than those found on the earth's surface.

"Almost as important as the character of the road surface is the grade, and experience shows that, except under peculiar conditions, it is very unprofitable to build roads having five feet of fall in each 100 feet of length."

In general, the report concludes: "The greater part of the United States is characterized by great seasonal variations and those climatic features which most affect the conditions of carriage roads. There is prevailingly an alternation of heavy rainfall and protracted drought. During rain periods the roads are subjected to a deep penetration of water and serious washings. In the dry season the upper surface becomes powdery, and these conditions make high grade roads peculiarly necessary and make their maintenance costly."—Philadelphia Press.

WOMEN MUST SLEEP.

SO SAYS MEDICAL AUTHORITY.

Serious Results of Sleeplessness, and the Way to Avoid It.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

If you are dangerously sick, what is the first duty of your physician? He quiets the frightened nervous system, he deadens the pain, and you sleep well.

Men fall by the wayside, victims of over-strained mental activity.

Friends ask, "What is it?" and the answer comes in pitying tones, nervous prostration.

Thousands of women tremble on the brink of the same precipice.

A little more pressure; some sudden grief, real or even imagined unkindness from loved ones, and over the brink fall one more victim of nervous prostration.

It came upon you so quietly, in the beginning, that you were not alarmed. But when sleep deserted you night after night, until your eyes fairly burned the darkness, then you tossed in nervous agony, praying for sleep.

You ought to have known when you ceased to be regular in your courses, and you grew so irritable without cause, that there was serious trouble somewhere.

You ought to be told that indigestion, exhaustion, womb displacements, fainting, dizziness, and backache send the nerves wild with affright, and you cannot sleep.

Want of sleep gives birth to a thousand morbid fancies of the brain.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for twenty years has saved women from all this misery. It is the certain cure for all derangements peculiar to women. It has saved them from torments for years, and it will save you. Go to your druggist at once: soon you will be well and sleep like a child.

REMARKABLE CURES

Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.

I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR. PETER G. EYCK, OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:

For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

PETER G. EYCK,

DOANE & EDSALL.

SOME ARE POLITE, SOME RUDE.

Actors and Actresses and their Recognition of Courtesies.

The other afternoon over a good cup of tea, somebody was talking about the women of the stage, says "Bab," and another woman, who, notwithstanding she earns her living by her pen, has never lost her social position, told what she knew of them in regard to politeness. She said: "It frequently comes in my work to say something about the theatre and people on the stage, and thinking it a courtesy I invariably send them a marked copy of the paper. It is funny to see how absolutely rude some of them are, never acknowledging this and never seeming to recognize the kindness that is done them. I don't care, because I get the money for my work just the same, but one would think that time would teach these people the value of politeness. Henry Irving always writes a note of thanks for a pleasant word said about him; Ellen Terry never.

"At least, when I say never, I know that my experience has been the same as that of a good many others among the writers. Mrs. Kendal acknowledges a kind word at once, and invariably asks the woman who wrote it to come and see her. Jane Hading sends a little note in French, in which she speaks of her liking for American women, dilates on their cleverness, and ends by saying how thankful she is for the compliment paid her. Fanny Davenport, Georgia Cayvan, Maude Adams, Johnstone Bennett, Richard Mansfield, Marie Jansen, Lily Langtry, every one of them is polite and recognizes politeness shown to them. How about the rest? Well, I am afraid the rest must be put on the other list. At least, these are the women that I remember as polite."

Another woman spoke up and said:

"While we are talking about the stage, I want to tell you something in regard to Mrs. Kendal. There is a woman here in New York who can do very little for her except give her a good deal of affection. Two years ago this woman was ill, and not ill in a romantic or pretty way. She had a horrible abcess in her ear. Every day, no matter how busy she was, Mrs. Kendal came to see her, brought her some flowers to cheer her up, had some bright words to say to her, and the day was never too cold and she was never too tired not to remember the afflicted one, and to do all she could for her. Now, that is what I call kindness."

A girl who had evidently had too much green tea spoke up and said: "I wonder if that is true?" And a quiet voice came from the corner, saying: "I know it is true, for I was the woman."

Sign Language in a Restaurant.

"Is this a lunatic asylum or the Board of Trade?" asked a stranger who had wandered into a quick-service restaurant in Monroe street.

No wonder he asked the question. It was a few minutes past the noon hour, and the everyday stampede of wild-eyed and hungry lunchers was at its worst. The tables and the long counter had filled up, and there was the usual clattering of dishes and knives and forks.

What surprised the stranger was the conduct of the colored waiters. One was clapping his hands and another snapping his fingers. Others were holding three fingers in the air, doubling their fists, and crossing their arms.

These mysterious signs and signals were being given to the cooks at the back of the room, and were apparently understood. The stranger ordered roast beef rare, and the waiter immediately clapped his hands twice and then made a motion with his right hand, as if he were trying to shake something off his finger.

"What do you mean by that?" asked the stranger, as he turned in wonder and admiration to see a tall colored man give an imitation of a Dutch windmill.

"You wanted roast beef rare, didn't you?"

"Yes."

"Well, that's what I ordered."

"How about that fellow waving his arms?"

"That's chicken giblets. We've got about twenty-five signs. It does away with yelling."

"Do the signs that you make give any reasonable explanation of what is ordered?"

"Sometimes. You see, when I clapped my hands twice that meant roast beef, and then when I made that motion with my hand, as if to shake off the drippings of blood, that meant to have it rare."

"It's a kind of a Delsartean method."

"No, sir; the boss got it up. We've got a funny order for kidney stew. I'm afraid to show you for fear they'll think I'm ordering it."

"I see; you make the actions suit the thing to be ordered. When it's ice cream you roll up your collar and shiver, and if it's green apple pie you put both your hands on your stomach and double up."

"Go on, boss. You're havin' fun with me. Here's your roast beef now," and he received it from another colored man, who was earnestly inviting him to "take it away."—Chicago Record.

Tim Campbell's Definition.

Amos Cummings and Tim Campbell were discussing the hardships of a political career. Both agreed that it was a difficult place to fill, that of representing a great constituency in the largest city on the continent. Cummings sighed for a perpetual season of trout fishing. Mr. Campbell, more poetic, wished for a virgin forest in which to bury his identity.

"Tim," said Cummings, "what do you understand by a virgin forest?"

"Oh" was Campbell's quick response, "a place where the hand of man never set foot.—Washington Post.

A Philanthropist.

"Excuse me," said Meandering Mike, as he paused at the kitchen door, "but hev ye got any work ye want done in exchange far cold vittles?"

"Yes," was the prompt reply.

"All right," was the reply, as he turned away. "Good day."

"What made you ask the question?"

"Why, sometimes I meets men that wants ter work for cold vittles, an' I'm so kind-hearted that I like ter be able ter tell 'em what they kin be accommerdated."—Washington Star.

HE WAS AN INTERPRETER.

"Insect" O'Connor Explains East Side Talk for a Candidate.

When a Sun reporter, just before election, called at the headquarters of John Murray Mitchell, the candidate was not in, but a young man who declared himself to be Mr. Mitchell's interpreter was very much in. Here is the interview as it was veraciously set down by the party of the second part.

Mr. Mitchell, as is well known, speaks four languages, and, wondering what he needed of an interpreter, the reporter asked.

"Well, ye see," said the youth, "de mug comes down here and runs fer Congress; see? an' de first feller what comes in says, 'Soy, Mugsy, ye raisin' de dope?' and de mug looks at him an' says, 'What?' an' den de feller says, 'Your raisin' de mon, bloke? de price, see?' De mug looks at him an' says, 'I axes yer pardon,' an so he hires me fer interpreter, see. Ignatius is me name, but dey calls me Insect O'Connor, and when a feller comes in an' says 'Yer trolley's twisted,' I tells Mitchell he's crazy, see? An' when a feller says 'Yer got water in yer meter,' I says, 'He tells ye's ye's are gitting that t'ing de actors all go to Bloomingdale wid,' see? Dere's lots of fellers comes in here an' tells him t'ings. Now a feller came in yesterday an' he says, 'Yer on de toboggan slide,' an' I says to his nibs, 'He means yer goin' to get the tar licked out'n yer.' Anudder feller says, 'Grady's got his sledge hammer out.' I tells his nibs, 'De gang's goin' ter pound yer, see?' De feller says, 'G' wan, ye got two left feet.' I says ter his nibs, 'he tells ye yer crooked.' Well now, dat's interpretin' an' dat's what I do fer his nibs.

"A feller tells him, 'tie yer face up in a knot; shut up or I'll sew a button on you.' I tells his nibs if he don't take a dead shakedown ter hisself he'll get a pair of ear warmers on him, see? Well, de feller goes out sayin', 'Don't like de way yer nose fits yer face,' an' I tell his nibs he ain't popular wid dat mug. An' de feller yells out, 'I'll pull the earth out from in under yer.' I tells his nibs if he goes down to the canal he'll get throwed in, see. An' I says, 'Don't get redheaded about it, either, see?'"

"Will Mr. Mitchell be in soon?" ventured the reporter.

"I dunno," said the Insect. "He t'inks he's runnin' fer Congress, but he'll be runnin' fer his life before he gets out of dis, see?"

"Goodby. Don't forget to print me name, Insect O'Connor, see?"

A GOOD SIGN.

Dr. Talmage Likes to Hear the Workingmen Whistle.

It is a good sign when you hear a workman whistle. It is a better sign when you hear him hum a roundelay. It is a still better sign when you hear him sing the words of Isaac Watts or Charles Wesley. A violin chorded and strung, if something accidentally strikes it, makes music, and I suppose there is such a thing as having our hearts so attuned by divine grace that even the rough collision of life will make a heavenly vibration. I do not believe that the power of Christian song has yet been fully tried. I believe that if you could roll the "Old Hundred" doxology through the street, it would put an end to any panic!

I believe that the discords and the sorrows and the sins of the world are to be swept out by heaven-born hallelujahs. Some one asked Haydn, the celebrated musician, why he always composed such cheerful music. "Why," he said, "I can't do otherwise. When I think of God, my soul is so full of joy that the notes leap and dance from my pen!"

The Church of God never will be a triumphant church until it becomes a singing church.—Dr. T. DeWitt Talmage.

HE BUILT GOOD ROADS.

Thomas Telford Believed In Solid Foundations and Perfect Drainage.

Thomas Telford was a firm believer in the value of a good foundation for roads, and as a justification of his faith it is interesting to note that all the best stone roads of today are built with a Telford foundation. Telford's father was a shepherd, but he thought best to have Tom follow some other line, and accordingly he was bound to a stonemason. In spite of the fact that he did at times try to write poetry, he was a faithful apprentice, and at the age of 23 years he was considered a competent workman and began working as a journeyman at Langholm, Scotland, his wages being paid at the rate of 18 pence per day.

THOMAS TELFORD.

He afterward went to London, where he worked as a hewer of stone on various important buildings and finally at the Portsmouth dockyard "until, as he expressed it in a letter to a friend, "my proceedings are entirely approved by the commissioners and officers here—so much so that they would rather go by my advice than my master's, which is a dangerous point, being difficult to keep their good graces as well as his." When the Portsmouth work was finished, Telford took up surveying and afterward became an engineer, giving especial attention to bridges and roads. He also appreciated, as many of our modern roadmakers do not, the importance of perfect drainage. It was his custom to put a cross drain under the road every 100 feet and opening into the side ditches at both ends.

Thomas Telford died in 1834 at the age of 77, and during his life accomplished an immense amount of practical engineering work.—Good Roads.

POOR ROADS ARE COSTLY.

Difference In Cost of Freight Transportation Over Two Public Highways.

In England one horse serves 24 people, in Scotland one horse serves 20 6-10 people, in France 13 4-10, in Massachusetts 12¾, in California, as near as can be ascertained, about 8¼, so that we require nearly three times as many horses in California to do our work that the same amount of work would require in England, because of road conditions.

But let us not forget that England is an old and small country. This is a new and marvelously large one. However, the disproportion in horse service is altogether too great. But the facts set out in accurate statistics show that it costs 13 cents a mile per ton to transport freight from Revere to Boston by the public road. But from Revere to Lynn it costs to haul the same freight over 24 cents per ton per mile, the difference being in road conditions, due to neglect of treatment in the latter case. How many instances in California of a similar character could be given had the statistics of California been gathered.—Pomona (Cal.) Progress.

Road Outlook In Rhode Island.

I am confident that within the next few years this subject of better roads will receive in Rhode Island the consideration it deserves. Good highways will add greatly to the natural attraction of the state's many summer resorts and will bring the farmers in closer connection with their markets in the thickly settled manufacturing villages. My predecessors have kept the question before the people, and if no definite step should be taken during my term of office those who come after will not permit the cause of good roads to suffer. It cannot be displaced from among the vital questions of state policy.—Governor Brown.

The Need of Better Roads.

The statement made by General Roy Stone of the agricultural department before the national good roads conference at Asbury Park that the farmers of this country lose between $600,000,000 and $700,000,000 yearly from being compelled to haul their produce over poor roads shows the practical importance of the good roads movement. Good roads mean not only speedier means of communication, but longer service from horses and vehicles. They are another way of making the labor and capital of farmers more efficient.—New York Press

Stone Roads Are the Cheapest.

Roads with a broken stone foundation, or improved roads such as are becoming common in New Jersey, are never very dusty, and have a hard, smooth surface in the wettest weather. The old dirt road is as much out of date in progressive country districts as the ancient cobblestone is in a moderate city. Both are a survival from a period of comparative poverty and ignorance, when of necessity roads must be cheap, and it was not understood that the cheapest roads were usually the dearest in the end, and that the farmer, who used the country most, suffered the most because of their very poor quality.—Selected.

Catarrh starts in the nasal passages, affecting eyes, ears and throat and is in fact, the great enemy of the mucous membrane. Neglected colds in the head almost invariably precede catarrh, causing an excessive flow of mucous, and if the mucous discharge becomes interrupted the disagreeable results of catarrh will follow, such as bad breath, severe pain across forehead and about the eyes, a roaring and buzzing sound in the ears and oftentimes a very offensive discharge. "Good-Bye SALE?"

That is what we call it as we are going to say Good-Bye to about fifteen thousand dollars worth of new seasonable dry goods, underwear, hosiery, dress goods and coats that we have just bought at half the usual prices. It has not been a case of the early bird catching the worm this season. Retailers who bought their stock early got caught, paid high prices as all Fall and Winter goods are from 30 to 50 per cent lower now than they were two months ago. Late buyers reap the benefit. It's a question with manufacturers and jobbers of selling their goods to cash buyers, regardless of profit and cost, and we do the same. It's anything to sell goods and we sell them lower than ever before. All we ask is an inspection of the goods and prices and you will be convinced that you can make one dollar do the work of two at

CHINA GETTING TIRED

Will Probably Ask the Powers To Interfere.

A Request Said To Have Been Sent to the Foreign Office in London—Chinese Merchantmen Protected by the German Flag—Uneasiness at Pekin Increasing.

London, Nov. 6.—The Central News says: "There is reason to believe that China has resolved to formally ask the powers who have immediate commercialcial interests at stake, to stop the war. The Chinese minister is said to have communicated the request to the foreign office in London. Last evening he started for Paris to seek interviews with M. Hanotaux, minister of foreign affairs, and President Casimir-Perier."

The Daily News has information that China is suing for peace, in fact, has instructed her envoys in Europe to submit to the powers the terms which she is willing to offer. It is a formal renewal or repetition, on a larger scale, of the overtures made to the British government a month ago. The News expresses again its approval of Lord Rosebery's joint interference and speaks regretfully of the reluctance of the powers to see the matter in the same light.

"No European government," it says, "can desire to see this disastrous conflict prolonged. Even the United States, despite the Monroe doctrine, must be concerned for the regularity and security of their trade with Japan. Sooner or later—and better sooner than later—there must be an international settlement. It will be difficult to contend that interference will be premature now."

Berlin, Nov. 6.—The Kreuzzeitung correspondent in London has had an interview with Sir Halliday Macartney, councillor of the Chinese legation. Sir Halliday vigorously attacked Lord Rosebery's policy toward the combatants as weak and vacillating.

"When Japan demanded reforms in Korea," he said, "Lord Rosebery ought to have prevented further complications by demonstrating to her that it would be impossible to comply with such a preposterous proposal. He ought to have intimated that if there should be war between China and Japan, Great Britain would not remain neutral. When the Kow Shing was sunk by a Japanese man-of-war he let another opportunity slip, allowing the British flag to be insulted with impunity. The eastern people are not likely now to forget how the flag may be treated as a quantite negligeable. But Lord Rosebery's sudden attempt to interfere was more remarkable than his previous 'let alone' policy. It was not solicited nor even countenanced by the combatants, and was utterly unwarranted. It was unprecedented in the annals of British diplomacy. England will have to pay the piper eventually. China will reimburse herself for the cost of the war by imposing duties on foreign goods when they reach the barrier stations of the interior. Obviously these duties will fall most heavily on British trade."

A dispatch from Shanghai to the St. James' Gazette says the Chinese troops under Gen. Sung have evacuated Chin Lien Cheng, and now occupy the mountain pass on the high road to Pekin.

Orders have been given to all military commanders to defend Pekin at all hazards. The Japanese are marching northward, aiming to get behind Gen. Sung's army. It is expected that all foreigners will be requested to leave Pekin within a fortnight.

The Central News correspondent at Shanghai telegraphs that the government, seeing that all attemps to stay the progress of the Japanese in Manchuria are futile, has stopped discharging supplies of rice for Chinese troops at New-Chwang.

According to this correspondent, many more Chinese merchant steamships have been placed under the protection of the German flag.

The Globe prints a dispatch from Yokohama to a news agency in this city saying that the Pacific Mail steamship Gaelic, Capt. Pearne, from San Francisco, Oct. 16, was seized yesterday just as she was about to sail for Hong Kong on suspicion that she was engaged in carrying articles contraband of war. A search was made of the steamer and no contraband articles being found she was allowed to proceed for her destination.

A Shanghai dispatch to the Central News says an edict has been issued appointing Prince K[illegible], uncle of the emperor, to the supreme control of the military affairs of China and Prince Ching, who was recently succeeded as president of the Tsungli Yamen by Prince Kung, as next in charge.

The same edict announces th degradation of Gen. Weh on charges of cowardice in embezzling the pay of soldiers in his command. Admiral Ting also will be deprived of the honors recently bestowed upon him.

London, Nov. 6.—In a leader on China's proposals for peace, the Standard says: "The conquerors will for for the first time display a lack of sagacity if they decline to accept reasonable overtures for peace. They are no longer despised by the Chinese but, more than ever, are hated and could not hope to govern a single province of China proper if it should be formally ceded to them. Meanwhile the powers have a common interest in averting the disintegration of the Celestial empire. Humanity peremptorily forbids the thought of allowing a government under which hundreds of millions live, to be destroyed. Japan may lose the whole fruits of her victory by clutching too much."

London, Nov. 6.—The Times correspondent in Tien-Tsin telegraphs under yesterday's date: "The telegraph to Port Arthur was cut Sunday probably on the narrow isthmus between Port Adams and Talien Wan. This indicates that the Japanese are within a day's march of the Talien Wan forts. It is reported that 70,000 Siberian troops have been concentrated at Vladivostock."

The Times hears from Yokohama that before the capture of Feng-Hung-Tcheng the Chinese fired the citadel and fled in the night.

THE CZAR EULOGIZED.

The President of the French Senate Makes an Impressive Address.

Paris, Nov. 6.—Although suffering from acute gout, M. Challemel-Lacour, president of the senate, disregarded his doctor's advice and insisted upon appearing before the senators and reading Premier Dupuy's letter concerning the czar and the message of condolence. He drove to the senate building and was taken in the elevator to the private landing behind the president's chair. He walked slowly and painfully to his seat, but, after reading the premier's communication, he had recovered sufficiently to deliver impressively a eulogy of the late czar. He closed his address thus:

"France owes him more than respect and admiration. He obeyed a grand thought, coming from the heart, when he resolved to let the world know that France, despite the scars with which she was covered, was no longer isolated. He showed and persuaded others to believe that, apart from reasons of humanity, France could not be mutilated without dislocating Europe. It is this that renders his memory sacred to the French nation."

KNOCKS OUT WOMEN.

Young Griffo Breaks a Young Lady's Umbrella Over Her Back.

New York, Nov. 6.—Young Griffo, the clever lightweight prize fighter, who recently fought McAuliffe to a draw, was locked up last night on complaint of Miss Lizzie Granger.

About 9:30 o'clock last night Miss Granger was walking through Madison square park when Griffo approached her and attempted to speak to her. She walked away from him, when, she says, he made an insulting remark. Then he seized the young lady's umbrella and struck her several times across the back breaking the umbrella. She screamed for help and park policeman Dougherty hurried up and caught Griffo in the act. At the station house, Griffo, after saying that he was born in India and was 26 years old, declared that the whole case was one of mistaken identity. He denied striking Miss Granger and said that he thought when he spoke to her that she was a young woman he had known at Coney Island. He made light of his arrest and when the sergeant asked him what his business was he answered "knocking out American duffers."

Trouble in the French Cabinet.

Paris, Nov. 6.—The standing parliamentary committee on military affairs voted unanimously that the government's plan to let 12,000 soldiers go before completing their full time was inopportune and reprehensible. The committee also voted, with but three dissenting voices, that he step would be illegal. Gen. Mercier, minister of war, told the deputation informing him of the committee's decision, that the plan was the cabinet's and not his entirely. Nevertheless, he added, if the cabinet should reconsider it he would resign. The ministers will consider the matter to-day.

Coal Production.

Monongahela City, Pa., Nov. 6.—The aggregate production of anthracite coal in Pennsylvania for the year 1893 was 47,179,563 tons, an increase of 1,444,189 tons over that of 1892. The bituminous coal field is much larger, but had no such increase in production for 1893, caused principally by strikes and lockouts. There was a decline in production from that of the previous year, as 43,421,898 tons were produced, while in 1892 the production was 46,576,576 tons. The decrease also, in the production of coke was very large, there being but 5,549,296 tons against 7,891,630 tons in 1852.

To Search for Explorer Wiggins.

London, Nov. 6.—A dispatch from Christianin to Lloyd's says: "The Russian government has chartered Meinich & Co.'s steamer Lindesnaes to search for the steamer Stjernen, on which Capt. Wiggins, the Arctic explorer, left Yeneseisk on Sept. 15 with his own and two other crews, numbering fifty in all. It is believed that Wiggins is icebound in the Kara sea. The captain of the Lindesnaes hopes to get tidings of Wiggins at Chabarowa. Should he fail to do so, he will send parties overland to the Oberian coast."

Fierce Storm in New England.

New York, Nov. 6.—A fierce storm raged in New England last night. Early in the evening meagre reports reached this city that it was snowing hard along the coast. Shortly after 9 o'clock the velocity of the wind increased, tearing down wires and breaking communication with all points. At midnight connection was made with Springfield, Mass., via Albany, N. Y., which reported that a heavy snow storm prevailed there.

Newark, N. J., Nov. 6.—Ex-President James McCosh of Princeton university is critically ill at his residence on Prospect avenue. He has been becoming more and more feeble all the fall, and the weakness resultant from old age has been increased by a heavy cold which threatened pneumonia. THE WORK OF FIENDS

Children Murdered and Their Bodies Burned.

The Sight a Most Revolting One—Men Go Mad With Rage When the Mangled Remains Were Discovered—A White Boy and a Negro Suspected—They May Be Lynched.

Paulding, O., Nov. 6.—A murder was committed near this city Sunday night. George and Nellie Good, aged nine and six years respecively, children of Samuel Good, who lives about three miles north of Paulding were found by a searching party yesterday in the woods near the house, with their throats cut from ear to ear, their bodies terribly lacerated and blackened from a fire started with the object of removing all trace of the crime.

Sunday afternoon the Good children were playing in the road near their home and wandered into a nearby wood. They failed to return at supper time and could not be found by their parents.

At dark a searching party was organized and the search continued throughout the night, but no trace of the little ones was found until 8 o'clock in the morning, when a party of men found the bodies in a brush heap, forty rods form the road and less than a mile from their home. The little girl's head was pounded to a pulp her throat cut and she had been disemboweled. The little boy's head was nearly severed from his body, which was terribly mangled.

The sight was a most revolting one, and caused the men of the party to go mad with rage. The little bodies had been led together with a tarred rope and thrown into the brush, which had afterward been fired, but owing to a heavy rain was too damp to burn and only blackened the mangled bodies.

There is but one theory advanced as a cause for the crime and that was that the little girl had been outraged and then murdered, and her companion killed to prevent his telling the awful tale.

About five hundred persons visited the scene of the murder and scarcely a man turned his back upon the revolting sight but that he signified his willingness to assist in meeting out swift and terrible punishment to the the guilty ones if found.

Sheriff Staley arrived upon the scene at 10 o'clock and arrested Charles Hart aged 19 years, a boy who resides near the Good home, on suspicion.

Hart is an illiterate boy and by some considered insane. His arrest was due to his strange actions at the time the bodies were found.

Leo Cain, a negro, 21 years old, who lives with a family named Jackson and who has been a companion of Hart, was also arrested and placed in jail. Paulding was quickly filled with men who were talking wildly of lynching the arrested persons. Judge Snook and leading citizens made an effort to quiet the mob by delivering numerous speeches on the streets.

A blood-hound was sent to the scene but there was little hope of its being able to do anything to throw any light on the crime.

The attitude of the mob continued to grow more and more threatening and he prisoners were quietly slipped out of town and sent to Vanwert for safe keeping.

Election Returns at the White House

Washington, Nov. 6.—Private Secretary Thurber invited the cabinet officers (with the exception of Secretary Lamont who has gone away to vote) to spend the evening with him at the white house and get the election returns which will be received in the executive telegraph office from various parts of the country. The president will in all probability go out to his country home, according to his custom. If anything is reported to the gathering in the white house that is deemed of sufficient interest to the president it may be sent out to him by the private telephone line which connects his house at Woodley with his personal apartments at the executive mansion.

Cremated on His Own Wagon.

New Lewisville, Ark., Nov. 6.—Joe Fraser, a colored citizen of Lafayette county, drove a short distance from home to get a load of corn and was shot from ambush while coming back and his body cremated in his wagon. The mules were found hitched to the end of the wagon tongue early in the morning but the wagon body was entirely burned and portions of Fraser's remains were found in the ashes. The negro is said to have had several bitter enemies in the community, and it is thought the officers of the county will have trouble in apprehending the perpetrators.

Do Not Fear the Chinese.

London Nov. 6.—A Central News dispatch from Tokio says that nothing has yet been heard there regarding the operations of the Japanese at Port Arthur. All idea that the Chinese will raid the Japanese coast has been abandoned. Orders have been issued to remove the torpedoes from Tokio bay and navigation has been declared free. The decree promulgated some time ago forbidding the sale of gunpowder in Japan has been cancelled.

Smallpox in the Patent Office.

Washington, Nov. 6.—There was another scare in the interior department yesterday. Ballard Morris, principal examiner in the patent office, has smallpox. Morris was on duty Friday. Commissioner Seymour ordered the division in which Morris worked closed and sent the employes home.

Li Hung Chang Superseded.

Shanghai, Nov. 6.—Viceroy Lutai of the Liang-Kiang provinces has been summoned by imperial decree to proceed immediately to Tien-Tsin and assume the viceroyalty of the Chili province, succeeding Li-Hung-Chang.

Killed While Gunning.

CURES OTHERS

MRS. TAPPAN.

MRS. HARRY TAPPAN, of Reynolds, Neb., writes: "For about two years I was a constant sufferer from diseases peculiar to my sex. I had to be carried from my bed, had horrible dreams, sinking sensations, was very nervous and had little or no appetite. In short, my whole body was racked with pain. I had frequent attacks of hysteria, and was completely discouraged for I found no medicine did me any good. At last I determined to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I had taken but two bottles before I felt so much better! I took eleven bottles. To-day, I am well. I have never felt the least trace of my old complaint in the last six years. We use the 'Golden Medical Discovery' whenever we need a blood-purifier. With its use, eruptions of all kinds vanish and the skin is rendered clear and soft, almost as an infants." Sold everywhere.

LIFE WAS A BURDEN.

A Pain-Racked Sufferer Tells an Interesting Story—How He Was Tortured for Years and Finally Cured by Munyon's Remedy.

Charles Wark, of 14 N. Twenty-fourth St., Philadelphia, has been a constant sufferer from rheumatism for years. He was cured by the use of Munyon's Rheumatism Cure. This is his story:

"I was afflicted with rheumatism in the righ shoulder and suffered the most excruciating agony. Sharp shooting pains darted through it so intense I could not sleep night Even the weight of the bedclothes was more than I could bear; neither could I lie on the right side or my back. Life became a perfect burden to me. I could not raise my hand to my head, and when I attempted to put on my coat or any article of dress the torture was enough to drive me wild. Many remedies were suggested and tried, but none did me the slightest good, and I began to despair of ever being able to obtain relief. Some time ago, however, I procured a bottle of Munyon's Rheumatism Cure. It afforded me relief after the first few doses, and by the time the little 25 cent bottle was gone I was entirely free from pain. I have had no return of my old enemy, and I feel satisfied I am permanently cured. It seems so wonderful I can hardly realize it, and can only show my appreciation of the merits of the Cure by recommending it to other sufferers."

Munyon's Rheumatism Cure is guaranteed to cure rheumatism in any part of the body. Acute or muscular rheumatism cured in from one to five days. It never fails to cure sharp, shooting pains in the arms, legs, sides back or breast, or soreness in any part of the body in from one to three hours. It is guaranteed to promptly cure lameness, stiff and swollen joints, stiff back, and all pains in the hips and loins. Chronic rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago or pain in the back are speedily cured.

Munyon's Homoepathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggist, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

MANY STEAMERS FIRED

Thousands of Bales of Cotton Destroyed.

The Vessels Burned at Their Wharves in Savannah, Ga.—The Ships and Cargoes Fully Covered by Insurance—The Origin of the Fires Is Unknown.

Savannah, Ga., Nov. 6.—Early last night fire was discovered in the hold of the cotton steamer Skidby at the Central Compress wharf. The fire was in hold No. 3 in which there was about 2,500 bales of cotton. The Skidby had about 10,000 bales aboard. The fire had gained considerable headway when discovered. At 8:15 it was found that there was fire in the cotton in the hold of the steamer Baltimore City at the Gordon Press wharf, about a mile away from the scene of the fire on the Skidby. Alongside of the Baltimore City, lay the steamer Castlegarth, and a few minutes after the discovery that the former's cotton was afire, fire was also discovered in the forepeak of the Castlegarth, in which compartment there were about 100 bales of cotton and the seamen's clothes. The fire on the Baltimore City was but small and was soon put out. On the Castlegarth it was more obstinate and was not extinguishable until all the cotton in the compartment was more or less damaged.

About an hour after the discovery of the fire on the Baltimore City an alarm of fire was given from the steamer Stag, also loading at Gordon's wharf along with the Baltimore City and the Castlegarth. This fire proved to be the most obstinate of the three at the Gordon wharf. The Stag had on a large proportion of her cargo. Some 400 bales have been taken from her hold and the holds of the Baltimore City and Castlegarth and put on lighters. About the same time that the Stag was reported afire at Gordon's wharf, fire broke out in the hold of the steamer Delgarth at the Central Press wharf, near the Skidby, where the first fire occurred, and in a few minutes the steamer Petunia, also at the Central Press wharf, was reported kith fire in her cotton. The three ships afire at this wharf were not over three hundred yards apart. The three other ships afire were a mile away at the other edge of the city. The fire on the Petunia was easily extinguished when about 300 bales had been damaged.

In the case of the Stag a phosphorescent glow was seen in her hold a few minutes before the fire broke out and it is surmissed that the Stag's fire originated in this glow. There has recently been trouble among the 'longshoremen in this city but there is none now. Last spring the union 'longshoremen went out on strike, but recently a great many of the strikers have returned to work at the rates at which the non-union men were working. 12:05 a. m.—Fire has just broken out in the steamship Armenia at the Central Railroad wharf, making seven vessels in all.

M'KINLEY AT HOME.

Democrats Join With Republicans in Welcoming the Governor.

Canton, O., Nov. 6.—Gov. McKinley's home coming was a fitting finale to his unparalleled campaign tour. During the last six weeks he has traversed over ten thousand miles through seventeen commonwealths spoke or bowed his acknowledgement to 416 assemblages and received the greetings of two and a quarter millions of men, women and children. At Massillon, where he spoke in the armory and here in Canton he delivered his closing speech in the Tabernacle last night his friends and neighbors turned out en masse, the air was filled with the music of "Auld Lang Syne" and "Home Sweet Home." Democrats joined with republicans in their display of his picture in the windows of business houses and residences with the inscription "The nation's favorite who always spends election eve at his old home." When the governor faced the immense and enthusiastic audience at the Tabernacle he was overcome with emotion and it was only by an effort that he was able to commence his address. He said it seemed good to be home for it had been his custom for a quarter of a century to meet his neighbors on the eve of election day, not only personally but in public discussion. No audience in his own state or out of it could be more grateful to him than the one he faced, and he could not stand in their presence without memories crowding upon him, memories that went back twenty-five years, to the time when this district presented his name for the first time for public office.

The Czarina Thanks Casimir-Perier.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 6.—In response to the message of condolence and sympathy sent to the czarina by President Casimir-Perier of France, her majesty caused the following to be telegraphed to M. Casimir-Perier: "Accept my personal thanks for cordial sympathy you have shown me in my cruel sorrow."

The czar telegraphed as follows to the municipal council of Caen: "Russia thanks you for your good wishes. Be assured that I have inherited from my beloved father his sympathies for France."

Justice White Married.

New York, Nov. 6.—Associate Justice White of the supreme court of the United States and Mrs. Linden Kent were married yesterday at the church of St. Francis Xavier. A mass was said by Rev. Father Murphy, the rector of St. Francis Xavier's college, and the marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Fulton, S. J. The ceremony was entirely private no invitations having been issued, and only members of the immediate families of the justice and Mrs. Kent were present.

Will Look for Derelicts.

Washington, Nov. 6.—The dynamite cruiser Vesuvius will go to sea in a few days with an equipment of high explosives to search for and if possible destroy three dangerous derelicts which have been reported off the New Jersey coast and several off Cape Hatteras.

LONDON BOMB EXPLOSION.

It May Have Been a Warning from the Irish Physical Force Party.

London, Nov. 6.—Detectives from Scotland yard are busily investigating the bomb explosion which occurred at the residence of the Hon. Reginald Brett, son of the late Lord Esher, in Tinny street, Park Lane, two doors from the residence of the Hon. Sir Henry Hawkins, one of the justices of the queen's bench division of the high court of justice.

Justice Hawkins is the judge who sentenced Frederick Charles, Victor Cailes, Joseph Deakin and Jean Battolla, the Walsall anarchists, to various terms of imprisonment, and according to the first accounts of the outrage, it was believed that he explosion was an attempt upon the part of the anarchists to be revenged upon the justice and that they made a mistake in the number of Sir Henry Hawkins' house.

Mr. Brett was at his club and Mrs. Brett was in the hall of her residence when the bomb exploded. The explosion ploughed a cavity eighteen inches deep below the front threshold, and the door was blown to pieces. The step of the doorway, a slab of concrete 40 by 26 inches, was blown across the street, and the iron railings were broken and twisted. The sound of the explosion was heard two miles away.

The police found that the bomb had been unscientifically made of iron piping one-half an inch thick and three inches in circumference. The ends were closed with lead.

Besides the anarchist theory, the police have a theory that the outrage was the result of the recently announced determination of the Irish physical force party to commence an active dynamite campaign, and that the explosion was intended as some sort of warning or notice to the home secretary he Hon Henry Asquith, whose residence is next door to that of Mr. Brett.

AGAINST THE "BIG FOUR."

Chicago Packers Claimed Excessive Railroad Rates Were Charged.

Chicago, Nov. 6.—Judge Grosscup rendered a decision against the "Big Four" packers —Swift, Armour, Morris and Hammond—and in favor of the railroads against whom suit was brought to recover money said to be due the packers as paid out by them in excessive rates on meat sent out from Chicago. Twelve trunk lines to the east are interested in the decision which closely follows one rendered in the same case some time ago. Judge Grosscup then held that the packers could not recover, in the absence of a common law of the United States as well as the silence of the state statutes regarding such cases. To this decision Swift & Co. filed a number of special counts which constituted the case passed upon.

Each Side To Pay Costs.

Philadelphia, Nov. 6.—Counsel representing Joseph M. Street, and the Baltimore & Lehigh Railroad company, announced to Judges Dallas and Butler in the United States circuit court yesterday that the reorganization of the road would proceed. Recently United States Marshal Colesberry sold the property in Pennsylvania of the railroad company under a judgment for $261,871.66 held by Mr. Walworth. The legality of the judgment was disputed. The sale, however, went on, but $45,000 being realized. Five hundred dollars in cash was paid down, and the remainder was to be paid at the confirmation of the sale. The amount paid is to be returned to the purchaser, G. C. Wilson. The entire litigation over Mr. Walworth's judgment is ended, and each side is to pay half of the costs.

Anniversary of the Poet Sachs.

Nuremberg, Nov. 6.—Hans Sachs, the German poet, was born in Nuremberg 400 years ago yesterday. The city celebrated the anniversary on a grand scale. Visitors have filled the hotels and lodging houses and have packed the streets. Flags waved from every window and music was heard on every street corner. A thousand persons attended the reception at the Rathhaus, among them delegates from most Bavarian towns, colleges and royal academies. Prof. Goetz the orator of the day, traced at length Sach's influence upon the German language. After the oration the historical procession passed through the principal streets.

Watching the Japanese Campaign.

Washington, Nov. 6.—The departure of the little cruiser Petrel from Chefoo for Newchang is regarded as significant in naval circles as she will pass within a few miles of Port Arthur and her destination is several miles up the river Liaon and but thirty-five miles southeast of Moukden. Newchang is on the high road to Pekin and the officers of the Petrel will have exceptional advantages in watching the progress of the Japanese campaign in Manchuria. The only American interests near Newchang is in the safety of a number of missionaries.

Sues His Opponent.

Chicago, Nov. 6.—George E. White, republican candidate for congress in the fifth district, brought suit against Edward Noonan, his democratic opponent, for $50,000 for defamation of character. It is claimed that Noonan has caused to be distributed through the district a circular wherein he alleges that White, as a member of the city council, made $40,000 out of the council.

An A. P. A. Man Mobbed.

Elmira, N. Y., Nov. 6.—One Victor M. Ruthven, of Buffalo, was advertised to speak in advocacy of A. P. A. principles and came very near being mobbed. His afternoon remarks brought together 1,000 angry men, who chased him to his hotel. For several hours a mob of many hundred people hung about the hotel, and the city authorities finally refused to give Ruthven a license to speak.

"Number One's" Wife Dead.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 6.—Mrs. Frank Byrne, widow of the alleged mysterious "Number One" of the Phenix Park murders in Dublin, is dead here. She had been a paralytic since the birth of her first child in jail in England. Two children survive her, one at Montreal being educated by benevolent people of Providence. Byrne died Feb. 16 last.

LOVINGLY CARED FOR

Closing Scenes in Alexander III.'s Life.

Dr. Leyden Praised by the Imperial Patient—Italian Papers Predict Trouble in Russia—Shops To Be Closed Along the Route of the Funeral Train.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 6.—The Prince and Princess of Wales will accompany the imperial party on the way to St. Petersburg. It is likely that the body will be taken to Sevastopol instead of Odessa and there be transferred to the Moscow train. Moscow will be reached probably on the 11th and St. Petersburg on the 13th. The imperial family will accompany it from the beginning to the end of the journey. The intention of exposing the body in Livadia was abandoned because the process of embalming it had not been finished. It is said to have been necessary to summon more embalmers from Moscow and Charkoff. When ready, the body will be placed in the chapel at Livadia.

At 8 o'clock on Thursday morning Prof. Leyden advised that the czar's hands and arms be rubbed. The Princess Alix and the Grand Duchesses Xenia and Olga did this with loving care. The czarina knelt or stood by the emperor's side and the Duchess of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha stood near by in pitiable despair. The czarina continually laid her cheek against her husband's, deeply impressing with her misery all who witnessed the sad scene. She wept less than did the others. When she handed the sufferer a drink her hand did not tremble and she even tried to smile." The doctors were going in and out, directing the rubbing and the inhalation of oxygen. Prof. Leyden had been up since 3 o'clock. He was rewarded with the czar's full confidence. The Grand Duchess Elizabeth told him that the patient said:

"Leyden is the only doctor I ever saw who knows what is good for a patient."

Doubtless the czar referred also to the absolute peace reigning round the sick bed, for he must have known that he owed it to Leyden's exquisite tact.

The doctors who conducted the autopsy had nothing to do with the treatment of the case; hence their opinion may be taken to confirm that the case was diagnosed correctly and treated rightly. The czar's face remains untouched by death. It bears an expression of pain, but patient submission. The relations of all members of the imperial family were of the best. Everything was done with delicacy and mutual consideration. The czarewitch was moved deeply by his father's death. The Princess Alix, who long hesitated to renounce the faith of her fathers, to which she clung lovingly, was glad under these circumstances to make the sacrifice and relieve her fiance's heart. I am informed that the conversion was hurried because forty days must elapse between the baptism and the marriage. There is now just time for the marriage before advent begins.

There are rumors of a police order to close the vodka shops in towns along the route of the funeral train and its enforcement is said to have caused serious trouble in several districts. The truth of these rumors cannot be ascertained. The goldsmiths of St. Petersburg and Moscow are receiving innumerable orders for gold and silver memorial crowns and crosses. Gen. Vannowski, minister of war and an officer under the late czar at the capture of Rustchuk, has ordered a silver crown twenty-four inches in diameter. The inscription is to be:

"To the Chief of the Army of Rustchuk from the Chief of his Staff."

Vannowski has obtained permission to place this crown on the emperor's tomb.

Rome, Nov. 6.—Premier Crispi, as King Humbert's representative, went to the requiem mass in the chapel of the Russian embassy. Baron Blanc, minister of foreign affairs, and United States ambassador MacVeagh, with the whole staff of the United States embassy and most other members of the diplomatic corps, were present. Baron de Marochetti, who was recalled from the Italian embassy in St. Petersburg, will go back to represent King Humbert at the funeral. The Popolo Romano and other Rome dailies continue to predict that there will be trouble in Russia unless Nicholas II. grants a constitution.

London, Nov. 6.—The Daily News correspondent in St. Petersburg says that Dr. Zacharin is not likely to return to Moscow at present as the populace persists in the suspicion that the czar was poisoned. The students declared that they would not attend his lectures and that his life would be in danger if he should return.

SILAS LEWIS SHOT.

The Choctaw Indian Murderer Executed at Wilburton, Ark.

Fort Smith, Ark., Nov. 6.—Silas Lewis, the Choctaw Indian, was executed yesterday for murder at Wilburton, by being shot. He is one of seven who were tried jointly one year ago and all sentenced to death but the federal government stopped the execution. During the political troubles of 1892 between the Jones and Jackson parties and right on the heels of the election in which Jackson was defeated by what his party declared fraudulent means, four Jones men were murdered in Caines county by Jackson men, who were led by Lewis and others. It had been determined to assassinate the leading Jones men in every county in the nation and men were appointed to carry out the plans but failed to act in every county except Gaines. Lewis was a prominent Choctaw and his friends resorted to every means to save his life.

Found Dead on the Rail.

Easton, Pa., Nov. 6.—The dead body of an unknown man with two deep gashes on his head and the left hand cut off, was found on the Lehigh Valley railroad track near Santee's mill. It is supposed that the man was murdered and placed on the track afterwards. The man was well dressed, but there was nothing about him which would lead to identification.

THE MOONSHINER'S DREAM.

BY MATT CRIM,

AUTHOR OF THE ADVENTURES OF A FAIR REBEL.

[Copyright, 1894, by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.]

"S'manthy, S'manthy, wake up. Eddy's mighty sick an' I want you to run down to the 'still'ry an' tell Eph."

Samantha rubbed her sleepy eyes open, staring up at her sister-in-law quite vacantly for a moment.

"What'd you say, Lizzy?"

"Eddy's sick, an' I can't leave him. He has a high fever, an' is callin' for his pa. Run, S'manthy, quick as you can. Here's your clothes, an' wrap my shawl 'round you."

Samantha sat up on the side of the bed still half dazed, but reaching mechanically for her dress. She occupied a little shed room opening out of the main room of the cabin, and the cold wind crept up through the cracks in the bare board floor.

"I wants my pa, where's my pa?" fretted a child's voice.

"There, there, honey, he'll come in a minute," soothed his mother.

Samantha was about in an instant, the last vapor of sleep blown away by the breath of that childish treble. Her teeth chattered a little as she dressed, groping around with no other light to aid her than the one shining through the doorway from the fireplace in the outer room.

"Put on anuther light 'ood knot, Lizzy," she called.

"Why don't you come out here where it's warmer?" was Lizzy's reply, but she thrust the rich pine under the logs and stirred up a brilliant blaze. She was a tall, sallow-faced young woman, with stooping shoulders and melancholy eyes, a direct contrast to her sister-in-law, who was short and rosy and laughter-loving.

"Now don't you be pestered, Lizzy. Eddy ain't goin' to be bad sick, I know," said Samantha, hopefully, as she came out of her little room flinging a shawl over her head. "He's just a little crampy an' feverish. He al'ays is when he takes cold. Eph'll come right up, and then Eddy'll be all right. Won't you, honey?" glancing over her shoulder to the bed.

The little boy turned restlessly on his pillow, moaning softly.

"I tell you, S'manthy, he ain't tuk like he usually is," whispered Lizzy. "It 'pears to me we orter have a doctor right now. I know I'm al'ays scared plum to death nearly when anything gets the matter with Eddy; but you'd be, too, if he was the only one you had." She turned away, wiping her eyes on her dress sleeve.

"I ain't blamin' you, Lizzy."

She went to the bed and bent over the sleeping child for an instant, listening to his breathing and laying a light finger on his pulse. The doctor lived five miles away down in the town, so it behooved the people of the mountains to know something about sickness and to exercise judgment. Samantha stepped out into the icy stillness of the night, with a feeling of anxiety tugging at her own heart. She debated whether it would not be wiser to saddle the mule and ride down to the distillery, as Eph could then go direct to the doctor; but she decided to let her brother see the child himself first.

"We air all plum fools 'bout Eddy, an' I reckon git skeered at mighty nigh nothin'. I'll let Eph judge for hisself." She stepped out briskly and fearlessly, gathering the shawl closely about her head and shoulders, for the night was bitter cold with a light powdering of snow upon the ground. Icicles snapped noisily under her feet, her breath made a frosty cloud about her face. The wind had risen, for high above that frozen silence of the earth the ragged clouds flew stormily. Now and then the moon shone down through a rent, illuminating mountain peak and ravine with its cold white light, but only momentarily.

The little cabin was perched away up on the side of Brandreth's peak in a sheltering cove, and Samantha's way led her across the clearing where the naked corn stalks of last year's crop yet stood in blackened rows, and half down a ravine half choked with laurel. Half way down the side of the declivity a well defined path had been beaten out, and to this the girl kept, treading carefully along its slippery surface for fear of falling. The trickling murmur of a little stream came up from the depths of the hollow, now and then a bird scared from its roost flew through the naked branches of the trees, or some small four-footed beast ran across the pathway. Of these sights or sounds Samantha had no fear. It was not the first time she had been to the distillery after nightfall. But her ears were keen to distinguish sound, and the element of danger always lurking in the air for the moonshiner and all those connected with him had sharpened Samantha's wits beyond the ordinary. Still, she did not fear danger that night until she came to a turn in the path where it shelved down very rapidly toward the bottom of the ravine, and found herself, without warning, within a few feet of a group of men. They were standing as motionless and noiseless as the trees, and after drawing one sharp breath of surprise and tremor, she also came to a standstill, trying to shield herself behind a shrub of laurel. The moon was hidden by the clouds, and she couldn't tell whether they were friends or foes, but instinct warned her that they were the dreaded revenue officers. The distillery was not fifty yards away, hidden in the depths of that hollow, and she could easily picture the careless security of her brother and her lover, Al Bishop, for they were partners. Her lips felt parched. The cold seemed to strike suddenly to her heart. For an instant she felt blind and dizzy with the thought of their being entrapped and taken. She clutched at a bush, loosening a shower of icicles. They fell to the ground with a loud, clinking sound.

"I heard something," muttered a cautious voice.

"Hush, it was only the ice falling," said another.

And then to the girl's straining ears came the soft punch, punch of footsteps behind her. She turned her head and saw a man looming up almost directly over her. She dared not move or breathe scarcely for fear of discovery.

"Straight ahead," whispered the newcomer to his comrades.

"You are sure?"

"Yes, I know it," impatiently.

The group broke into single file, moving down the pathway like black shadows. Samantha lost all sense of her own danger in the desperate desire to warn those below. She leaped to her feet, giving utterance to a wild and piercing cry. It splintered the silence of the night with a thousand echoes, and died away in weird whispers against the hillsides and in the hollows. There was a shout from the officers. Some plunged down the pathway, while others wheeled to find out if an ambush had been sprung upon them.

Samantha heard a bullet whiz by her ear, and the next moment she had dropped over the edge of the bluff. She crashed down through the underbrush, bumping and rolling over stones and shrubs, her clothes torn, her face and hands scratched. The thick folds of the shawl wound about her saved her somewhat, but not altogether. It seemed an age before she found a stopping place, and then she lay bruised and breathless, unable to move. But dreadful sounds still pierced her stunned senses, fierce cries, pistol shots and trampling feet. Some one ran through the laurel thicket on the opposite side of the stream, an officer in swift pursuit. But he wasted both his strength and his ammunition, for he returned empty handed. She could hear his hoarse breathing, and now and then a profane exclamation, as he picked his way through the underbrush.

Then gradually the fury of conflict and of destruction died out, and silence reigned again—the silence of midnight. Samantha had lost all account of time, for she couldn't tell whether she had fainted or had slept. When she came fully and clearly to herself again the stillness of death seemed to prevail around her. Only the little stream rippled on softly, musically, undisturbed by human conflicts. Samantha found herself lying across some laurel boughs directly over it, and through the tree tops towering above she saw a patch of sky. It widened while she gazed; the clouds grew silvery, and then the moon appeared, sending a clear beam right down into her eyes. Her sluggish thoughts were quickened; she remembered her errand with a groan. But when she tried to move, to sit up, her numbed limbs refused to obey her; she felt as though pinned to the earth.

"I mus' be plum' freezed, or I'm paralyzed, one or t'other. Did they git Eph an' Al? What will Lizzy do?"

Before she knew it tears were filling her eyes, trickling over her face. "La! What am I cryin' like a baby for? If I've got to die, the Almighty 'll take keer of me. I done what I could to save 'em."

She tried to wipe away the tears, but her stiffened arm refused to be moved. It lay like a leaden weight across her chest. It was no use. She might as well give up. The drowsy numbness seemed to be creeping up even to her heart. Only her brain was still active, preternaturally active. All her life from childhood on crowded upon her thoughts. She and Al were to have been married in this spring. Poor Al, how sorry he would feel. And Lizzy, and Eph and Eddy. She was again moved to tears, though scarcely conscious of them.

It seemed a long time that she lay thinking, thinking, then her thoughts became only dreams. She lay snug and warm in her own bed, with a stream of water flowing through the room, and a bird singing upon her rafter. What a shrill and piercing note. The voice of the running water was ten times sweeter, softer. Suddenly she was wide awake again, and listening intently.

The shrill bird-like whistle sounded very near. It thrilled her with reviving hope; she uttered a little cry of relief and joy. A man crashed through the underbrush at the opposite of the stream and leaped over very close to her.

"S'manthy, oh, S'manthy!"

"I'm here, Al; I'm right close."

The moon came out again, revealing her hiding place. Al bent over her and gathered her into his arms.

"Honey, I 'lowed I'd never find you. I've been huntin' an' huntin'. What's the matter?"

"I fell down the bluff an'—"

SHE WENT CRASHING THROUGH THE BUSHES.

"You're freezin' to death."

"Yes; I s'pose so, an' I feel all broke to pieces."

"I knowed it was your voice the minute I heard you scream, an' we all knowed what it meant, too."

"Eph—where is Eph?"

"They tuk him, S'manthy."

She gasped with horror.

"Tuk Eph! Oh, oh!"

"I been up to the house an' found Lizzy mighty nigh distracted. She's takin' it hard, an' Eddy bein' sick, too. I had to come an' hunt for you, an' I think I'm just here in time!"

All the time he had been talking he was busy rubbing his face and hands, and now he lifted her first into a sitting position and then to her feet. But he had to carry her in his arms.

THE LOCAL VOTE.

As Everywhere, a Republican Avalanche.

SCARCELY A DEMOCRAT IN SIGHT.

Plainfield's Normal Republican Majority of 500 Increased to 1,200 Against John T. Dunn—Even Andrew Lane Ran Behind His Ticket in North Plainfield.

The general election yesterday, as told in the despatches on Pages 6 and 7 of this issue, was a Republican triumph; and in this section the voting was the same as everywhere. It is idle to talk of the votes that were not polled, of the use of money in buying votes that were, the one fact remains that the big mass of people that did vote voted overwhelmingly in favor of the Republican nominees.

It was not alone a solid massing of Republican forces, that brought about this brilliant Republican victory; it was as well a great uprising of the best element of the Democracy in rebuke of their party for nominations which were in many cases obnoxious to the rank and file. It was a purification of the party, by party voters—just such a purification as the Republicans effected in their party on the occasion of their recent similar uprising. Having thus purified themselves, both parties now stand before the people in a cleaner, purer light; and the leaders, taking heed of the demand for higher ideals, will henceforth seek the elevation of men of character and ability, of statesmen rather than politicians. By its self-purification of yesterday, the Democracy will win the confidence and support of the American public during the next campaign. And '96 is the year they covet.

Latest returns show Union County Republican by 1,200, and the Republican majority in the State 31.750.

John T. Dunn for Congress is defeated by 6,300, and Oliver for County Clerk is defeated by 1,543.

In Somerset County Andrew Lane is defeated for Assembly by 950. The Republicans carried every New Jersey County but Hudson and Hunterdon.

HILL'S DEFEAT.

MORTON'S PLURALITY FOR GOVERNOR NEARLY 150,000.

The latest returns of yesterday's election in New York State show that David B. Hill was defeated for Governor by upwards of 147,000 plurality. The Assembly will consist of 105 Republicans and 23 Democrats.

Throughout the country the Republicans have carried every Northern State, and greatly reduced the Democratic vote in the South. The Republicans claim to have even elected their candidate for Governor in Tennessee. The next House of Representatives will have a good working Republican majority.

In the West crushing defeats have been administered to the Populists in Kansas, Colorado, and Nebraska.

Hill only carrried New York city by 2,449.

ANOTHER FOOTBALL TIE.

Dunellen's Third Unsuccessful Attempt to Score Higher Than Their Opponents.

The Dunellen football team with only ten men succeeded in tieing the powerful Roselle eleven by a score of 0 to 0 at Roselle yesterday afternoon on a field that was one immense mud puddle. Twice the ball was carried across the goal line, once by F. R. Freeman and once by E. Brown, but in both cases the referee refused to allow it. Owing to the condition of the field the ball soon became very slippery and was almost impossible to hold, This occasioned fumbles innumerable by both sides, while all the players soon became soaked by rolling about in the mud and water. About 200 people witnessed the game.

The Roselle eleven will probably play here Thankegiving Day. Another game with the Westfield's is also talked of.

To Repeat a Splendid Trip.

Mr. Honeyman's coaching trip in England last August has been illustrated in The Horseman of Chicago, the appreciative descriptive letter accompanying it being written by Col. C. H. Page, secretary of the Philadelphia Turf Club, who accompanied the party. Mr. Honeyman says he is going to repeat the tour next July.

ELECTION ECHOES.

In North Plainfield township the counting in the first district ended at 8:45, and in the second district at 9:25.

One of the Socialist Labor candidates of the West End worked John T. Dunn pasters at the Grant Avenue polls.

Councilman Charles J. Fisk received special despatches from New York last evening in addition to the regular service of the Western Union.

Peter A. Emmons was the strongest Grant man in North Plainfield until along in the afternoon when the situation began to seem doubtful. Then the Cracker Barrel Club opened a debate on Tammany.

There were but a few rejected votes yesterday, and the casting of these was due more to carelessness than ignorance. Some put two ballots in their envelope. Others thought it wise to write their names on them, which of course made them marked and illegal.

Two workingmen met on North avenue at 11:30 last evening. One had heard all the news of New York's election and the other knew nothing about it. The wiser one improved the opportunity of placing a $2 bet on what he knew to be a certainty, the defeat of Tammany.

Codding was cut all around. The G. A. R. men were against him because of his treatment of Commander Reese, and the anti-A. P. A. element made itself felt. Green was the Democrat most favored by Codding scratchers. The Fourth ward was prominent in this work.

Half of the Socialist-Labor candidates were Plainfield machinists. Bell is employed in Pond's and Scott and Grieb work in Potter's. Hufnagel is an Elizabeth bartender, Keim is a Rahway painter, and Miller is a molder in Elizabethport. Scott received several anti-Codding votes.

The officials finished counting and took the returns to City Clerk MacMurray last night as follows: Second district, second ward, 10:10; second district, first ward, 11:30; first district, first ward, 12:30; first district, second ward, 12:30; third ward, 12:50; fourth ward, (both districts), 1:30.

Candidate for Congress James Bell and local leader J. W. James of the West End Socialists were rivals yesterday for the honor of voting first vote. James arose early, hurried to headquarters and was the first man to fold a ballot when the polls opened. Bell was tired from campaign work and arrived half an hour later.

It was a common occurrence yesterday for a voter to come from the booth and endeavor to cast a ballot without an envelope. Sometimes the envelope was found on the floor and on other occasions it was discovered on the desk with dis-discarded ballots. It was suggested that the use of a colored envelope would remedy the second difficulty.

The delay in counting the vote of the second district of the Fourth Ward was increased by the protest of J. W. James after 124 votes had been counted. He was sure that a mistake had been made and a Socialist vote omitted. The work was gone over again and it was found that one ballot had really been overlooked. The Socialist looked unhappy when he saw it was a Republican vote.

Work on the Sewers.

With Mr. Prout back from Ohio and heavier shipments of pipe it is expected that the work of laying the sewers will be pushed rapidly. The men laid 300 feet of pipe, with underdrain, on Putnam avenue yesterday. The trench on Woodland avenue filled with water so quickly that it was decided not to depend on the pump alone but to run a ditch through to lower ground and let the water flow away.

That's What They All Say.

A discerning Plainfield woman writes; "If I had no other literature in the world but The Plainfield Daily Press, I would through that keep thoroughly posted on all current events and all human progress. And reading the immense variety in The Press each day leaves me very little time for any other reading—there's so much of it, and all so good."

They Want It All.

Part 1 of the new Palmer Cox book is on sale at The Daily Press office all this week. The many purchasers all say "Save me a copy of all the parts". There are eight parts, each worth half a dollar, but each retailing through The Press for one dime. No coupon is required.

Letting His Light Shine.

Part of the duties of Fred S. Dunn in his new position in Pasadena is to operate the immense search light which, when on exhibition at the World's Fair, was pronounced the greatest light run by electricity in this country.

Cured It of Stammering.

On returning from the run to Box 152 last evening the North Plainfield firemen tested the gong and regulated the valve so that it would work the whistle right. The time signal sounded well the night before, but the valve did not respond when the box was pulled.

GILBERT FOR MAYOR.

Probably the Only Nominee on Any Ticket.

DEMOCRATS MAY NOT OPPOSE HIM.

Growth of the Movement to Continue in Charge of Public Affairs the Man Who Has Fostered the Progress of Sewers and Other Public Improvements.

The Press has already given indication of the growth of the movement in favor of continuing Alexander Gilbert in the office of Mayor of Plainfield.

The Republicans have agreed on him as their candidate, and even those Republicans who were spoken of to succeed him have withdrawn in his favor.

Not alone the Republicans, but leading Democrats as well, urge the inadvisability of changing the control of municipal affairs while such important work as the sewer system is under way and rapid-transit extension in progress; and it is being urged that in the forthcoming municipal election there be no opposition whatever to Mr. Gilbert.

In face of the fact that the local Democracy has apparently no one willing to stand against Mr. Gilbert, and in face of the local vote of yesterday, it would seem a waste of good material to attempt opposition to the Republican candidacy for mayor at this time.

A graceful and proper thing, therefore, would be for all good citizens, regardless of party, to concede to Mr. Gilbert the privilege of continuing in office another term to finish the good work he has begun, and to yield the field fully to him in the coming canvass.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTEBOOK.

The regular weekly singing lesson under Principal Travell occurred this morning as usual. The song "The Harvest Home" was practiced for the Thanksgiving Day exercises.

As the weather was so cold First Lieut. Green kept the boys corps at a double quick during the time allowed for drill. This is the customary method of keeping warm during drill in the Winter months.

The Senior class will have their "pronouncing match" tomorrow morning. The selection of the two sides will be made by the captains tomorrow morning. Principal Travell will act as judge.

The Senior class have commenced making preparations of that great annual event, the Thanksgiving Day "spread", which takes the place of the regular class day exercises at the end of the year.

The programme for the next meeting of the Kappa Delta Phi will be a brief character sketch of some American author by each of the members, the same author from whom they read a selection last meeting.

The Lyceum will have a debate at their regular meeting next Friday. The subject to be debated is: Resolved, That the French language is more beneficial than the German. F. Wilbur Cornwell '96 and H. Oscar Nightingale '96 will argue for the affirmative, while the negative will be defended by Carlos C. Gallup '96 and Charles B. Morse '95.

The result of yesterday's football game was pleasing to all, but as there were then three players not belonging to the High School on the team, while the North Plainfield eleven was largely composed of outsiders, arrangements have been made to play another game on next Friday afternoon between strictly school teams.

Bon Voyage.

A very pleasant farewell party was held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Divver, West Sixth street, last night, when a large number of friends met to say good-bye to Miss Norah Noonan and Miss Margaret Gallagher, who sail on the steamer Majestic this afternoon to spend the Winter in their former home in the County Roscommon, Ireland. Singing and dancing were heartily engaged in till early morning, and refreshments were served. All joined in wishing their friends a safe and pleasant voyage. They will return in the Spring.

Singular Accident.

Louis Bergmiller of Berkley Heights fell in a fainting fit in the cellar of his home, Monday, in a pool of water, and came near drowning. His present condition is quite critical.

THE GERMAN FAIR.

With Continued Good Weather It Will Be a Week of Success.

It was a busy election afternoon and evening with the members of the German Reformed Church yesterday. The fair they started Monday was fairly under under way in the evening and the election holiday brought many to the store, 43 Somerset street, where the week of fair is being held.

The finishing touches had been put on the decorations and the front half of the store was a mass of red, white and blue bunting. The word "Welcome" in white and red flowers hung opposite the entrance. On both sides the tables were arranged along the walls with all preparations completed for the carrying on of profitable business. All the business men of the town had given of their goods to help the thing along.

The general committee of the Ladies Aid Society of the church includes Mrs. Philip Bach, Mrs. Valentine Utzinger, Mrs. Peter Doeringer, Mrs. W. C. Krausse, Mrs. Mohring, Mrs. Horn, and Mrs. William Schaffer. Their aim is to raise money enough to warrant the beginning of the building of a nice new parsonage for the nice new pastor. In this they were seconded by the church official. Valentine Utzinger, Peter Doeringer, August Wolff and Philip Bach. Pastor Hauser was a most helpful visitor.

The tables were under the following management: Fancy goods—The Misses Nettie Kreitling, Ida Faller, Minnie Bechtle, Minnie Heidel, Lizzie Reuch, Minnie Siedentof, and Mary Juergensen.

Peanut table—William Trembath, John Utzinger and Fred Vanderweg.

Grab-bag—William Vanderweg, Albert Utzinger and Frank Bach.

Candy table—The Misses Josie Fritz, Sadie Blimm, Kate Blimm, Margaret Schuck and Lizzie Scheelein.

ELECTION-DAY HORSE THEFT.

A Man with Too Much Liquor Takes a Rig Not His Own.

Hackman Daniel Hibbitts of West Fifth street decided to vote in the First district of the Fourth ward yesterday afternoon at 4. Accordingly he drove to the polls at 114 West Second street and left his bay horse and two-seated black surrey in front while he went in to cast his ballot.

Wm. Wilson, alias Wm. Packer, a Plainfielder who has no regular lodging-house, came along and drove off with the rig. When the hackman came out he learned what had happened and at once started to search for his property. He hired a rig at the Metropolitan Stables and went to Scotch Plains. He was told there that Wilson had been there but had gone away.

John Dorgan of West Third street went to Dunellen on the 7:03 train and after but little delay found Wilson and the rig at McFadden's establishment. Wilson was intoxicated, the harness was broken, the carriage showed signs of wear and the blanket and the whip were missing.

Mr. Dorgan loaded the drunken man into the wagon, repaired the harness and drove back to Plainfield. He met Policeman Cooney and had Wilson taken to the lockup. The horse and what remained of the rest of the rig were returned to Mr. Hibbitts.

HIGH SCHOOL VICTORY.

Borough Football Boys Defeated.

The second eleven of the High School defeated the North Plainfield Public School eleven on the Willow Avenue grounds yesterday afternoon by the score of 14 to 6.

The touchdowns were made for the High School by A. B. Crane (2) and W. Lawrence (1). Crane kicked one goal. H. Moore scored the touchdown for the North Plainfield team on a fluke.

The playing of the High School eleven was especially noticeable for the fine interference of W. Lawrence, A. Taylor, A. B. Crane, F. W. Cornwell and G. A. Horne, the long runs were chiefly made by Lawrence, Crane and Taylor, while there were pretty tackles made by Cornwell, Drake and Craig. A. Lane, I. Hardingham and H. Moore distinguished themselves on on the North Plainfield side, and although the whole eleven played well, there was a noticeable lack of team play. Charles B. Morse of the High School acted as referee and Raymond A. McGee of Leal's School served as umpire. Owing to the short notice given, neither team was composed of only school boys.

Burning Leaves Cause Alarm.

A false alarm, sent with good intentions, reached Warren engine-house shortly before 5 yesterday afternoon. Box 152 had been pulled, but the whistle-valve caught and a few wild blows were all that resulted.

The hose wagon and the engine went to Rockview avenue and found that no fire awaited them. A son of Wm. Fries of 190 Grove street had pulled the box. He said he had looked across from his home and had seen flames reaching up the side of George P. Dupee's barn at 30 Rockview avenue. The flames came from a heap of leaves which touched the base of the building and made it appear as if the siding had caught fire.

THEIR DAINTY FEET.

Some Society Women With Artistic Pedal Extremities.

The desire among our aristocrats to be spoken of as the owners of prettily shaped feet has been increasing for the last few years.

When a woman realizes that she can wear an "A" shoe in width or a one and a half in length, she then begins to think about the contour of her foot and immediately seeks to remove all blemishes that will disfigure in any way. She visits her particular chiropodist as religiously as her dentist or manicure, and from him learns the proper method of preserving the beauty and softness of skin. Following out her foot doctor's orders minutely and being particular about the make and cut of her shoe, there is no reason why the majority of women who have time and leisure should not be blessed with as artistic pedal extremities as those of Mrs. Secretary Belknap, who they used to say invariably attracted a group of admirers, who gathered to gaze at her lovely and daintily clad feet whenever she stepped into her carriage.

Many New York society women can boast of extremely aristocratic feet. Mrs. E. Marcy Raymond, of Fifth avenue, has a noticeably pretty foot, the artistic contour of which is enhanced by the delicate soft grays and tan suedes she wears. Mrs. Edwin Gould's foot is thoroughly characteristic of the charming disposition of its pretty owner, and Mrs. Theodore Sutro's foot is always encased in shoes that not only match each costume, but fit to perfection at every point. The lines in Mrs. Sutro's foot indicate a purely artistic and musical nature, with high intellectual endowments.

Mrs. Frank Leslie can be happy in the knowledge that she is one of the few women whose boot number only reaches to the height of "one," and whose width does not exceed that of a child. The lines in this foot as read by an expert denotes great power, indicated by the noticeable rise of the big toe, unusual executive ability, a keen intellect, charm of manner, versatility and high breeding.

Mrs. Professor Doremus has a beautiful foot, which is a fitting counterpart of her lovely hand, reproduced in marble by a famous European sculptor.

One of the first things you notice about the Marquise de Lanza is her extremely pretty foot. It is exquisite in outline, and Mme. Lanza might well take it as a subject in some of her writings.

Mrs. Burke Roche and Mrs. Cooper Hewitt both possess feet lovely enough to inspire poets. They have exquisitely arched insteps.

Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt has a short foot, but extremely pretty in outline; the foot of Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge is beautifully shaped, and Mrs. Paran Stevens may justly be proud of that aristocratic member which she covers with such stylish slippers, boots and ties.

HUNTING THE RED EAR.

An Old-Fashioned Husking at the Mitchell Homestead.

There was a husking at Scott Mitchell's Thursday night.

A real, old-fashioned corn-husking at the Mitchell Homestead in Greene. There were about twenty present, besides the fiddler and the family. The farm is a large and rich one, and has this year crowded the big barn with hay and grain, fodder and corn, so that like the Biblical rich man, Mr. Mitchell will be obliged to tear down his barns and build greater if the farm continues to improve.

They didn't husk all the corn that was in the barn. Who ever knew a husking where much work was done? The lanterns were hung up by ropes let down from the beams in the top of the barn, so that a generous glow of kerosene light was shed throughout the whole length and breadth of the long barn floor where Mr. Mitchell had put down just corn enough to sit on and husk before the dance. The people began to come at 8 o'clock, and gathered in the kitchen till a bugle blast from Color Sergeant Fuller, and another from Lieutenant Alden called them to the barn. It would be impossible for us to try to describe the scene that followed, save to say that it was a merry one, and that Driver Scott, of the Lewiston police force, found the first red ear, and that a certain pretty young lady found the first pair of rude, rude lips. Songs, stories, and conversation followed till 12 o'clock, when Mrs. Mitchell invited them all in to supper—a baked bean supper—baked beans in the ground, of course, and good as gold, every one of them. Then they cleared away the husks from the barn floor, dragged away the bushels of yellow corn, and Charlie the Fiddler struck up "The Rye Straw," "The Huskers of the Yellow Ears," and others. The dance was all over before daylight. "'Twant no great of a time, but just one of them old-fashioned huskins," said one of the neighbors who was present.—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

A Princely Fortune Hunter.

A Vienna paper recently contained the following advertisement: "A young prince, the owner of a lordly estate of great value, has the intention to marry. He seeks a handsome and intelligent girl of about twenty years of age, of good family, and with a dower not less than 3,000,000 gueldens ($1,250,000)—Apply," etc.

"'Bending above the spicy woods which blaze,
Arch skies so blue they flash, and hold the sun
Immeasurably far; the waters run
Too slow, so freighted are the river-ways
With gold of elms and birches from the maze
Of forests. Chestnuts, clicking one by one,
Escape from satin burrs; her fringes done,
The gentian spreads them out in sunny days,
And, like late revellers at dawn, the chance
Of one sweet, mad last hour, all things assail,
And conquering, flush and spin; while to enchance
The spell, by sunset door, wrapped in a veil
Of red and purple mists, the summer pale,
Steals back alone for one more song and dance.'"

NIAGARA'S POWERS CONTROLLED.

The First and Successful Test of the Great Hydraulic Tunnel.

The first practical test of the great Niagara Falls hydraulic tunnel, which has been under construction for the past 3 years, has been made.

When the gates were raised at the entrance to the feeder leading from the big hydraulic canal to the wheel pit of the Niagara Falls Paper Company's mill the waters of the upper river rushed through their newly found channel to the wheelhouse, where they poured down the penstock of the pit, a huge iron structure 13 feet in diameter, for a distance of 155 feet, then striking in an upward direction three of the largest turbine wheels ever built, and thence passing into the big tunnel and flowing out under the city to the river below the falls, nearly two miles distant from the point of the fall.

This test shows what many thousands have been waiting to see, a practical demonstration of the great scheme for harnessing the terrific power of the Niagara, a scheme which has already cost nearly $4,000,000.

The paper mill which is first to get the benefit of the power, is the largest of its kind in the world. Its contract calls for 6,000 horse power, one-half of which is being used now, and the cost, including the lease of land occupied by the mill, is $8 per horse power per year for twenty-fours a day, the cheapest, it is said ever obtained. This test proved a satisfactory one, and the mill is now in full operation. The hydraulic tunnel, with a capacity of 120,000 horse power, is now a success, and now there remains only the opening of the general power house, where 5,000 horse-power turbines will operate 5,000 horse-power generators for the transmission of power in this form.

HE WAS DYING OF HEART FAILURE.

But Changed His Mind and Got Well Rather than Submit to the Knife.

"Speaking of people frightening themselves into a belief that they are sick," said a young doctor the other day, "I saw a case when I was in one of the New York hospitals where a man was frightened into getting well. One day a call came for the ambulance, and when the wagon returned it brought a man who was supposed to be dying of an attack of heart failure. We laid him carefully on the operating table, and after a minute diagnosis the surgeon in charge concluded that it was only hysteria. There was nothing we could do for the man, and he seemed to be unconscious, but the surgeon turned to one of the assistants and, asking for a knife, said that he would cut down to the heart and see what the trouble was. The effect was like magic. The patient gave one leap from the table and started for the door. We stopped him and asked what was the matter. 'Nothing,' said he; 'I'm all right; let me out of here, quick.' We let him out, and he never came back again."—Washington Post.

CARMEN SYLVA'S HEART.

It was Touched by a Little Girl in a Village School.

Here is a pretty little story about Carmen Sylva:

A few years ago, when she was in the zenith of her popularity and health, she visited a small village school incog, and asked the children through their "paces." The schoolmistress was highly delighted. Although she was unaware of the high rank of her visitor, she guessed from outward appearance that the latter was of no common order. The children did their mistress credit, answering with great promptitude all the simple questions the queen put to them.

Just before leaving the queen noticed one little tot in a far corner of the room, with her tangled head of hair bent over some book. The child was so deeply engrossed in her reading that she took no notice whatever of anybody in the room. The queen asked the reason of her silence; was she deaf or otherwise afflicted! "Oh, no," was the answer, "but she is stupid and never attends to her studies, but seizes every opportunity to read story books." Carmen Sylva walked quietly up to the little reader, and placing her hand on the curly head, asked gently what the child was reading, and the latter held up the book to the strange lady. It was "Fairy Stories and Poems," by Carmen Sylva. "And do you like these tales?" asked their author. "Like them, madam? Oh, I love them!"

And Carmen Sylva took the child in her arms, kissed the little flushed face, and departed. About a week afterward the child's aunt—for the little maiden was an orphan—received a letter from the queen offering to educate and bring up the child. The offer was gratefully and thankfully accepted, and now the little one is one of the best scholars in Roumania.

These Girls Can Walk, Some.

A group of Mills College (Cal.), girls have formed a "Tramp Club." The chief condition of membership is the ability to walk ten miles, but it is not unusual to extend the walks to twice that length. Twenty-four miles has thus far been the limit of each tour, and clad in their suits of striped ticking, made with blouse waists and skirts just long enough to reach the tops of their stout walking shoes, the girls have tramped on alternate Fridays to nearly every interesting spot accessible from Oakland. Sketching and natural history collections are incidental to the walks.

The 8 o'clock train from Boston last evening was a half hour late as the result of a very peculiar happening.

Something about the whistle of the locomotive gave way so that it could not be shut off, and the train rushed through the country from Boston to Lawrence, 27 miles, an hour's run, with the whistle shrieking all the way.

It must have astonished the farmers and villagers and passengers, and have been very uncomfortable for the engineer and firemen. But there was no help for it. The thing couldn't be throttled, for if the engine was to move there must be steam, and if there was steam the whistle must shriek. The result was that the steam was used up in that way to such an extent that the train was a half hour late.—Portland Daily Press.

A NUDE COLOSSUS.

TWENTY YEARS WITHOUT CLOTHING IN ALL CLIMATES.

Giant Capt. Von Schmidt's Philosophy of Undress. He Comes of a Consumptive Family, but is not Coughing Very Badly.

A tawny giant, who has been naked for twenty years, is lord of the Oakland, Cal., estuary. His wardrobe is a belt and a pair of cotton trunks. In his belt he wears a long dagger, and he carries a Winchester in his swarthy arms. He dictates the movements of all the ferryboats, yachts, tugs, schooners, and crafts of every sort that pass his way. This naked colossus is backed by the War Department of the United States. On the prow of his huge contrivance anchored in the channel he stands erect like a bronze statue of Ajax.

He is tall and superbly proportioned, measuring 6 feet 3 inches and weighing 200 pounds. For twenty years he has braved the climates of the world without a shirt or a coat to protect him. During the strike of the American Railway Union this man bade defiance to the Southern Pacific and compelled big boats like the Alameda and Piedmont to stop, back water, and take the course he indicated.

Who and what is this phenomenon? He is Capt. Edward A. Von Schmidt, and except upon passing occasions, when he has appeared in the streets of cities, he has gone almost stark naked for twenty years. He is now in charge of the Government dredging of the Oakland ship channel, working under the direction of the Federal War Department.

When seen the other day, and asked the reason for his strange costume, Von Schmidt put down a volume of Kipling's tales and replied:

"Well, briefly, for my health." Then, in an answer to questions he went on for two hours reciting the details of a most singular career.

"Don't I ever feel cold?" he repeated. "Why, bless you, I have gone as you see me now for twenty years, in all kinds of climates in every part of the world. It is a mistake to think that it is natural to go naked only in the tropics. Hittell, in his history of California, calls attention to the effect of civilization upon the Indians. When the Spanish padres, after converting these natives to Christianity, began to clothe them the Indians began to die of pulmonary troubles. My philosophy of dress, or undress, is founded on scientific principles. The pores of the skin breathe the air and are intended to take in the sunshine; especially should the pores over the respiratory organs have free access to the sun and atmosphere. In fact, German scientists are now advocating nakedness as a cure for consumption. I come from a consumptive family, and when I was a boy it was predicted that I would die young because of my weak lungs." Here the giant took a long breath, and the superb expansion of his chest showed how indifferent events are of the reputation of prophets.

"Yes," continued the strong man, "and I studied medicine awhile, and my fellow empiricists said I had weak lungs; and when I went to sea my friends said I would never come back. Well, down in the tropics I naturally wore but very little, and the less I wore the better I felt, and when I put on more clothing again I didn't feel so well. A year later, in bringing vessels through the Straits of Magellan, I noticed the Tierra del Fuegans going naked in the snow. I saw old men, stalwart and rugged, and mothers nursing their babes—all naked, and all quick in action and sturdy of limb, and I said I have found the secret of health. Ever since I have dressed about as those rugged natives of that bleak country dress, or as you see me now.

"It was a disappointment in love," he observed, "that made me go to sea. Then, too, I inherited a love of adventure. My grandfather was a sea captain and traded with the Californian Indians in 1823. In the South Seas I married a half-caste girl—an educated girl, however, the daughter of an English officer. She died. My present wife I married in Melbourne. She shares my bizarre notions about clothing. Of course she doesn't go about as I do, but so far as society will permit her she obeys the same natural laws. We dress our children with regard to those principles too, and we have never spent a penny for medicine or for a physician's care in our household."

Although the captain doesn't own a white shirt or a pair of cuffs, or a suit of clothes that would pass muster in a parlor or on a boulevard, he is a wealthy man, controlling with his father the dredging business of the coast, and owning ships on the Atlantic and Pacific, and also considerable land.—San Francisco Examiner.

MISAPPLIED ASSISTANCE.

One Dear Lady Endeavors to Help Another Until Requested to Desist.

Two women sitting side by side in a street car the other day had an amusing experience. They were strangers to each other, but one happened to notice that her neighbor was having serious difficulty with a jacket she wore and at which she tugged, with the result that it would neither go on nor come off.

"Permit me," said the woman who sat near to her, and she pulled upon one shoulder and jerked up the top of the collar.

Still the woman with the jacket struggled with it, and the side that the other woman had so obligingly assisted up slipped down again, to be grabbed once more and pulled into place by the obliging passenger.

"Now, if you'll turn this way I'll help you on the other side," she said to the astonished wearer.

"Thank you, ma'am," snapped the other woman, "if it's all the same to you, I'm trying to get this jacket off," and with a final jerk she succeeded in freeing herself from the encumbering wrap.

And the woman who had tried to help her gazed into blank futurity and recalled the example of the man who got rich minding his own business.—Detroit Free Press.

CHRISTIAN UNITY.

CARDINAL GIBBONS SAYS CREEDS DO NOT TEND TO HARMONY.

In His Comments Upon the Pope's Encyclical. He Commends the Work of the World's Fair Congress of Religion as Inculcating Liberty of Thought.

Cardinal Gibbons has written an introduction, entitled "Christian Unity," to the official translation of the Pope's recent encyclical on that subject, which appears in the American Catholic Quarterly Review. In the introduction the Cardinal says:

"Two cries for religious unity have recently gone forth to the world. Thinking men have as never before been drawn to consider the anomaly presented by the great diversity that has existed in religious matters among the nations of the globe. God-fearing men, profound students, earnest souls, have bewailed such religious disunion, strife producing and oftto deeds of violence inciting; have seen that such a state of things is disorder and not according to the dictates of right reason, and have thought that the warring sects of Christendom could be brought together and in peace and harmony follow the doctrines of Jesus Christ. They recognize the need of unity in religion—in divine worship—more imperative here than in other branches of human effort. They see that the multiplicity of religious beliefs, the diversity of Christian creeds and churches, by no means tend to the beauty, or to the harmony, or to the strength, either, of religion or of Christianity.

"The World's Fair Congresses of Religions took place a twelvemonths since in a Western metropolis, and eminent representatives of almost all the principal forms of religious beliefs labored to find a strong bond of union among them, either of doctrine or of practical life. From this parliament there resulted a clearer apprehension of religion as meaning the love and worship of God and the love and service of man. Greater liberty of thought and wider tolerance of opinion have been inculcated. The ideas of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man have been learned more thoroughly and impressively than ever before. And it is to be hoped as a permanent blessing originating in these Congresses that men will no longer persecute their brethern for conscience's sake, thinking that thereby they would be rendering a service to the good and Almighty God."

BRICE'S START IN LIFE.

The Ohio Senator Got His First Lift from Gov. Foster.

Senator Brice got his start in life in a rather interesting way, says the Springfield Union. After he left college he studied law, but he didn't get on very well, and he went to Charlie Foster, then Governor of Ohio, and asked if something in the way of an office couldn't be found for him. "Impossible," said the Governor. "You are a Democrat and I am a Republican. It would cause no end of talk if I were to give you a place, with so many Republicans wanting offices." But Brice was in straits, and he begged so earnestly for some help by which he might extricate himself that Foster finally placed a sum of money in his hands and told him to go to New York and look after a certain financial transaction. His last injunction to the young man was to follow instructions. When he got there Brice made inquiries first and then acted directly contrary to what he had been told, telegraphing forthwith what he had done. Foster wired indignantly for the reason. The reply was: "Because I could make $40,000 for you." There was no questioning beyond that, and thenceforth Foster and Brice worked in harmony in various railroad operations, the latter giving up his idea of a legal career for the more lucrative one of railroad builder and promoter.

WILL AVOID CHURCH FAIRS.

A Breach of Promise Suit Resulted from the Young Man's Attendance.

Social circles in the pretty seaside village of Freeport, L. I., were given a shock when a suit for $10,000 damages for breach of promise was begun against William H. Corning, one of Freeport's best known young men.

There was quite a romantic beginning to the courtship of the young couple, who first met at a church fair at Freeport, where one source of revenue was the sale of kisses at half a dollar each, a bevy of pretty girls, among them being Miss Muller, selling an osculatory commodity. Corning, in a spirit of deviltry, decided to kiss all the girls without paying, and it is said succeeded until he came to Miss Muller. There he had to produce the elusive coin. He paid and got his kiss, which it is inferred led to many subsequent kisses with no revenue for the church, and this Miss Muller blushingly declares was what led to the engagement.

Will It Come to This?

The Court—What's the charge in this divorce case, Sutterby vs. Sutterby?

The Applicant's Attorney—Failure to support, your honor.

The Court—Husband wouldn't pay for her sustenance—is that it?

The Applicant's Attorney—No, your honor. She was a candidate on a Populist ticket and he voted for a Democrat.—Chicago Record.

The Girl and the Bee.

Do any of you remember Punch's story about the little girl and the bee? It is worth telling again, anyway. She had been stung, and was telling about it.

"First, it walked about all over my hand," she said, "and it was so nice. But, oh!—when it sat down!"

THE CHINESE FISH BY PROXY.

Trained Birds to do Their Work For Them With Good Results.

"I spent four years in China," said Electrical Engineer Charles Dana, "and while I saw more curious and surprising things there than I could tell about, if I talked for a month, nothing amused me so much as the fishing cormorants at their work.

"The first time I saw cormorant fishing I was walking the River Min. By and by I came to a bamboo float or raft, moored to the pier of a bridge. A Chinaman was squatting on the raft, and some birds I took at first to be ducks were grouped at one end of it. They were all facing the Chinaman, who was gazing steadily at them, his hands on his knees.

"Suddenly the Chinaman extended his right hand, palm upward, toward one of the birds, which I had by this time discovered were not ducks. This particular bird came briskly toward the Chinaman, and climbed upon his open palm. The man stroked its feathers fondly, rubbed his cheek along its neck, and talked to it in Chinese, evidently in terms of endearment. The bird seemed delighted with this treatment. It laid its head on the Chinaman's arm, stroked his face with its queer looking bill, and returned all his caresses. This mutual fondling continued for perhaps a minute. Then the Chinaman moved with the bird to the further side of the float, and placed it on the edge. Then for the first I realized what was going on. Here was a Chinese fisherman and his invaluable aids, the cormorants.

"When this cormorant was placed on the edge of the float it dipped its bill into the water and snapped it foudly, looked up and down the side of the raft, turned it head, fixed its glittering black eyes an instant on its master, and then slid down into the water, without leaving as much as a ripple where it disappeared.

The Chinaman sat down and awaited the reappearance of the bird without any apparent concern or impatience. The other birds remained standing at their end of the raft almost motionless, and ever with their shining eyes fixed on the fisherman. The cormorant that had dived into the water remained under for half a minute, Then it came up with a pop that threw it almost clear of the water. The tail and half the body of a fish protruded from its bill. The bird swam straight for the raft, climbed upon it, jumped upon its master's knee, and held its head up for him to remove the fish.

"With one hand the Chinaman drew the fish from the cormorant's mouth, and with the other stroked its neck and plumage, and with his mouth close to its head murmured what were undoubtedly words of approval to the bird. The comorant shook out its feathers and in various ways showed its delight.

"After a few minutes the Chinaman again placed the bird on the edge of the float, and once more it glided noiselessly into the stream. The other birds maintained their stolidity, to all appearance utterly unconscious of everything except the presence of their master.

"The busy cormorant reappeared in a short time, having again made a successful dive. Another caressing scene between it and the Chinaman followed, and a third time the bird returned to the water. It now seemed to be thoroughly warmed up to its work, and went at it with an avidity that showed plainly the great pleasure the bird took in the chase. The third dive kept the cormorant under water longer than the others, and when it came up it had no fish. The change in its actions was striking. It swam frantically about in the water, twisting and turning, and manifesting the greatest distress, but turn which ever way it might, it kept its glittering eyes fixed on its master, and it seemed to me, with an appealing expression in them.

"The bird made no move to approach the raft, and when the Chinaman raised his hand and pointed downward with his forefinger, the eager bird dived again, and so quickly that it was out of sight like a flash. It was beneath the surface no longer than ten seconds. This time it came up with a large fish in its mouth, and swam boldly toward the raft. Depositing its prize at its master's feet, the bird showed plainly by its actions as the Chinaman stroked its feathers that it had redeemed itself and held its master's favor. And I soon learned that it was pleasanter for a cormorant to gain its master's favor than his displeasure.

WHY CATS FALL ON THEIR FEET.

The French Academy of Sciences Tackles a Deep Subject.

The French Academy of Sciences spent almost an entire day recently profoundly discussing the question why do cats fall on their feet. M. Marey read a paper and submitted sixty photographs depicting puss in various attitudes while falling about five feet. The first showed the cat with feet in air making a series of desperate appeals for succor; then a somersault was turned with more or less grace; finally the feline reached the ground on its four paws, and with tail aloft, bolted into a safe retreat.

There was a great deal of learned discussion as to the cause of the phenomenon. M. Marey thought the problem had been triumphantly solved by puss in the first three feet of the descent. M. Milne Edwards, M. Berthelot and others maintained that the cat uses the hand or other object causing the fall as a leverage for turning round, but this did not agree with the early photographs in which there is no sign of rotation. M. Marcel Deprez suggested that intestinal movements might account for the phenomenon. M. Marey promised to continue his experiments and to prevent the possibility of leverage by tying the cat and then cutting the string.

Jerome K. Jerome on Liberty.

Jerome K. Jerome, the well-known author and dramatist, says, apropos of a contest now on in England: "I want individual liberty, because without it there is no manhood or womanhood either. I want to see people left perfectly free to gamble, drink and walk around the Empire Lounge, because it is by these means that nature sorts out her children and sifts out men from noodles, strengthens the useful, and relegates to their proper position the useless and foolish. Temptations are grinding stones in the mills of the gods. Nature requires them and will always take care that they are present. If silly, shallow thinkers had their way this world would be turned into an oyster bed for the propagation of jelly fish. If there were no opportunities for man to ruin himself there would be no material for man to form himself. Their foolish plans for what they call the reformation of the world are in reality blasphemous attempts to interrupt with their puny logic the whole machine of the Creator.

READ EVERY DAY BY ALL PLAIN FIELD, AND MORE BESIDES.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., NOV. 7, 1894

CITY EDITION, 4 O'CLOCK.

Every day the circulation of The Daily Press steadily increases. The Press is the only Plainfield paper that is not an organ.

The Jersey Central Railroad Company is a pretty good property-owner. This year it pays the State a tax of $313,065.92 on its New Jersey possessions.

The pure-white smile of the gentleman from Westfield will continue to illumine the Assembly chamber, and the Elizabeth Journal will teem with McBride poetry.

The Six-Day Serial to be begun in The Daily Press tomorrow is by Rudyard Kipling. All of these stories are original and copyrighted. Plainfield people will find them in The Daily Press alone.

The Press is in receipt of several communications directed against the A. P. A. While they are able and interesting letters, the merits of this organization have in these columns been so much attacked and so much defended that The Press will have the gratitude of the general public for closing the discussion.

Palmer Cox's latest book, "Queer People", is delighting the old people as well as the young. Its sale in Plainfield is exclusively through The Daily Press, and there is a steady demand for copies in the Press counting room. The book is in eight parts, and though each part is worth 50 cents The Press sells it for 10.

The Press is duly appreciative of the many kind words said of it by the people of Plainfield for it handsome appearance, its enterprise, its leadership in giving the news, and its fairness and honesty in politics. Being a newspaper and not an organ, giving fully and freely the news of both sides without bias, is the open secret of The Press's popularity. The Press columns show that it is possible for a newspaper to be decent and dignified in its treatment of both political parties. The Press does not permit its opinions to influence it in giving the news.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—E P Thorn shows some fine samples of cotton grown at his Front street home.

—Roselle's station park is being improved by the ever-progressive Jersey Central.

—Councilman Frost spent the greater part of yesterday inspecting the work on the sewers.

—D. J. Shea, manager of the Postal Telegraph Company, won the gratitude of a large number of voters for his prompt and accurate service in the announcement of all returns at his office on Park avenue.

—As will be learned from their announcement in another column, Leech, Stiles & Co., the Philadelphia eye specialists, formerly with Queen & Co., send their representative to Plainfield on Thursdays. He will be found at 107 East Front street from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. No charge to examine your eyes. Intelligent and skillful attention assured.

CYCLING COMMENT.

E. A. Blauvelt rode on his wheel from Newark today to call on Plainfield friends. He rides a Spalding steadily and is preparing for prize-winning in Madison Square Garden.

A dozen applications for membership will be acted upon at the meeting of the Plainfield Bicycle Club next Monday evening. The prospect of having good gymnasium training during the Winter will probably induce others to join.

A Shame.

The illegal shooting of rabbits and game generally, by Italians and foreign-born people near Sterling, is really a shame. It is said that they even shoot on Sundays, and no one seems to try to prevent them.

First of the Season.

A lively snow squall gave a wintry aspect to the Plainfield atmosphere today.

"What I Eat Does Me No Good."

How often this expression is heard—life destroying dyspepsia has hold on you when you feel thus, and should not be trifled with. There is but one remedy that can permanently cure you, Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, made at Rondout, N. Y., a vegetable compound endorsed by the medical profession. Druggists sell it at one dollar a bottle.

CRUSHED BY THE CARS.

Another Victim of Track Trespassing.

Engine 115 was pushing coal-cars on Davis & Stevens's switch at Grant avenue at 2:30 this afternoon when a twelve-year-old boy who was playing about the train had his foot caught between two bumpers.

Mr. Stevens signaled the engine to stop and the cars were drawn apart so that the boy's foot could be released.

His toes were badly crushed. Mr. Stevens was called away then and while he was in the office the boy went away without giving his name. He was told to go to Muhlenberg Hospital. He was a resident of the Boulevard region.

IN HONOR OF MCCLELLAN.

The Statue Erected to His Memory in City Hall Plaza, Philadelphia.

Just after the death, in October, 1885, of Gen. McClellan a movement was started in Philadelphia to erect a statue to his memory. Success did not crown the efforts of the admirers of "Little Mac," but they persevered, and in 1889 an appropriation of $5,000 was secured from the Pennsylvania Legislature. By continued hard work $13,000 additional was raised by popular subscription. William Astor of New York and William Frazier of Philadelphia each donating $1,000. The ceremonies attendant upon the unveiling were of an elaborate character, the chief feature being the oration of Gen. William B. Franklin, of Hartford, Conn., who commanded a division under McClellan during the rebellion, and who was considered by McClellan to be one of his ablest officers. Gen. Franklin's praise of this "distinguished son of Pennsylvania" was unstinted.

GENERAL MCCLELLAN.

The statue is erected on the northwest corner of the City Hall plaza, only a short distance from a similar monument erected to the memory of Gen. Reynolds, which stands at the northern end of the plaza. The McClellan monument, which represents the once Commander-in-Chief of the Union army in full field uniform, astride of his horse and overlooking the battlefield of Antietam, was jointly designed by Henry G. Ellicott and Paul M. Pelz of Washington, the former designing the statue proper and the latter making the drawings for the pedestal.

The statue is made of United States statuary bronze from one inch to one and three-eighths inches thick. The man is one and one-half life size, and the horse is fifteen feet six inches long. From the pavement to the top of the hat the statue measures twenty-three feet six inches.

JARROW, THE STRONG BOY.

He is Eighteen Years Old, and His Strength was Born in Him.

At this time when the "modern Hercules" and the "modern Samson," and more "iron men" than one can count are before the public, it is both interesting and novel to find a modest beardless boy of 18 years performing feats of strength that make many of the alleged wonders wonder what will appear next in the line of prodigies. Men who speak from authority say that is only a question of time and proper care when young Emil Jarrow will give performances that will actually cause the new-found Samson to appear as helpless as the real Samson when he was shorn of his hair by Delilah. This boy has lately been giving performances in barrooms and before clubs in the upper end of New York. He is five feet seven inches in height, and weighs 132 pounds. His chest is broad and his legs are well set, though not heavy. His neck is rather long and is not thick, as is common with prize fighters and athletes. The muscles of his arms do not bulge out the sleeves of his coat, and the buttons do not drop from his vest when he draws a long breath. In his rough dress he looked like one of a common class of barroom loungers. His countenance wore a pale and unhealthy look, doubtless the result of his persistent habit of smoking cigarettes.

"Jarrow, can't you show a few tricks to these gentlemen?" asked the bartender.

"What kind of tricks?" asked some one.

EMIL JARROW.

"Oh, different feats of strength. That is our strong boy," was the answer.

A general laugh followed when the men looked for indications of strength. The proprietor, a man weighing 240 pounds, sat down in an oak chair weighing 20 pounds, and said to the boy.

"Just raise me for a starter."

The spectators gathered in a semicircle, while the boy lit another cigarette and smiled. He stepped quickly over to the chair, took hold of one of the rounds with his right hand, and lifted the chair and the man off the floor.

There was less laughing and more interest among the spectators. They wanted to see the boy's muscles, and he stripped off his shirt. Then they saw a remarkable development of the arms and chest. The boy raised his right arm, and the muscles stood out in great twists and knots that curved and played into changing lines. He held his arm out straight. "See if you can bend it, any two of you," he said.

Two of the heaviest and strongest of the spectators threw their entire weight upon the extended arm. It withstood their efforts like a bar of Bessemer steel. The boy has a remarkable power of grip, as is shown by one of his favorite feats, that of tearing a pack of cards with one motion. He also piles five chairs, weighing 20 pounds each, on another chair, which he grasps by the lower round with his hand turned upward. Slowly he lifts the pile from the floor and raises it above his head without changing the position of his hand. Something of the strength required for this feat may be understood by the person who will try to lift one chair, even a light one, from the floor in the manner described.

A YOUNG GIRL'S FORTUNE.

AN INTERESTING SKETCH.

Nothing appeals so strongly to a mother's affection as her daughter just budding into womanhood. Following is an instance: "Our daughter, Blanche, now 15 years of age, had been terribly afflicted with nervousness, and had lost the entire use of her right arm. She was in such a condition that we had to keep her from school and abandon her music lessons. In fact, we feared St. Vitus dance, and are positive but for an invaluable remedy she would have had that terrible affliction. We had employed physicians, but she received no benefit from them. The first of last August she weighed but 75 pounds, and although she has taken only three bottles of Nervine she now weighs 106 pounds; her nervousness and symptoms of St. Vites dance are entirely gone, she attends school regularly, and studies with comfort and ease. She has recovered complete use of her arm, her appetite is splendid, and no money could procure for our daughter the health Dr. Miles' Nervine has brought her.

When my brother recommended the remedy I had no faith in patent medicines, and would not listen to him, but as a last resort he sent us a bottle, we began giving it to Blanche, and the effect was almost immediate."—Mrs. R. R. Bullock, Brighton, N. Y.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is positively free from opiates or dangerous drugs.

REMARKABLE CURES

Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.

I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR. PETER G. EYCK, OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:

For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

DRAMA AND OPERA.

MISS OLGA NETHERSOLE SCORES A DECIDED SUCCESS.

Critics Commend Her Camille. De Koven and Smith's New Operetta, "Rob Roy," Well Received by the Critics of New York.

Miss Olga Nethersole, the young actress who has recently come from Europe to have a verdict of approval endorsed in the New World, has been eminently successful. Her first play, "The Transgressor," was not liked, but her playing of the principal role received strong commendation. Then Miss Nethersole appeared as Camille, "the hectic heroine," of Dumas, as one paper had it, and her success was extraordinary. One critic said of her performance that it dispelled all doubt of her genius, and added: "Miss Nethersole expressed the emotions of this Parisian wanton, and she did it as artfully, pathetically, and electrifying as Sarah Bernhardt. This praise must be stinted by the reminder that, in bestowing it, only one of Bernhardt's many and various roles is brought into comparison. But it is a sufficient cause for congratulation that there has come forth an English actress fit to stand in the shoes of a single one of Bernhardt's characters."

OLGA NETHERSOLE.

Another says that her Camille had so much beauty, pathos, truth and human nature in it that it fairly proved its title to be ranked with the few really great Camilles of the present day—those of Modjeska, Duse and Sarah Bernhardt.

One of the analysts, speaking of the affluence of Miss Nethersole's acting, says that it causes a thrill of enthusiasm to see such fine gifts poured out with such reckless prodigality. He concludes by saying that when "she has learned to subordinate herself to the play, Miss Nethersole will, I am sure, bear out Labouchere's prediction that she could 'play any part, all parts.'"

Altogether, Miss Nethersole has reason to be proud of the reception accorded her by American critics and audiences. She is easily first of the foreign dramatic stars seen in the New York play houses this season, and her youth, beauty and genius are cited together in the commendation she has won, to enhance the value of the praise showered upon her.

"Rob Roy," De Koven and Smith's operetta that was produced in Herald Square Theatre the last week in October, promises to rival, if it does not exceed, the popularity of "Robin Hood," their earlier production. The general verdict is fairly summed up by the Post critic, who says: The score of "Rob Roy" is probably the best of Mr. De Koven's works so far, which means that it is destined to win great popularity. Like Strauss he has the faculty of writing music which a miscellaneous audience is capable of appreciating at once and which at the same time contains elements and details that interest musicians and create a desire to hear it again. We have heard of one man who went to see "Robin Hood" 103 times! That man will probably like "Rob Roy" better still, for it is an advance on the composer's previous scores in those elements which go deepest, and which best stand the test of repetition—harmonic subtleties and piquant details of orchestration—things not usually noticed at first hearing, especially when the vocal parts are so melodious and idiomatic as in Mr. De Koven's scores. There are half a dozen numbers in "Rob Roy" which alone would insure its success, as they are popular in the best sense of the word. That the score is not free from reminiscences and commonplaces goes without saying—what operetta score is? But even in these cases the music is always appropriate to the situation, showing a true dramatic instinct.

It is gratifying to know that there is a young American composer who can extort such praise from the Post. A long and successful run seems assured for the new production, as the company is joined with the operetta in the favorable verdict of press and audience.

Solomon's Judgment Failed.

A Georgia magistrate was perplexed by the conflicting claims of two women for a baby, each contending that she was the mother of it. The Judge remembered Solomon, and, drawing a bowie knife from his boot, declared he would give half to each. The women were shocked, but had no doubt of the authority and purpose of the Judge to make the proposed compromise. "Don't do that," they both screamed in unison, "you can keep it yourself!"

AN AUTUMNAL DREAM.

When the maple turns to crimson
And the sassafras to gold;
When the gentian's in the meadow
And the asters on the wold;
When the moon is lapped in vapor,
And the night is frosty cold;

When the chestnut burrs are opened
And the acorns drop like hail,
And the drowsy air is startled
With the thumping of the flail—
With the drumming of the partridge
And the whistle of the quail.

Through the rustling woods I wander,
Through the jewels of the year,
From the yellow uplands calling,
Seeking her that still is dear;
She is near me in the autumn,
She, the beautiful, is near.

HUNTING SEA LIONS.

Herds of Them Driven to the Slaughtering Grounds.

At the close of the fur-seal-killing season, the natives proceed to lay in th ir winter's supply of meat, says a writer in St. Nicholas. A number of picked m n go to Northeast Point, steal down to the shore in the dead of night and crawl at the water's edge until a line of men is disposed between the sleeping herd and the water. At a given signal the men all spring to their feet, yell, discharge pistols and terribly frighten the sleeping sea lions. Those that lie with their heads towards the water plunge forward and quickly disappear, but those headed landward naturally enough start forward away from the uproar. Being continually urged on, they soon find themselves nearly inland, with all chance of escape cut off.

The groups of from 20 to 50 caught thus each night are driven on to the level ground and held until from three to five hundred have been taken, when the grand drive begins. Then the whole herd is actually driven ten miles overland to the village. According to the condition of the weather, the drive occupies from six days to three weeks, but in the end every sea lion who does not die of heat and exhaustion on the road actually carries his own carcass to market.

This animal yields about the same class of products as does the walrus, and its flesh forms the principal food of all the natives of the fur-sealed islands. The skin is thickly covered with coarse, stiff hair of brownish-yellow color, but it is destitute of "fur," and hence is of no value in our market.

Although cowardly in their disposition towards man, the males are among themselves the fiercest fighters in the world. It is hard to obtain an old specimen whose neck is not crisscrossed all over by long, deep gashes, or old scars, made by the powerful teeth of jealous rivals.

TRIFLES THAT MAKE HISTORY.

Columbus's Fate Said to Have Hung on a Game of Chess.

It is a Spanish tradition that the fate of Columbus once hung on a game of chess, says the New York Ledger.

For years the schemer had haunted the Spanish court trying to interest some one in his cause, but at last, despairing, he determined to leave and go to France. The night before his intended departure he sought an audience of the Queen to communicate his intention and to take his leave. The Queen asked him to wait while she made one more effort to interest the King, and left the room for that purpose.

She found Ferdinand enga.ed in a game of chess, and disturbing him by her entrance, and thus causing him to lose a piece, he let fly a volley of oaths at seamen generally and at Columbus in particular, and then informed Isabella that the result of her petition would depend on the result of the game. It grew worse, and things looked blue for the discoverer of America, but Isabella, overlooking the board, whispered to his Majesty a suggestion as to a move that could be made; the King adopted the suggestion and America was saved.

It is a queer story, but no stranger than the one told in Rome at the time the divorce of Henry VIII was under discussion that the negotiations were broken off by the Earl of Wiltshire's dog. This unmannerly cur had followed his master into the court, and when the Pontiff, at the close of the audience, put out his foot to be kissed by the earl, the dog bit it and so angered the Pope and horrified the court that the negotiations were suspended.

The story may be true or false, but in either case is an excellent demonstration of the value of the trifle, when the trifle occurs in the life of an exalted personage, and gives point to the remark made by Paschal along the same line, that if the nose of Cleopatra had been an inch longer or shorter the course of the world's history might have been materially changed.

A DOMESTIC'S LUCK.

All the orchards flushed with rose pink banners of bloom, all the meadows purpled with violets, and yet the soul of Mrs. Levinbolt, in the great cream colored farm house on the top of the hill, was sore disquieted within her.

"It always happens at spring cleaning," said she despairingly. "Either a lot of company comes, just as you've got the carpets up and the bedsteads down, or else your help clears off and leaves you."

"Don't fret, mother," said Sam, "I'll help you. I'm a master hand at whitewashing, and I guess I could scrub if you'd give me a brush."

Mrs. Levinbolt laughed in spite of her vexation at the idea of Sam, the fine gentleman of the family, who was studying for the ministry, scrubbing floors. But Sam himself looked perfectly serious.

"Why not I as well as you, mother? I'm strong."

"Yes, but—hush! Who is that coming?"

A blue eyed girl was advancing up the garden path, with the springy, elastic footfall peculiar to those who have been accustomed to plenty of outdoor exercise. She smiled frankly up into the suspicious face of the farmer's wife.

"Might I have a drink of water, please?" she said.

"Certainly," said Sam at once. "I'll draw some fresh for you of the well."

"Who are you?" questioned his mother rather more warily.

"My name is Jessie Maclane," she answered simply, "and I'm a stranger in this country. I came from Aberdeenshire, in Scotland."

"You'd better have stayed there, I'm thinking," said Mrs. Levinbolt dryly.

"And that's what I've thought more than once myself," said the young girl, with a pleasant laugh. "But here I am, you see. I came out to live with a lady, and when I got to the place in Connecticut she'd gone West, and I was alone in a strange country."

"What are you going to do?"

"I am looking for work," said Jessie, simply. "I was brought up on a farm, and I'm handy and willing. Do you know of any place they're wanting a lass?"

And the upshot of the matter was that Mrs. Levinbolt took the Scotch lassie—on trial, as it were.

Jessie proved to be the best and quickest and most sunny tempered of serving damsels; clean enough in her dairy to suit even Mrs. Levinbolt, and full of bright, good humor.

The year crept round, crowned with roses, garlanded with autumn leaves and fringed with the dazzling ermine of many a snowfall, and once more the spring returned, and Mrs. Levinbolt, true to the calendar, tore up her carpets and deluged every room in cleansing suds and steam. And Jessie Maclane was with her still.

The housekeeping was in mid-career; the carpets were on the line and Jessie was on a ladder doing a little amateur paper hanging, while Mrs. Levinbolt polished the inside of the keeping room windows, when the carriage from the depot rolled up to the door.

"Company!" gasped Mrs. Levinbolt. "It always happens so."

Quick as thought Jessie descended from her aerial elevation, and scudded into the bedroom for Mrs. Levinbolt's cap and a ruffled apron.

"It's a young lady in a brown silk traveling suit," whispered breathless Jessie.

Mrs. Levinbolt groaned.

"It's my cousin, Miles Henshaw's daughter Sybilla, come to make a visit," she sighed, adding in spirit—"Why don't folks wait until they are invited?"

But, too hospitable openly to express her thoughts, she advanced to greet the new comer.

Miss Sybilla Henshaw was from the city, neither quite so young nor so pretty as she had once been, but amazingly well preserved. She had come out into the country ostensibly to visit her cousin Jerusha, but in reality to marry Sam.

Jessie's heart sank within her at the sight of Miss Henshaw's silks and laces, and chains and bracelets.

But Sybilla's eyes were keen enough to discern a possible rival in the blooming Scotch girl, and she resolved to get her out of the way.

When Sam Levinbolt came in to supper, the third day after Miss Henshaw's arrival, he found Jessie crying, his mother amazed and doubtful and Sybilla wrathful.

"Of course she has taken it!" cried Sybilla. "Who else would touch my portmonnaie? And it was on my dressing bureau this morning when she went in to make the beds, and now it is gone. I tell you, cousin Jerusha, she is a thief, and the sooner you get her out of the house the better."

"Stop, Sybilla," said Sam, courteously, but very firmly. "No one calls Jessie a thief in my hearing. Mother, you should know better than that."

"But," stammered Mrs. Levinbolt, "if Sybilla's pocketbook is really gone——"

Sybilla drew out her pocket handkerchief to wipe away an imaginary tear of injured innocence, and with it tumbled out something on the floor. Sam stooped and picked it up, handing it with a bow to his cousin.

"Your pocketbook, Sybilla."

Miss Henshaw turned scarlet and bit her lip.

"How very careless of me," she said in a choked voice. "I must have put it there myself and forgotten all about it."

That evening in the purple dusk, after Miss Henshaw had gone upstairs to pack her trunk—for the spring campaign had evidently proved a failure—Jessie Maclane came to where Mrs. Levinbolt was sitting, planning whether she should begin the garret next day or the best parlor.

"Mrs. Levinbolt," said the girl simply, "I have come to tell you that——"

"Not that you are going, and in the very midst of the house cleaning!" cried Mrs. Levinbolt.

"No," said Jessie, coloring like a rose. "If you like I will stay at the farm always, for Mr. Sam has asked me to marry him."

And Jessie Maclane cried and laughed in the same breath.—Boston Globe.

James G. Blaine, the Son.

James G. Blaine is probably one of the most knowing college students in this country. He has been thrashed in half a dozen different cities, has passed through a sensational divorce suit, and has crowded as much experience into his twenty-eight or thirty years of life as most men who have passed considerably beyond his age. His appearance on the football field as a player along with ten other students at the University of Virginia seems somewhat odd. His talent for obtaining publicity is as vigorous as ever, and he is already a noted figure in this new field. His exploits during the early part of the season were such that the attention of referees and umpires was turned toward him continually, and he was put out of two games for brutality and slugging. Young Blaine has developed in a remarkable way, physically, and from the puny, cigarette-smoking youth of ten years ago, has become broad, fat, and of powerful build. He recently got out of training by burning the midnight oil, and in the game which his college—the University of Virginia—played with Pennsylvania, he was taken out at the last moment and another player substituted. Mr. Blaine is taking a law course, but football is the absorbing interest of his life at the present moment.

Small Checks, Indeed.

County Treasurer Albert M. Darling of Suffolk county has in his possession five checks which amount in the aggregate to exactly thirteen cents. These checks Mr. Darling is about to have framed. They are all made out by W. N. Dykman as receiver of the Commercial Bank of Brooklyn and are drawn on the Brooklyn Trust Company. Mr. Darling did business with the Commercial Bank of Brooklyn. He afterward, as he thought, closed his account with them. When the bank failed, over a year ago, he received notice that there was a balance of thirteen cents due him. Shortly afterward he received a dividend of four cents in the shape of a check from the receiver, and at intervals has received checks until he received as the last payment a check for one cent, making a total payment to him of thirteen cents. The postage on the last remittance was just twice the amount of the check enclosed.

"Good-Bye SALE?"

That is what we call it as we are going to say Good-Bye to about fifteen thousand dollars worth of new seasonable dry goods, underwear, hosiery, dress goods and coats that we have just bought at half the usual prices. It has not been a case of the early bird catching the worm this season. Retailers who bought their stock early got caught, paid high prices as all Fall and Winter goods are from 30 to 50 per cent lower now than they were two months ago. Late buyers reap the benefit. It's a question with manufacturers and jobbers of selling their goods to cash buyers, regardless of profit and cost, and we do the same. It's anything to sell goods and we sell them lower than ever before. All we ask is an inspection of the goods and prices and you will be convinced that you can make one dollar do the work of two at

REPUBLICAN VICTORY

Overwhelming Majorities Throughout the Nation.

Morton Defeats Hill in New York by 140,000 Plurality—Chairman Wilson of West Virginia Fails To Be Re-elected—Pennsylvania and Ohio Turn Up Bigger Republican Majorities Than Ever—Little Comfort for Democrats North or South.

New York, Nov. 7.—The elections yesterday show overwhelming republican gains throughout the country. In New York, Morton is elected governor by about 140,000 plurality. The republicans will control both branches of the legislature. They have gained largely in their congressional delegation, not more than five or six democrats at most having been elected. In the city of New York Senator Hill has the astonishingly small plurality of 2,549, while in Kings county Mr. Morton has reversed the plurality of 16,000 given to Mr. Flower and has put that plurality to his own credit, making a republican gain of 32,000. The entire republican ticket is elected in Kings.

Pennsylvania has gone republican by an overwhelming majority.

The house of representatives will contain a republican majority. Some of the old members defeated are Mr. Wilson, the author of the now celebrated Wilson bill, and Mr. Springer of Illinois.

In Col. Breckinridge's congress district in Kentucky, Owens, the man who beat Breckinridge after a sensational campaign, is said to have been beaten by from 1,000 to 2,000. Breckinridge treachery is said to have caused it.

In Cleveland, where Tom Johnson, the great free trader conducted a campaign from ward to ward and drew thousands to his meetings, he is defeated, according to his own estimate, by from 4,000 to 5,000.

Connecticut is republican by from 5,000 to 10,000, and the congress delegation is solidly republican.

The Tillmanites swept everything before them in South Carolina. Tillman will go to the United States Senate, and the congress delegation will be solidly democratic.

Iowa republicans elected the entire state ticket by 50,000 plurality, with the exception of two judges of the supreme court. The democrats saved one of the eleven congressmen.

Blood-to-the-bridles Waite, the populist governor of Colorado, who was a candidate for re-election, was buried under a republican plurality of 20,000.

Louisiana has probably sent a solid democratic delegation to congress, the planters' bolt having failed in the effort to carry the state.

New York 140,000 for Morton.

New York, Nov. 7.—The Empire state was swept by the greatest tidal wave in its political history. Hon. Levi P. Morton has been elected governor by a plurality very close to 150,000. The congressional delegation has been changed from 19 democrats and 15 republicans to 29 republicans and 5 democrats. The state assembly will stand 104 republicans to 24 democrats. The republican gains have been greater in the democratic strongholds in the cities than in the country districts, but in no county and in no town has the democracy held its own. New York city which was counted on for from 60,000 to 70,000 for Hill, gave him only 2,800 plurality over Morton. William L. Strong, republican and citizen's candidate for mayor, is elected by 42,600 over Hugh J. Grant, Tammany's candidate. John W. Goff, of Lexow committe fame, is elected recorder, and the entire reform city ticket wins by handsome majorities. Brooklyn, which gave Grover Cleveland 30,000 in 1892, was carried by Morton by 16,500. Five New York city democratic congressmen were defeated by republicans, and the result was known early in the evening. The result on constitutional amendments will not be known positively for a day, but the returns received indicate that all the amendments have been carried, including the new apportionment, which Senator Hill declared will retire the democratic party for twenty years.

Pennsylvania Is All One Way.

Philadelphia, Nov. 7.—Pennsylvania was borne on the topmost crest of the republican tidal wave and leads the van of the republican majorities with a plurality of 206,000 for Hastings for governor. Out of sixty counties heard from all but one show large republican gains, and, as there are still seven counties to be heard from, Hasting's majority will probably be increased. In the congressional delegation from Pennsylvania, the democrats in the last house had ten members. They have lost eight congressmen, held one, and one is in doubt, with the probability of the democrats winning. In both the senate and house of the state legislature the republicans have made unprecedented gains and the democratic minority will be little more than a shadow. In this city the republicans elected every one of their county officers with big gains over any previous vote.

New Jersey Joins the Procession.

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 7.—The republicans have elected six state senators and forty-seven assemblymen. The republicans have certainly elected five out of the eight congressmen, a gain of three. Later returns may give them still another congressman. Both houses of the legislature will be overwhelmingly republican. McPherson will be succeeded in the United States senate by a republican, probably Gen. Sewell. The returns indicate that the following congressmen have been elected in this state: First district, R. C. Loudenslager, rep.; 2d, John J. Gardner, rep.; 3d, Benjamin F. Robell, rep.; 4th, Mahlon Pitney, rep.; 5th, James F. Stewart, rep.; 6th, R. Wayne Parker, rep.; 7th, Edwin A. Stevens, dem.; 8th, Charles Newell Fowler, rep.

Massachusetts Safely Republican.

Boson, Nov. 7.—The state goes republican, Greenhalge making a clean sweep, with increased pluralities over last year, although with a somewhat smaller vote, in part accounted for by the storm and snow-blocked roads. The seventh congressional district gives W. E. Barrett, rep., 6,812 plurality over S. K. Hamilton, dem. John F. Fitzgerald, dem., is elected to congress in the ninth district. The republicans carry the other 12 districts. One city and 21 towns in the third congressional district give Walker, rep., for congress, 12,528; Haggerty, dem., 6,935.

Connecticut Elects Coffin Governor.

New Haven, Nov. 7.—It is known that the republicans have carried the state on their state ticket by from 5,000 to 10,000. Coffin is elected governor. Besides this they have gained three congressmen—Henry in the 1st district, Sperry in the 2d, and Hill in the 4th. Russell in the 3d was safe beyond peradventure. This makes the entire delegation republican.

Illinois.

Chicago, Nov. 7.—The returns are coming in slowly, owing to the heavy vote which was polled and no one can give absolutely correct estimates on the result of the election in this state but everything points to a complete victory for the republican forces, a largely increased vote for the populists with little hope for the democrats anywhere. It is now certain that the republican state ticket is elected by a big majority; that the republicans have elected a majority of the Cook county commissioners and that they will have a majority in the state assembly. They have also elected a number of congressmen if not most of them. The republicans with a few exceptions say they have won signal victories everywhere by increased majorities. Wulff, republican candidate for treasurer, it is claimed, will win in the state by at least 20,000 majority. The populists polled a vote in Cook county of 25,000 and it is to them many democrats are inclined to attribute their defeat. It is certain that nearly all this vote was taken from the democratic party.

Wisconsin.

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 7.—The republicans of Wisconsin have carried the state by over 15,000 plurality for Governor Upham and their state ticket. D. C. Wall, chairman of the democratic state central committee has just admitted this and has given up all hopes. The republicans have made gains in almost every voting precinct while the demorcats have lost votes so that they are down to the populistic votes in the cities. The county of Milwaukee (including the city) will give a republican plurality of from 7,000 to 8,000 and the election of Otjen, republican candidate for congress in the 4th district is probable. The republicans claim the election of eight, and probably nine, congressmen.

Virginia.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 7.—The returns thus far received from all parts of the state indicate that the democrats have carried every district. The 6th is the most doubtful but the democrats claim that Otey is elected. In the 2d and 4th districts the democratic majorities will be very small. The Walton election law, used for the first time, seems to have given perfect satisfaction to everybody but the populists, who are inclined to blame the new law for their defeat. The fight throughout the state has been between the democrats and republicans, the populists not being in the battle at all.

Maryland.

Baltimore, Nov. 7.—Maryland's solid democratic front has been broken and the republicans have made unprecedented gains in every direction. It is certain that three republican congressmen have been elected—Baker in the 2d district, Coffin in the 5th and Wellington in the 6th. The democrats carried the 3d and 4th districts with Rusk and Cowen, but by very largely reduced pluralities. The 1st district is still in doubt.

Michigan.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 7.—Careful compilation of reports received by both state committees indicate the election of John T. Rich, rep., for governor over S. O. Fisher, dem., by from 30,000 to 50,000. The whole republican state ticket is elected. There is a solid republican delegation to congress, and Wayne county, in which Detroit is located, is republican on all offices, except treasurer.

Delaware.

Wilmington, Del., Nov. 7.—The Delaware republicans have carried Newcastle and Sussex counties, electing the governor and congressman and giving the republicans a majority on joint ballot in the general assembly insuring a republican United States senator. Kent county has probably gone democratic, which would give the democrats the state senate and block much desired legislation.

Iowa.

Des Moines, Ia., Nov. 7.—Iowa elects the entire republican state ticket by 50,000, with the exception of Judge Granger and B. I. Sallinger for the supreme court, whose opponents were endorsed by the populists. The republicans elect ten congressmen, and the result in the second district is in doubt with the chances in favor of Walter I. Hayes, democrat, by a small plurality.

West Virginia.

Charlestown, W. Va., Nov. 7.—Dayton, rep., has been elected to congress from this district, defeating W. L. Wilson. Miller has also defeated Harvey in the fourth district, and the republican committee claims all four congressmen. The indications are that a republican legislature has been elected. This will give the republicans a senator in place of Camden, democrat.

Kentucky.

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 7.—The republicans claim the election of three republican congressmen in Kentucky, the indications being that they have carried the 5th, 7th and 11th districts. Denny, it is conceded, has a safe majority over Owens in the Ashland district, Breckinridge's old district. His friends say he will win by from 2,000 to 3,000.

Minnesota.

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 7.—Returns so far received indicate that the democrats are losing to both republican and populist candidates for governor. There is no doubt of the election of Nelson, rep., for governor, by at least 20,000 plurality.

white republicans, who are strong in the district, went for Tate. In the seventh Judge Madox has had a very hard fight. His opponent was Dr. W. H. Felton, the old-time independent, who has cut such a sensational figure in Georgia politics in recent years. Moses has won nicely in the fourth; he had something like a thousand majority to overcome and has gained all over the district. The other close district was the tenth. The democrats have rolled up over 12,000 majority in the city of Augusta and the majority against Watson, the populist leader, is therefore about 8,000. Two years ago Black had 5,000 majority and the populists charged all kinds of fraud. They claim that the frauds this year are more flagrant than ever.

California.

San Francisco, Nov. 7.—Chairman Gould, of the democratic state central committee, in answer to what the outlook was for the democratic candidate for governor, said:

"Budd, has to the best of my judgment carried San Francisco by 10,000 majority. As to the state, it has gone for the democratic standard bearer. We will get three, possibly five, of the seven congressmen. The state senate will be democratic and there will not be a majority of any party in the assembly. The populists elect a number of assemblymen. To the best of my judgment there will be no vote for any one person on a joint ballot and no party will get a clear majority."

Tennessee.

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 7.—The complexion of the official rooster of Tennessee is not changed by the elections Peter Turney, dem., retains the gubernatorial chair, a delegation of ten democrats and two republicans will go to congress and a democratic legislature will return Isham G. Harris to the senate. But the democratic majorities will be the smallest ever known in the life of that party. Two years ago Peter Turney was elected governor by a plurality of 27,000. This is reduced to a plurality of 7,000.

Ohio.

Columbus, O., Nov. 7.—It is evident that the republicans have carried Ohio by a greater plurality than was given McKinley last year. That plurality was 80,995. The 100,000 mark will probably be reached and passed. While the vote on congressmen may not follow the head of the ticket closely, this result indicates that the republicans will at least carry all the congressional districts they claimed—16 out of 21—and probably more.

Texas.

Galveston, Nov. 7.—Texas voted for a governor and other state officers, a legislature which will chose a United States senator, and thirteen representatives in congress.

The News claims the usual democratic majority for state officers and the legislature, also the election of democratic congressmen in all the districts with the possible exception of the 9th and 10th districts.

Georgia.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 7.—Georgia will send a solid democratic delegation to congress. All of the doubtful districts have gone into the democratic column. The closest contest seems to be in the ninth district, where Carter Tate, dem., will have about 1,000 majority. The district went populist in the gubernatorial election but the Mississippi.

Jackson, Miss., Nov. 7.—Returns from all congressional districts in the state indicate the election of the seven democratic congressmen by safe majorities There was a populist nominee in every district and in four districts prohibitionists had nomineees. In the other three the prohibitionists endorsed the populists.

Florida.

Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 7.—The Florida Citizen estimates that one-half of the vote has been cast. In the 2d congressional district Cooper, dem., is reelected. The populist vote is small, possibly under 1,000. In the 1st district Sparkman is elected by a large majority. McKinnon, pop., will receive about 1,500 votes.

Kansas.

Topeka, Kan., Nov. 7.—Returns indicate the election of Morrill for governor and the entire republican state ticket. The republicans probably carry all but two congressional districts. The legislature will probably be republican on joint ballot.

South Dakota.

Pierre, S. D., Nov. 7.—The republican ticket, including two congressmen-at-large, is elected by not less than 12,000 plurality. Returns from legislative districts indicate that the legislature will be safely two-thirds republican.

North Carolina.

Wilmington, N. C., Nov. 7.—It is estimated that the democrats have elected state and judicial tickets, seven of the nine congressmen, with one district in doubt, and that democrats will have a small majority in the legislature on joint ballot.

Washington.

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 7.—The indications are that the republican state ticket is elected by 6,000 plurality. The republicans claim 14 majority on joint ballot in the legislature.

Louisiana.

New Orleans, Nov. 7.—Returns indicate the election of five, and possibly six, democratic congressmen in this state.

Idaho.

Boise City, Idaho, Nov. 7.—Indications favor the election of the republican state ticket and the congressman.

Arkansas.

Little Rock, Ark., Nov. 7.—The indications are that the democrats elect all congressmen.

Criticism of the Late Czar.

Vienna, Nov. 7.—Dr. Lewskowski, the Polish deputy, who tried in the lower house to criticise the reign of Alexander III., has received numerous congratulations from Galicia. Most of the senders are workingmen, students and women. The most influential Polish newspapers condemn his conduct. Dr. Wekerle, Hungarian premier, refrained from proposing a resolution of condolence in the reichstag, as he feared the protest of the national independence pary.

A California Bride.

San Francisco, Nov. 7.—A. J. Mountney Jepson, the explorer and author, who went into Africa with Henry M. Stanley and found Emin Pasha, will come to California to be married. In a few weeks the wedding of Mr. Jepson and Miss Anna Head, daughter of A. R. Head, the well-known millionaire mining man of this city, will be celebrated.

FIGHTING FOR LIFE.

A Suffering Woman Testifies.

Mrs. Henrietta Burton, of Janvier, N. J., writes: For a long time I suffered from a disordered stomach. My appetite was gone and what little I ate distressed me terribly. My health failed rapidly. I became very weak and feared I should never be well. After reading your "Guide to Health," I was encouraged to try Munyon's Dyspepsia Cure. Its action was so prompt that I soon felt like a new woman, and am now completely cured."

MUNYON'S STOMACH AND DYSPEPSIA CURE cures all forms of indigestion and stomach troubles such as constipation, rising of food, distress after eating, bloating of the stomach, palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath, and all affections of the heart caused by indigestion. It soothes, heals and invigorates stomachs that have been weakened by over-eating, or where the lining of the stomach has been impaired by physic and injurious medicines. Price 25 cents.

Munyon's Homœopathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

TAMMANY SWAMPED

Great Political Upheaval in New York City.

Union Municipal Ticket Elected by an Overwhelming Majority—Sixty Thousand People Unable To Vote—Dissatisfaction with the Ballot Law—What Dr. Parkhurst Says.

New York, Nov. 7.—The election was remarkable for the general quietude that prevailed in the city despite the intense party feeling that ran with great fierceness in every district from the Battery to Spuyten Duyvil. With the exception of a few ordinary encounters there was no happenings that could be called riotous in any section. A tour of the districts by a close observer resulted in no discoveries that were more striking than the extraordinary serious, determined mood the average voter seemed to be in. Men who never dream of taking a breakfast before 8 o'clock in the morning were everywhere at the polls long before they were legally open for voters. They stood in the chilly air reading their papers, calmly waiting till the time came for business to begin. In the big districts on the west side there were long lines of men who stood for hours without being able to get anywhere near the polls till two or three hours after they had got a place in the single files on the sidewalk. At one time in some of the brown stone districts where the republican strength is noted many of the voters became suspicious as to the real cause of the slow movement ahead of them and at the ballot boxes, and the feeling grew strong that the delay was caused by the "malicious inactivity" of their enemies. In many instances there was some basis for this view of the situation and when it became apparent to the inspectors and the watchers that too much time was being taken up by the "slow coaches" there was a cry "get a move on you" and things became more rustling.

In the 21st assembly district there was much embarrassment by long delays in some of the election districts, but it was in large part due to the inefficiency of the inspectors and the clerks as well as the nervousness and rattled condition of some of the voters when they got a bigger pile of ballots than they knew how to handle with proper care. They lost time in getting them in order in the boxes, and it was really laughable to see men who never lose their nerve in a Wall street panic emerge from the boxes with the ballots in a tangle and looking as if they had lost their senses entirely. The release from the misery of the moment was always a speedy return to the box after having got advice from many quarters, official and otherwise.

However, there was really in many districts more than amusement for the "lookers on in Venice." There was actual disfranchisement in hundreds of cases in various districts. Unfortunate fellows, who because of their illiteracy, and who were allowed no guide posts behind the screens, were unable to make ballot ends meet legally and had to give up the job finally, were very many. But they were not the only men who had gone to the "trouble" of being registered and lost their vote.

The cause of it all was unquestionably the lack of booths. It is true that the law says there has to be a booth for every 50 voters, and that in several districts extra booths were quickly put in place the night before election day; but all that did not altar the fact that hundreds of men in the city stood in line and had finally to see the polls close in their faces before they could reach the ballot boxes. Had there been a large number in any one election district delayed in line for hours before the fatal 4 o'clock came along there would have been a riot in many quarters. As it is, it is generally believed that taking all the election districts in a bunch the disfranchisement because of the time taken by "slow coaches" in fixing their ballots and the lack of the necessary number of booths to accommodate the tremendous outpouring of voters, numbered at least 60,000. The inspectors in some of the districts were in full sympathy with the men far back in line when the hands of the clock neared the hour of 4, but they assert that they were not to blame, that the "infernal ballot system" was at the bottom of the whole lamenable business and the booths had little to do with the condition of affairs in certain quarters.

It was evident as the counting of votes began that the result was an overwhelming defeat for Tammany Hall.

Hugh J. Grant entered the office of Police Commissioner Murray at police headquarters at 8 p. m.. Mayor-elect Strong, with ex-Collector Joel B. Ehrhart and a number of republicans, were present. Ex-Mayor Grant, advancing toward the mayor-elect, extended his hand, which Mr. Strong grasped heartily, Mr Grant said:

"I wish to congratulate you, Mr. Strong, and wish you all possible success as mayor of New York city. I felt it my duty to tell you this."

Mr. Strong seemed very much gratified with Mr. Grant's graceful act, and replied:

"I thank you, sir, very much."

Mr. Grant then shook hands with all those present and withdrew.

Dr. Parkhurst came into the committee of seventy headquarters and was immediately surrounded and congratulated by those present. Dr. Parkhurst said: "This victory signifies first that the people are getting their eyes open and that their consciences are awake. In the second place that although our American institutions were put to a severe test the better element has prevailed and good municipal government is assured. Good municipal government means that the country will maintain itself. That is all there is of it."

All the election districts in New York city give Morton, 124,373; Hill, 127,177; Wheeler, 8,749.

The total vote for lieutenant-governor in this city is Lockwood, dem., 129,427; Saxton, rep., 119,600.

The total vote for mayor in this city is: Grant, dem., 106,052; Strong, rep., 148,669.

The whole reform city ticket is elected by majorities of from 25,000 to 45,000. Strong and Goff reaching the latter figure. Tamsen has about 30,000 for sheriff.

CLEVELAND GETS THE NEWS.

Unusual Interest at Washington in the Result.

Washington, Nov. 7.—Unusual interest in the returns was manifested in Washington, great crowds gathering around the United Press office in the Washington Post building, where the results were displayed, and in all the club rooms and places of public resort where bulletins were received. The demonstrations of enthusiasm were remarkable considering the fact that all the news was unfavorable to the party in power. On the streets every bulletin indicating democratic defeats provoked prolonged cheering and in front of the Post building, where a crowd of 5,000 assembled, the applause was almost continuous after 8 o'clock. Morton's victory and Tammany's downfall in New York seemed to be particularly pleasing to the people. At the white house Secretaries Gresham, Carlisle, Smith, Morton and Herbert listened to the bulletins received by Private Secretary Thurber, and occasionally a telephone message was sent to President Cleveland, who had gone out to his country home at 5 o'clock. The definite figures showing Hill's overwhelming overthrow were among the first messages sent to the president and all obtainable estimates from Wilson's disrict were promptly transmitted to him. No visitors were admitted to the white house except cabinet officers.

Severe Criticism.

New York, Nov. 7.—The Times says: "David B. Hill has come late to his personal reckoning with the independent democrats of New York. Time after time, in disheartening succession, they have witnessed the triumph of his system of party politics. Year after year they have seen his fortunes advanced in an almost unbroken series of successes. And they have observed with dismay that his powers of intellect and his popularity, keeping step with his rise in politics and expanding with his opportunities, made him continually more formidable. If Senator Hill would know the causes of his defeat let him ask the friends who forced his nomination at Saratoga, the Sheehans and the Murphys and the others whose names for some nine years have crowded our political annals. They have been his counselors, his tusted men-at-arms. They have been the chosen instruments to execute in caucus and convenion the plans his busy mind contrived. They have been favored and pushed to the fore as though they were in all the New York democracy the only persons competent for the tasks and deserving of the rewards of politics; while democrats holding different views, some of them very able and respectable men, indeed, though tainted with Clevelandism, have been contemptuously excluded from all participation in the constructive work of the party. Surely these men can tell Mr. Hill what was the matter with him yesterday. They know the state and the party. Let them send for their captains of tens and fifties and hold the autopsy."

What Morton Says.

Ellerslie, Rhinecliffe, N. Y., Nov. 7.—In response to repeated requests for a word on the result of the election which came from many sources, Mr. Morton made the following reply through the United Press:

"I accept the result of the election as the protests of the people of the empire state against false theories and practices in federal and state government and the condemnation of official corruption in New York city. I am profoundly sensible of the high honor conferred upon me by the citizens of this great state and of the grave responsibilities which will devolve upon me as the result of their action."

Hundreds of personal telegrams came to Rhinecliff, where they were telephoned to Mr. Morton, the private wire being kept hot with the returns.

Murdered over Politics.

Cranston Station, N. Y., Nov. 7.—A murder was committed at about midnight near Garrison's, a village on the east side of the river, a few miles south of Cold Spring. John and Benjamin Gilbert, brothers, who reside with their mother, became involved in a drunken quarrel over politics. The quarrel developed into a desperate fight and the mother, while acting as a peacemaker, had one of her thumbs nearly bitten off. John and another brother, James, had been discussing politics. John became aggressive, and James called upon Benjamin for assistance. John thereupon turned on Benjamin and drove him into another room. The door was closed and John fired through one of the panels, killing him instantly. Both men are about forty years of age and unmarried.

A Brutal Case of Hazing.

Hyattsville, Md., Nov. 7.—Hazing by students at the Maryland Agricultural college is liable to result in the death of one of their number, Edwin Gott, jr., son of the secretary of state. Several nights ago a mock court was held, and young Gott was convicted of a crime. A rope was secured, fastened under his arms, and he was suspended from a transom. Gott appeared at breakfast next morning as though nothing had happened, but later in the day was taken ill. He has had several spasms and continues to grow worse. He has been too ill to be removed to his home, at Annapolis, and his condition is extremely dangerous.

Wealthy Baltimorean Dead.

Baltimore, Nov. 7.—Edwin Hyatt, president of the Sherwood Distilling company, dropped dead in his office in the Equitable building. Coroner Hill decided that death was due to heart disease. Mr. Hyatt was 67 years old. He was well-known in social and club circles and was one of Baltimore's wealthy citizens. He was married a year ago to Mrs. Charlotte Ridgeley. His only child, Mrs. Van Eck, is now in Paris.

Killed by a Band of Unknown Men.

Paris, Tex., Nov. 7.—A band of unknown men went to the house of Silas Washington, an Indian, near here and fired volley after volley into it, killing Washington, his wife and mother.

Tom Johnson Beaten.

Cleveland, Nov. 7.—Thomas L. Johnson is defeated by over 3,000.

An Impromptu Tug of War.

Delata, Pa., Nov. 7.—A novel tug of war occurred at the Hotel Auditorium a few nights ago. Constable Prymer has for several years been looking for a Mr. Wilmer Bennington, but he has never succeeded in getting him. Bennington was in the hotel on this night, and the constable endeavored to arrest him, but failed. He called men to his assistance, some of whom helped, and the others assisted Bennington. It then became a question of who could pull the hardest. The Bennington aids tried to drag their man across the line into Maryland, and the constable tried to keep him on this side. The Auditorium is situated on the margin of Pennsylvania. Bennington was pulled across the line, and, although somewhat injured, made his escape into Maryland.

Dilke on France and England.

Paris, Nov. 7.—The Matin publishes an article by Sir Charles Dilke on the relations between Great Britain and France, in which the writer asserts that the difficulty existing between the two nations with regard to New Foundland faces England rather than France, but has not at present reached an acute stage. Sir Charles expresses regret over the warlike attitude assumed by the French government toward Madagascar, which will work injury to the most valuable experiment ever made in native government by a Christian population under the auspices of French, English and American teachers.

Hill Is Silent.

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 7.—Senator Hill was at the executive chamber early receiving the first returns with Gov Flower over several special wires. The others present included Col. Williams, John Boyd Thacher and a number of local democrats. As the returns came in Senator Hill preserved his usual demeanor. Neither Senator Hill nor Gov. Flower would say anything on the result. The latter said he might say something later.

THE MOONSHINER'S DREAM.

BY MATT CRIM.

AUTHOR OF THE ADVENTURES OF A FAIR REBEL.

[Copyright, 1894, by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.]

II.

Gray daylight was shining along the eastern horizon when they at last reached home. Al carried his sweetheart over the threshold into the room. Poor Lizzy sat before the fire with her apron over her face, weeping dully.

"Oh, me; oh, me; Eph, an' Eddy an' now her too."

On the bed the sick child tossed and moaned.

"I wants my pa; I wants my pa."

That gray wintry morning found the revenue officers and their prisoner far on the way to Atlanta, and at nightfall Ephraim White was lodged in jail. It gave him a strange feeling to hear the cell doors close and the key turn in the lock. He sat down on the edge of the hard cot, and put his face in his hands for a moment. It was the first time he fully realized the situation and what it meant to be behind the bolts and bars of a prison. His bold, free spirit quailed a little; he thought of his wife and child with poignant regret, with deep and keen sympathy. Others had been captured and carried away from the mountains, and he had listened to tales of prison-life that set his heart aflame with anger, but he had never believed such a fate would be his.

Who gave that alarm on the mountain? He felt again the thrill it sent through him when it pierced the silence of the night. He remembered just where he was standing, what he was doing. He had raised a blazing splinter from the fire to light his pipe. But the pipe must have shared the fate of the 'still'ry. He ground his teeth as he thought of standing helplessly by while his property was being destroyed.

"I'd like to 'a' tuk a hand agin 'em for a few minutes," he muttered to himself, grimly. "I low they'd 'a ben somethin' like a wreck, too."

How his tameless spirit, bred in the wild fastnesses of the mountains, chafed and raged during the ensuing week. A weight of anxiety hung upon him. He had never before been separate from his wife and child for so long a time. What would Eddy think of the long absence and would they dare explain its meaning to him? Eph writhed and paced the narrow limits of his cell as he, in fancy, saw the pale little fellow, watching for him day after day. He had never been robust and full of healthy animal spirits like other children, and the father's heart had yearned over him from his birth. The idle days lagged drearily to the imprisoned man. But one morning a letter came for him, an ill spelt scrawl that he had to ask a fellow prisoner to read to him. The news it brought was worse than anything he could have imagined. Eddy was sick, sick unto death, and constantly calling for him. If he did not come home the child would certainly die, but if he did the doctor thought there might be a chance of saving his life.

"Oh, du cum, du cum, ef you have tu break jail tu git here," Lizzy prayed in conclusion. "Mebby they'll let you out, if they know he's so sick."

Eph heard the reading with ashen cheeks and wild eyes.

"Go, I reckon I will go ef I have to pull down every brick in this jail house. Eddy sick an' me not there to take keer o' him. He'p me Almighty God, oh he'p me."

It is needless to dwell upon his vain appeals first to the jailer, and then to the federal authorities, for liberty. Their dealings with men had not been of a kind to increase their faith in human nature. Some believed that it was a clumsy scheme to escape, others that if the child was ill, no good could be accomplished by his presence. His promises to return and give himself up were heard with derision and doubt.

"As the Almighty hears me I will come back when he gets better," he said with tears running down his face. "He's the only little un I've got. Lemme see him fore he dies."

But that night he lay down on his prison cot stupid with despair, knowing that he could only get his liberty by breaking jail, and how could he do that? He had a dim remembrance of prison doors opening for the escape of certain Apostles, but that happened only in the days of miracles. It never could happen to a poor sinner like him. Nevertheless, he prayed, and prayed after a different fashion than ever he had worded his petitions before, prayed with a fervor and passion called forth by his extreme need.

It must have been near midnight or perhaps later that it seemed to him he was awakened by some one calling him and he looked up and saw his child with outstretched arms.

"Pa, oh pa."

"Yes, honey. Yes, yes, I'm comin'," he cried, leaping out on the cold floor. But the vision had fled. Nothing more than blank darkness met his gaze. He dashed to the iron grated window. His hands, his arms, his whole body seemed endowed with the strength of ten men.

"Yes, honey, yes; pa's comin'," he muttered again and wrenched the bars like a mad man.

He never could have told himself how they were loosened and torn out, nor how he managed to escape detection as he scaled the high spiked fence. He only knew that presently he stood upon the deserted street, shivering with cold and fumbling in an inner pocket for the money he carried. Two other men escaped that night, one a murderer and the other a noted thief, and in the hue and cry after them, it seemed a small thing to lose a moonshiner.

Eph White was climbing Brandreth's peak the night after his escape, taking great, swift strides, or running where the path was smooth and level. The nearer home, the more frantic his haste. Snow was falling and the wind was bitter cold, but he took off his coat and wiped beads of perspiration from his face. All day his ears had been haunted by that appealing childish cry: "Pa! oh, pa!" for him; the dusky woods were filled with little pattering feet, with tender baby voices. "I'm comin', honey, I'm comin'. Lord! Lemme git thar quick! lemme git thar quick!" he sobbed and prayed as he ran. He lost his hat and flung his coat from him as he leaped the corn rows in the clearing.

"I wants my pa! oh, my pa!"

He heard that feeble, piteous wail as he reached the doorstep. It melted the very core of his heart. The next moment he was in the room at the bedside and had gathered that fragile, fever-stricken little form to his heart. They looked at each other for a moment in utter silence, the child and the man, and then over the child's wan face a faint smile shone and the sobbing breath sunk to a whisper.

"LORD, LEMME GIT THAR QUICK."

"Why, it's pa."

"Yes, honey, ye little un, I'd a come if the whole earth had stood atween us. Lie still an' let pa sing you to sleep."

His broad, rough hand stroked the little face tenderly, he crooned inarticulately while tears trickled unheeded down his face.

"Yes, he's out of danger, an' I'm goin' back to stand my trial. I had to come. Nothin' could a helt me. When I seed him in that dream—it must a been a dream—holdin' out his little arms an' callin' me, I felt that walls couldn't be made thick enough an' iron bars strong enough to keep me from him. An' God Almighty gave me the strength to get free. It wasn't a natchel strength, an' now I'm goin' to be an honest man an' go back. I said I would. I said it all along, and I'm goin' to do it. I've told Eddy all about it, an' he lows I must go, that he'll not cry or whimper while I'm gone. That child has got a wonderful sight of sense. He's more sensible than some men, yes, than a great many men. Yes, I'm goin' to do the fair thing by the Almighty. He done it by me. He let me come home an' He let my child live, an' now I ain't goin' back on my word."

So he returned and surrendered himself. But that honest deed earned its own reward. His sentence was so light that when the green of spring clothed all the mountains and the laurel was in bloom he returned home a free man, and in time to see Al and S'manthy married.

THE END.

Took the Liberty.

On one occasion a decision which Blaine made as speaker of the house greatly enraged a new member, who waited on Pennsylvania avenue after the house adjourned, with some friends declaring that he would "have it out or fight." "You can't," said one of his friends; "nothing you can say will get the better of Blaine's good humor and politeness." "We'll see!" said the enraged man, as he caught sight of the stately figure of the speaker coming slowly toward him. He stepped forward quickly and stood across his path "Mr. Blaine," he said loudly, "I don't know you. I am no acquaintance of yours. But I take the liberty of telling you, sir, that you are a fool and a jackass!" "Indeed!" said Blaine mildly; "now I wonder," regarding him thoughtfully, "what kind of a liberty you would have taken if I had been one of your intimate friends?" and, bowing courteously, he passed on, while the companions of the congressman burst into a shout of laughter.—Detroit Free Press.

Narrow Escape.

Mr. Wilson had read so much about the danger of a certain much-talked-about disease that he had done his best to make Mrs. Wilson and their little daughter Maud chew their grapes and eject the seeds, instead of swallowing them according to the usual custom. Maud found the new method little to her taste, and her father had frequent occasion to reprove her for not minding his instructions. One day the little girl was under the weather, and her mother thought it necessary to administer a dose of medicine, in the shape of two small pellets. These, after the manner of thoughtful parents, she concealed in a spoonful of marmalade, which she then offered to the unsuspicious patient. A moment later she was startled to hear Maud exclaim: "Here, mamma, here are the seeds. Wasn't it lucky? I came awful near swallowing them."—Youth's Companion.

An Attractive Window.

The head of the house had told the new clerk to try his hand at window dressing.

"I want you to make every woman on the street look at that window," he said.

The clerk went at it. He made a curtain of solid black velvet and hung it close inside the plate glass.

"What on earth are you doing?" asked the senior member.

"Making a mirror of the window," said the clerk. "If the women won't look at that they won't look at anything."

The clerk is a member of the firm now.—Brains.

THE OLDEST WOODEN BUILDING.

It Is in Japan and Has Held Treasures for Over 1,200 Years.

Japan possesses what is undoubtedly the oldest wooden structure in the world. It contains the rare treasures of the Mikado, and is situated at Nara, which for some years was the imperial residence. The building is oblong in shape and is built of triangular logs of wood. It rests on piles. The wood used is of native growth and shows extraordinary lasting power, considering the trying climate which it has had to endure for over 1,200 years. A peculiar feature about the logs of which the building is constructed is that in the parts most exposed to the weather the logs are thinner by several inches than in those in a more sheltered position, the wood having gradually worn away.

The treasures which the storehouse contains are of great antiquity and have only been seen by Europeans during the last three years. They consist of rare and beautiful fabrics of Persian, Indian, Chinese and Turkish manufacture, and ancient articles of "vertu" from all parts of the world. Among the objects of interest is the earliest known specimen of Japanese printing. Even to-day many of the words are easily decipherable. The treasures have remained undisturbed in the same building for 1,200 years, and despite the troublous times through which it has been in existence it has never been injured or disturbed.

The Camera Cure for Nervous Cadets.

A naval officer once found he could not teach the youngest men in the naval academy not to squirm and start and jump and plug their ears with their fingers when the heavy cannon were fired. It was of no use to argue with them, pleadings were in vain, and reproofs were useless. It was highly ridiculous to have a lot of young men, whose profession it is to make war when war is needed, act like schoolgirls when the sea artillery was in noisy operation.

Finally the officer hit upon a plan. He had a camera "trained" upon his gallant cadets without their knowing it, and then he ordered broadside after broadside to be fired. The noise was thunderous, and the actions of the cadets were, as usual, most undignified and most unwarlike. A few days later some excellent photographs of the "young-men-afraid-of-a-noise" were hung in prominent positions, to be a perpetual reproach to those who plugged their ears. These photographs did their work. The next time the cannon roared the cadets stood like statues carved from stone, petrified with their fear of the "deadly camera" and its brutal frankness.—Troy Times.

HUDSON COUNTY TOO!

Even That Democratic Hot-Bed Overturned.

THE REPUBLICAN SWEEP COMPLETE

Only Nine Democrats in the Legislature—For the First Time in the History of the State a Solid Republican Delegation Is Elected to Congress.

Not since Horace Greeley was the Democratic candidate for President has New Jersey cast such an enormous Republican vote as she did Tuesday. The entire State went Republican. What little the Democrats saved from the wreck is scarcely worth mentioning. It was expected that after the gerrymander of the Congressional districts by the Republican Legislature last year the Republicans would elect five or probably six of the eight Congressmen. To their own surprise they elected the entire delegation.

It was thought before the complete returns were received that Johnston Cornish and Edwin A. Stevens, Democratic candidates in the Fourth and Seventh districts, respectively, had been successful, but even that grain of comfort was denied to the Democrats. For the first time in the history of the State New Jersey sends a solid Republican delegation to Congress.

The Democrats elected four of the sixty candidates for Assembly. Of these, three are from Hudson county and one from Hunterdon. Seven Senators, one-third of the total membership of the Senate, were voted for, and the Republicans elected all except one of them. They therefore have a majority of eleven in the Senate and fifty-two in the House, making a majority of sixty-three on joint ballot. This is unprecedented. Ex-Senator William J. Sewell counts on being selected to succeed John R. McPherson in the United States Senate, but some leading Republicans say that he may be disappointed. Other candidates are coming to the front. One of the most formidable is Franklin Murphy, the the wealthy varnish manufacturer of Newark, and Chairman of the Republican State Committee. There will be others before the time comes for electing Senator McPherson's successor.

Some of the election officers in Hudson Counts had not finished counting the ballots in time to file them yesterday in the office of the County Clerk. When the office closed at 4 yesterday afternoon returns from 30 of the 129 voting precincts in the county were missing. The Republican County Committee had figures, however, which showed an almost complete reversal of the returns which were given out from Police Headquarters in Jersey City on election night. Up to nearly 2 yesterday morning the returns received at Police Headquarters indicated the election of the entire Democratic ticket by majorities ranging from 2,000 to 3,000. After that hour, up to 3:30 a. m., belated returns from Republican precincts began to arrive and change the result. There was no reason why these returns should have been delayed so long.

Chief of Police Murphy had made arrangements to have the result brought in promptly from all the election precincts in the city, but they failed to reach Police Headquarters for several hours after they had been sent to the Republican headquarters, the Union League Club-house, and the rooms of the Wanser Club. Between 12 and 1 the Republican candidates and their friends who were receiving returns at these places threw up the sponge, shut up shop, and went home. They had no suspicion of the surprise that was in store for them in the morning.

The Republican leaders who were at Police Headquarters when the returns from Republican precincts came in openly declared that they did not expect anything better than the possible election of their candidate for Congress. Chairman Wooley of the Republican County Committee spent the night in Chief Murphy's office, and the returns were taken in there before they were read to the crowd in the police Court room.

The Republican majorities began to pile up so fast that Robert Davis, the Democratic leader in the county, was hastily summoned. He went to Headquarters, but, of course, could do nothing to stem the tide. There is a strong suspicion among Democrats that crooked work was done, and there will probably be an investigation. According to the returns at hand last night, the Republicans had elected a Congressman, County Clerk, and eight of the eleven Assemblymen in Hudson.

The Democrats elected a Register of Deeds, two Coroners, and three Assemblymen. The vote for Freeholders was incomplete, but the returns at hand indicate the election of thirteen Democrats and seven Republicans. The plurality against Michael J. O'Donnell for County Clerk is 219 on the face of the returns, but his friends declare that an error has been made, and that the official returns will elect him.

These are the figures in Hudson County: Congress—Edwin A. Stevens, D., 21,947; Thomas McEwan, Jr., R., 23,043; McEwan's plurality, 1,096. County Clerk—Michael J. O'Donnell, D., 23,940; John G. Fisher, R., 24,159; Fisher's plurality, 219. Register—George B. Fielder, D., 24,615; Frederick Frambach, R., 24,527; Fielder's plurality, 88.

The Congressmen elected are:

Dist.
1. H. C. Loudenschlager, R.
2. John J. Gardner, R.
3. Benjamin F. Howell, R.
4. Mahlon Pitney, R.
5. James F. Stewart, R.
6. R. Wayne Parker, R.
7. Thomas McEwan, R.
8. Charles N. Fowler, R.

THE Y. M. C. A. FAIR.

Continued Progress in the Various Departments.

The various committees having in charge the Y. M. C. A. fair to be held Thanksgiving week, report progress in their different departments. An American country store, the booths representing the nationalities of Japan, France, Sweden, Spain, Germany, Italy and Hungary, and the Russian tea room, are now planned, and, under the corps of skilful managers and assistants, will present a scene of beauty and attractiveness.

The costumes of the attendants and those taking part in the drills representing certain nationalities will be very effective and picturesque.

At the restaurant will be served a good supper, and hot cakes and Welsh rabbit can be had throughout the evenings. Entertainments for the children will be given on the afternoons of Wednesday, Friday and Saturday.

The Press Committee are arranging the programme in attractive book form, and for a trifle you can learn full particulars about the fair.

The good people of Plainfield are planning generous things, both as contributors and patrons of the fair.

SELF-DENIAL DOLLARS.

How They Were Saved, to Be Told Tomorrow Night.

A novel sociable will be held tomorrow evening in the lecture-room of Trinity Reformed Church, to be known as the "Self-Denial and Dollar Sociable". During the evening the envelopes will be opened, and the ways in which the dollars were saved will be read. A most entertaining programme has been arranged in which the following will take part: Miss Lillian Force, pianist; B. LaVere, cornetist; Miss Fannie Mattison, soloist; Mr. Hyndman and Mr. McGilloys, violinists; Messrs. Force and VanEps, banjoists; recitation, Miss Louise Snediker; male quartette, Messrs. G. O. Stevens, L. S. Bond, Wm. Holmes and F. S. Cutter.

NORTH PLAINFIELD DEFEATED.

A Picked Team Takes Leal's Place on the Football Field.

The North Plainfield Public School eleven was scheduled to play football yesterday afternoon with the second eleven of Leal's School on the Park avenue grounds. Most of the North Plainfield team were present but very few of the Leal School boys turned up.

Accordingly a game was played between the North Plainfield eleven and a picked team composed of the Leal School boys and the other football players present. Short halves were played and the scrub team had no difficulty in defeating the opponents from over the brook. An attempt will be made next week to have a game between the two school elevens.

Well! Well! Well! Well!

It was an avalanche, a cyclone, a tornado, a geyser, a whooptedee, and a seismetic whackarack, all in one, and yet the Democratic weather prophet could n't see it. Say, if your eyes are as bad as that there's no cure for them, but at Collier's, 103 Park avenue, you will be able to get some discerning, prescient Republican oculars, that will help you amazingly.

Wayward Kate.

Efforts are being made today before Judge Bartine in Somerville to have fourteen-year-old Kate Parkinson of North Plainfield sent to the Industrial School. She was brought back from Newark a week ago by Chief Grant. Several Plainfield women engaged in charitable work are interested in the attempt to reform the girl.

At Half Their Value.

White of Plainfield put on sale this morning over 1,500 dozen hose for ladies, gentlemen and children. The goods were bought at the large auction sale of hosiery held in New York last week. They are all first quality and all well worth your attention, as they are being sold at half their regular value.

To Make Sure of the Floor.

The floor of the Crescent Rink is to be examined by an expert because of the fears of members of the Riding Club that it is not safe to ride upon. The club have leased the rink for their Thursday night rides until June 1. Two carloads of tanbark have been ordered.

THE SCHOOL BOARD.

Retiring Members Anxious for Reelection.

THEIR PET PROJECT AT STAKE.

Election of Two Members in One Year an Unusual Thing—To Attack the Unconstitutionality of the Plainfield Act.

The Plainfield Board of Education consists of five members, one being elected each year. It is therefore ordinarily a matter of three years to effect a change of management in the schools. This year, however, two memberships become vacant. The term of Dr. J. B. Probasco expires, and someone is to be elected to fill the unexpired term of the late George H. Babcock, whose temporary successor, L. N. Lovell, was appointed by the Board till election.

The well-known desire of the Board is to erect a High School mansion on the Wadsworth land, regardless of the cry of taxpayers that there is abundant room for additions to the old buildings.

The Board's project was checked by the bill which Mayor Gilbert, The Press, and other good citizens, had passed.

The Board claims the act as unconstitutional, holding it to be special legislation, and hopes next year to attack it successfully and have it wiped out.

To do this they need their full strength, and will therefore seek the reelection of Dr. Probasco and Mr. Lovell.

A third member of the Board is known to be independent and likely to side with the people in the clamor against High School mansion extravagance. Therefore it becomes urgent for the Board to defeat any movement seeking to elect two members championing the anti-mansion element.

An interesting and important battle may be expected along this line, as the present opportunity for making a change in School Board majority is a rare one.

THE SHOE WAS TOO BIG.

And That Saved the Lad's Foot From Crushing.

The boy whose foot was caught between bumpers at Davis & Stevens's coal-yard yesterday afternoon and who disappeared after the accident, as was reported exclusively in The Daily Press, is Henry VanNest, a son of George VanNest of Monroe avenue.

As soon as the cars were pulled apart so that he could lift his foot from between the bumpers he hurried to Dr. T. Davis's. He explained that a flag-stone had fallen on his foot and the physician dressed the foot.

The boy had fortunately worn a man's shoe and when the cars came together he raised his foot so that only his big toe and the ends of the others were caught. The rust on the bumpers shows marks where the shoe was crushed between them. Had his shoes fitted the boy would have lost a foot.

A CLERICAL VIEW.

Dr Lewis Admires the Independent Vote, and Talks of Conscience.

Referring to the results of election, Rev Dr. A. H. Lewis said:

"It shows what a marvelous institution this republic is when the people rise up and announce such a change of front as they did Tuesday. In New York city it was purely a matter of conscience; in the rest of the country it was a matter of bread And that independent vote, what a great thing it is! I have watched its growth since the close of the war. It is a powerful influence with politicians for the maintenance of good government.

LANDLORD MILLER WINS.

HE CONTESTED THE CONSTABLE'S SALE OF HIS GOODS.

Plainfield Jurors Award Him $75, Which Creditor Linke Must Pay If He Loses on Appeal.

The action in tort of Frank E. Miller against Frank Linke and Constable W. R Mattox was tried by a jury in Justice Nash's Court yesterday afternoon.

The defendants, by virtue of an execution for $127 issued by Justice Mosher, sold property which Miller claimed was part of his exemption under the New Jersey law which allows $200 to a man with a family in such a case.

The plaintiff was represented by ex-Judge W. R. Codington. The counsel for the defendants was Walter Hetfield. Constable George R. Rockafellow had summoned the following jurors: Robert Walker, Ira Riker, Joseph V. Taylor, Charles Glaentzer, William T. Newman, Joseph VanArsdale, Daniel Schenck, Charles Wyckoff, Charles W. Runyon, Charles Hand, Walter Gibson and Edward Scheimer.

The property in question consisted of a horse and a blanket, which together brought at auction $37 50. The witnesses were Miller, Mattox and Charles Roberts. The defendants opposed Miller's claim of exemption on the ground that he was not a resident of the State. Miller thereupon showed that he had lived here eight years and that he had voted in Plainfield Tuesday.

The court held that it was the constable's duty in such a case to make sure of the value of the remaining property by having an appraisement made. The jury remained out about half an hour.

The verdict gave the plaintiff $75 damages for the sale of his property, the defendants to pay the costs of the trial. The case will be appealed. Constable Mattox is protected from having to pay damages and costs, as he was careful to be guaranteed by bond against the results of litigation before he proceeded with the sale.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTEBOOK.

To do away with the noise made by passing the singing books, Principal Travell had the school sing the morning hymn from memory.

There was a little confusion among the boys in marching into Assembly Hall this morning owing to the absence of the monitor, John V. Beekman '95, who counts off the boys for each seat, but it was stopped by the appointment of a temporary monitor.

The Senior class had their pronouncing match this morning in the period following morning exercises and a great time they had. Principal Travill acted as judge and wrote the words on the board while Henry B. Drake presided over Webster's Dictionary to look up all disputed words. Miss Valentine Chandor and Edward O. Clark as captains of the two sides chose up and divided the class into two sections. The first was composed of Miss Valentine Chandor, captain, Miss Helen A. Hazen, and Miss E. Bailey, Miss Bertha Thorn, Miss Etta Raybert, George A. Horne, H. Oscar Nightingale, Edgar I. Serrell, Frederick Coriell. The other side was composed of Edward O. Clark, captain; Charles B. Morse, lieutenant; Thomas D. Blair, Miss Edith Darby, Miss Laura Emmons, Miss Mabel Force, Elwood Sebring and Isaac Titsworth. After a very exciting contest, the side captained by Clark won, with ten to the opponents seven, having capured two. The winning side consisted at the close of the match of Edward O. Clark, Charles B. Morse, Thomas D. Blair, Miss Laura Emmons, Miss Mabel Force, Elwood Sebring, Isaac Titsworth, George A. Horne, Edgar I Serrell, Erederick Coriell.

The Grammar School received one session on account of the rain.

There will be a transit of the planet Mercury over the sun's disk, next Saturday, visible in the United States. The time for New York of the first contact is 10:39 in the morning and the last contact 4:16 in the afternoon. A small telescope or a good field-glass to the eye-piece of which a piece of smoked glass is fastened to protect the eye, will be necessary to watch the transit. The planet will appear as a beautiful, round black spot on the sun's disk and moving slowly toward the West. All of the amatuer astronomers of the schools should observe this interesting phenomona. NINETY-FIVE.

Coincidence on Syria.

The Young Ladies Mission Band of the Crescent Avenue Church held their regular meeting in the parlors of the church yesterday afternoon. By a strange coincidence the subject for consideration, selected months ago when the programme was made up, was "Syria", the country of which Dr. Jessup spoke so instructively last evening. Letters from the field and other descriptions of the Mohammedan system were read so that the young women were the more interested in the evening address.

—The front steps of the Public Library have just been painted so all visitors are forced to seek entrance through the side door on Ninth street.

PRINTING GOSPEL FOR HEATHEN.

Dr. Jessup Brings Good Tidings to Local Presbyterians Who Sent to Him the Machine as an Agent of Civilization.

An address on mission work in which Plainfield Presbyterians are much interested was given by Rev. Dr. Henry Jessup of Bayreuth, Syria, in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue Church last evening. The audience filled the room and gave close attention to the words of the missionary. Briefly expressed, his description of the field and the methods of work was as follows:

Plainfield people are most interested in the printing establishment in Bayreuth, as they sent a press from Walter Scott's works to that city several years ago Many difficulties attend publishing in that country. The Turkish government maintains a censorship over all printed matter and manuscript sent to the censor is usually kept six months or a year before being retruned. Then it may be badly mutilated. In spite of this the mission has issued 500 publications in Arabic, each with the sanction of the government.

The railroads of Syria, shown on a map by Dr. Jessup, are all small and unprofitable, but several extensions are proposed. From Bayreuth to Damascus runs a narrow-guage road which crosses Mt. Lebanon by a cogged track, rising 5 000 feet in 35 miles. The speaker told of these institutions to show how modern civilization is being introduced into this ancient land.

The first attempt to translate the Bible into Arabic received a set-back in 1887 when Dr. Eli Smith died. But a man perhaps even better fitted to continue the work was found in Dr. Van Dyke, who completed the New Testament translation in the Spring of 1860 and the old in 1865. About 500,000 copies have since been distributed, all the way from Africa to China, wherever there are Mohammedans.

The missionaries gave the people a literature and then began to give them a taste for reading. In Bayreuth they commenced by teaching boys and then the wife of Dr. Smith opened a school with 30 little girls as scholars. One of these she adopted as her own daughter. April 18 last there was a Sunday-school celebration in Bayreuth, when 900 children joined in exercises marking the erection of a column on the site of the first edifice ever erected in western Asia for the education of women. At that time a paper was read by the daughter of the girl that Mrs. Smith had adopted. In the college founded in Bayreuth in 1863 are now 250 young men. The scholars in Syrian schools include 9,600 boys and 9,000 girls.

People often wonder why the Presbyterians have no board of missions in Jerusalem. The missonaries went there at first and remained until they decided that Jerusalem and Joppa were not suitable places for headquarters. Jerusalem is a great alms-house. The Latins are supported by the Latin convent, the Armenans and the Greeks by theirs, the Mohammedans by the mosque and the Jews by the Rabbi's fund. Very few are not paupers. Men came to the missionaries and said, "Our church gives us so much a week. How much will you give us if we become Christians?" The missionaries moved.

In Bayreuth they found a much better locality for starting the work. The people in the vicinity are hard-working, independent people. From about 1,000 population in 1825 it has grown to 100,000. It is almost a European city, having gas and water supplies and well-kept streets. The harbor has just been improved by a French company which has built a long breakwater. The soil is sandy and the air healthy.

Bayreuth is crowded with schools of all sects. Even the Mohammedans have fallen in line and are educating their girls. They teach the students well enough, but they found that they could not build up the character of the young without employing Christian teachers. Thus the influence of the missions is continually being extended.

Dr. Jessup exhibited the certificate which the Mohammedan pilgrim to Mecca receives and told of the terrible results of these pilgrimages. Last year 50,000 people died of cholera. They fell in the roads, they dropped down dying at the shrines and the crowds passed on, showing no sign of sympathy or sorrow, but simply crying as they saw another fall "Happy man, he dies in Mecca". Dying in Mecca is considered the best kind of a passport to the Mohammedan paradise.

The Mohammedans believe that at the final judgment day every man's bad deeds will be placed in a balance and weighed by his good deeds. The good deeds include trip to Mecca, praying, fasting and the saying of the creed. The pilgrimage is especially important and the man who has been to Mecca several times is assured that no wickedness he can be guilty of can outweigh his devoutness. Being confident of paradise, he is dangerous. A man murdered another a short time ago for no reason whatever. And the people said "No wonder! He has been to Mecca seven times".

Many other things were told by Dr. Jessup, among them the life of a noble young Mohammedan who had been converted. In conclusion he spoke of the mission's gratitude for the Walter Scott press. It is a beautiful, accurate press, the speaker said, it prints anything, from the paper six feet square to the smallest card. It is an ornament to the establishment, an admirable machine that is a credit to the city of Plainfield.

THAT WANDERING BOY.

Johnnie Stayed Out Late, and That Caused Trouble.

The social life of the Newmans and their neighbors on the Boulevard was again reviewed in the City Court this morning. According to the evidence young John Newman, of hydrophobia sensation fame, was the cause of it all.

It seemed that the boy has not been coming home regularly lately and his mother, Mrs. Michael Newman, became very much worried over his welfare and wondered where he stayed nights. So Sunday afternoon she left her home on West Third street and went across the street to the home of her daughter, Mrs. James Day, alias Mrs. "Buck" Day.

She knocked at the door and began to talk about the wickedness of her son-in-law and daughter in harboring Johnnie and thus keeping him from the more desirable atmosphere of home. Day went to the door and then his wife joined him. They combined in battle with the mother-in-law and a noisy row resulted. Both of Mrs. Newman's eyes were blacked and the rest of her face was bruised and cut. A large crowd collected. Mrs. Newman was finally driven back to her home.

Mrs. Newman and Day and Mrs. Day were in the court this morning, each charged with quarreling and being disorderly. Herbert Overbaugh and John Dady testified that they were in Day's house at the time and were unable to stop Mrs. Newman from fighting. Mrs. Ann Kane and Michael Welsh said they had heard the noise of the conflict. The fight was described by all. After the different versions had been presented Judge Coddington sentenced Day a $15 fine or to go to jail for 30 days, and suspended sentence on the two women. Through Attorney George DeMeza Day gave notice of appeal. James Dady furnished a $200 bond.

THAT'S WHAT ALL SAY.

Leaders of Both Parties Endorse the Daily Press View of the Mayoralty.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:

Your headline in Wednesday's Daily Press, "Gilbert for Mayor", strikes me as one of the best among the many good things you have done for Plainfield. The article has the true ring of "patriotism before politics"; in other words, you talk as all should vote, for the man, not party.

The writer has been a very close observer of the manner in which our local government has been administered for the past ten or more years, and it is with much pride that he is able to point to our present Mayor as the embodiment of the highest elements of a man and an official, one who knows no politics in the ordinary sense of that term, a man whom the writer knows the office sought. It was not a case of the man seeking the office. Plainfield will make no mistake in honoring him with an unanimous election this Fall. NON-PARTISAN.

HYMENEAL.

Mead-Metler.

Last night witnessed the scene of a happy wedding at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. L Metler 114 Plainfield avenue. Their daughter, Miss Fannie L., and George W. Mead of Metutchen, were united in matrimony by Rev. Cornelius Schenck. They received the congratulations of many friends, and a number of handsome gifts.

After supper the hopeful couple started for the station, preceded by a number of young folks overflowing with merriment, who bestowed rice and good wishes.

After a visit with friends in Easton, the couple will reside in Metuchen.

Among the guests were: Mr and Mrs Harry Mead, the Misses Kate and Addie Mead of Rahway; Mr and Mrs Noe, Mr and Mrs Baylon of Oak Tree; Mr and Mrs Cornish, Miss Sadie Craig, Peter Emmons and family of Metuchen; Mr and Mrs Wyckoff of Westfield; Mr and Mrs Fletcher and Mr and Mrs Arthur Streeter of Somerville; Mr and Mrs Waldron, Mrs Creveling, Mrs Snider, Mr and Mrs George Reighton and family, Mrs Joseph Emmons, Joseph Wyckoff and Anthony Martel of Plainfield; Eugene Leeper and daughter of Millburn; and Messrs Greene and Dailey of Brooklyn.

—John L Force of the West Side House, Scotch Plains, entertained a number of his friends at a turkey supper last evening.

LIGHT AND AIRY.

Thy Hand.

If I could hold thy hand, oh, maid divine,
I'd happy be—the world would all be mine!
My soul would drift on high,
My bliss (ah, me, I sigh!)
Would be complete if I
Could hold thy hand.

If I could hold thy hand, sweet Eleanore,
I'd lucky be—I'd ask for nothing more.
With it I could defy
The pricks of sorrow. Why,
I would be rich if I
Could hold thy hand!

If I could hold thy hand a moment now,
All things before my great delight would bow.
Those royal four—oh, my!
The jackpot I would try
To gather in if I
Could hold thy hand!
—Boston Courier.

Information.

"Speak, and you are a dead man!"

The pistol barrel gleamed under the nose of the patient looking party who was reclining on the combination sofa.

"Do your worst," he cried, leaping to his feet. "I will speak. I demand to know how in thunder it is you walk all through this house without falling over the rugs."

But the burglar only laughed mockingly in his face and climbed out of the cellar window.—Detroit Tribune.

Retrogression.

A large company was gathered at the table d'hote, as is usual in the modern romance.

The large lady had just troubled the bald gentleman for the vinegar.

"No," she was saying, "woman will not go backward."

"Except when she gets off a street car," observed the cynic, who had hitherto been silent. The youth with the blond mustache got choked with his soup, but said nothing.—Exchange.

Had the Tools.

"Yes, I was sitting on the edge of the folding bed the other night," said the cheerful idiot, "playing solitaire, when all of a sudden the blamed thing closed up on me. If it had not been for my presence of mind, I think I should have smothered."

"Had sense enough to call for help, I suppose?" asked the dyspeptic boarder.

"Didn't do anything of the kind. I mere selected a pair of jacks from the deck and opened it with that."—Indianapolis Journal.

Disturbed.

Oh, mother, please, mother, come home with me now.
The afternoon's slipping by fast.
You said you were coming right home from the polls
As soon as your ballot was cast.
Poor father came in for his dinner at noon,
And not a mouthful could he find,
And the words that he said as he slammed the front door
Left a strong smell of sulphur behind.
—Kansas City Journal.

A King.

He was indeed a king among men, tall, lithe, with the thews and sinews of a Samson, the eye of an eagle and a gaze that could have peered unflinchingly into the muzzle of a cannon.

As before stated, he was a king among men. But unhappily he was not among men. He was among women, where he got caught in a charge on the bargain counter. Let us draw the veil.—Indianapolis Journal.

Struggles of a Growing Mind.

Tommy—You say December is the last month of the year, pa?

Tommy's Father—Yes.

Tommy—And January is the first?

Tommy's Father—Yes, certainly.

Tommy—Well, how is it, then, that December always comes afore January?—Chicago Record.

Poetry and Prudence.

The poet in these autumn days
Who loves to stroll through woodland ways
And muse upon the changing scene—
The foliage sere, which erst was green,
And other things which poets eye
With interest or in ecstasy—

—New York Press.

An Utter Waste.

Dashaway—I have just heard from Miss Penstock what an uncomfortable voyage she had going over, and I wish now I hadn't sent her that five pound box of candy down to the steamer before she left.

Cleverton—Why?

Dashaway—Well, it was just like throwing money overboard.—Brooklyn Life.

Just the Thing.

Gent—I have called on the recommendation of a friend to have my portrait painted. But I should like to know if you can take me in my fur coat.

Artist—Oh, certainly. Fact is, you know, I am an animal painter.—Humoristische Blatter.

Deprecation.

When in the stilly night
The hour of twelve has found me
Just arrived and with no light
Of any kind around me,
I tread with circumspection,
Indulging in the hope
The rocking chair lies not in wait
My toes to telescope.
—Washington Star.

Useless.

"What perfectly lovely gold hairpins. Where did you get them?"

Madge—Well, no matter, for they're not worth anything. I can neither button my shoes nor shake down the grate with them.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Prepared.

"Aren't you afraid she'll 'forget' she's engaged to you?"

"Oh, no! My first present to her was a ticket for a course of memory lessons."—Brooklyn Life.

Only For the Time Being, However.

If soilence gives consint, my dear,
When next to call Oi come,
'Twould give me thrue deloight to hear
That you were deaf and dumb.
—Washington Star.

Dix—Do you take any stock in the story of the moon being inhabited?

Hic—Well, many a time I have seen more than one man in the moon.—

PRICES OF FARM PRODUCTS.

They Are Regulated by Supply and Demand, and Tariffs Do Not Affect Them.

In 1891, when the McKinley bill had got fairly under way, there was a partial failure of the wheat crop abroad, and American wheat largely advanced in price.

In 1892, under the same tariff and precisely the same business conditions, the wheat crop abroad was large, and the price of wheat diminished to the lowest point it had reached for many years.

In 1894 the foreign wheat crop was unusually large, and there is but little demand for our surplus breadstuffs. The result is the lowest price for wheat that it has ever brought in the history of the country.

When wheat advanced in 1891 under the McKinley tariff, McKinley and his followers all pointed to it as one of the beneficent features of the tariff policy. Farmers were told that under high taxation they could always command high prices for their products.

Mr. McKinley promised the woolgrowers largely increased prices for wool under the high tariff taxes passed for its protection, but in the first year of the McKinley tariff American wool declined in price. It declined still more in 1892 and has continued to decline from the day the McKinley tariff bill was passed until now. He now promises increased price for wool again if the McKinley tariff could be restored, but he forgets to mention that American wool commanded one-half more when it was practically free in this country than it did at any time under the McKinley tariff.

The plain truth is that the price of all commodities is regulated by the inexorable laws of supply and demand. By our restricted tariff laws we forced Europe to seek new fields for producing bread, and they have today in India, Russia and other places wheatfields enough to supply the foreign nations when their crops are good. In like manner when the south boasted that cotton was king and ruled the world Europe was compelled to seek new sources for cotton. Today India and Egypt are not only supplying a large portion of the mills of Europe, but we import nearly 1,000,000 bales to this country to mix with our domestic product.

No statute can regulate the price of bread. There is but one law to which it bows, and that is the imperious law of supply and demand. We forced Europe to learn to depend upon herself as much as possible, and she has learned to do so in breadstuffs and largely in cotton, and only when there is a failure of the wheat and cotton crops abroad can there be high prices for the surplus cotton and wheat grown in this country. The man who tells the farmer that tariff laws regulate the price of wheat or the price of cotton is either a fool or knave.—Philadelphia Times.

An Interested Spectator.

Harrison—Of course I'm not in the game, but just let either of those boys drop that ball!—Pittsburg Dispatch.

The Revival of Industry.

Within less than two months after the Wilson senate tariff bill went into force the inspirational effect upon industry of all kinds had become electrical, says the Chicago Times. Never in its history have the recuperative powers of this country been manifested in such degree as in the revival of industry which has gone on all over the country and representing all lines of business since Sept. 1. The Republican press even is compelled to acknowledge the fact. The Detroit Journal, the organ of the ultra protection element of Michigan Republicanism, calls upon the calamity howlers to "quit croaking," because the evidence of restored prosperity and growing confidence is on every hand apparent, and the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette, another dyed in the wool organ of protection, has been making an investigation of industrial conditions in Indiana which compels its frank admission of the wonderful change already felt in that state.

There is nothing local about the influence of the new tariff law. Every section of the country feels the impulse of its beneficent provisions, and from the woolen manufacturers of New England and the live stock growers on the Mexican border come the same reports of better times at hand.

The Clover Is Sprouting.

Mr. Harrison twits the Democrats with having failed to keep their promise that the country should be "in clover." The trouble with the ex-president is that he insists on the Democracy furnishing a crop of four leaf clover, while he and his party have been doing their worst to sow tares in the field by night. Yet, in spite of them, the clover of better times is sprouting finely.—Philadelphia Record.

GEMS IN VERSE.

The Last Leaf.

I saw him once before,
As he passed by the door,
And again
The pavement stones resound
As he totters o'er the ground
With his cane.

They say that in his prime,
Ere the pruning knife of time
Cut him down,
Not a better man was found
By the crier on his round
Through the town.

But now he walks the streets,
And he looks at all he meets,
Sad and wan,
And he shakes his feeble head,
That it seems as if he said,
"They are gone."

The mossy marbles rest
On the lips that he has prest
In their bloom.
And the names he loved to hear
Have been carved for many a year
On the tomb.

My grandmamma has said—
Poor old lady, she is dead
Long ago—
That he had a Roman nose,
And his cheek was like a rose
In the snow.

But now his nose is thin,
And it rests upon his chin
Like a staff,
And a crook is in his back,
And a melancholy crack
In his laugh.

I know it is a sin
For one to sit and grin
At him here,
But the old three cornered hat
And the breeches and all that
Are so queer!

And if I should live to be
The last leaf upon the tree
In the spring
Let them smile, as I do now,
At the old forsaken bough
Where I cling.
—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Some of These Days.

Some of these days when the cows come home,
And the bars in the twilight fall,
And the brown bees back to the hive shall roam,
There'll be honey and milk for all.
So let us be patient and go on our ways
And wait for that beautiful "some of these days!"
—Atlanta Constitution.

The Glorious Future.

Oh, a glorious time is coming and will be here pretty soon,
When they who have all else beside will not desire the moon.
Never more will mankind labor, for we'll all be rich, 'tis said,
In the happy days before us, just a little way ahead.

The music of the future will be very, very grand;
The stars will stop to listen when we practice in the band.
Then will no such trash as melody or harmony be made,
But will Wagner's great gymnastics be the only music played,

And the poet of the future will write only in blank verse;
His style will be heroic, and his language wondrous terse,
And his theme's specific gravity will be as high as lead,
And his books will be exhibited, but never will be read.

Human nature in the future will be matchlessly sublime.
For reason will transform it—old religion's had its time.
And should men be sick or troubled or imagine they have sinned
We'll cure their ills by preaching highly scientific wind.

Our enjoyment of the future will be most intense, of course.
When we get things fixed to suit us, it will have tremendous force,
But it's just as well to be content, and try to banish care
While awaiting the completion of those castles in the air.
—James Duffy.

The Old Books.

Deep in the past I peer and see
A child upon the nursery floor,
Holding a book upon his knee,
Who asks, like Oliver, for more.
The number of his years is four,
And yet in letters hath he skill.
How deep he dives in fairy lore!
The books I loved, I love them still.

One gift the fairies gave me—three
They commonly bestowed of yore—
The love of books, the golden key
That opens the enchanted door.
Behind it Bluebeard lurks, and o'er
And o'er doth Jack his giants kill,
And there is Aladdin's store.
The books I loved, I love them still.

Take all, but leave my books to me!
Those heavy creels of old we loved
We fill not now, nor wander free,
Nor wear the heart that once we wore.
Not now each giver seems to pour
His waters from the muse's hill,
Though sometimes gone from stream to shore.
The books I loved, I love them still.
—Andrew Lang.

Sweethearts Always.

If sweethearts were sweethearts always,
Whether as maid or wife,
No drop would be half as pleasant
In the mingled draft of life.

But the sweetheart has smiles and blushes
When the wife has frowns and sighs,
And the wives have a wrathful glitter
For the glow of the sweetheart's eyes.

If lovers were lovers always,
The same to sweetheart and wife,
Who would change for a future of Eden
The joys of this checkered life?

But husbands grow grave and silent,
And cares on the anxious brow
Oft replace the sunshine that perished
With the words of the marriage vow.

Happy is he whose sweetheart
Is wife and sweetheart still;
Whose voice, as of old, can charm;
Whose kiss, as of old, can thrill;

Who has plucked the rose to find ever
Its beauty and fragrance increase
As the flush of passion is mellowed
In love's unmeasured peace;

Who sees in the step a lightness;
Who finds in the form of grace;
Who reads an unaltered brightness
In the witchery of the face,

Undimmed and unchanged. Ah, happy
Is he crowned with such life,
Who drinks the wife, pledging the sweet heart,
And toasts in the sweetheart the wife!
—Daniel O'Connell.

The Good Man.

Thus, born alike, from virtue first began
The difference that distinguished man from man.
He claimed no title from descent of blood,
But that which made him noble made, him good.
—Dryden.

Truth and Error.

Truth crushed to earth shall rise again—
The eternal years of God are hers—
But error, wounded, writhes in pain
And dies among his worshipers.
—Bryant.

SHORT SESSION OF CONGRESS.

What It May Do and How It May Act.

SIXTY-FIVE DAYS FOR BUSINESS.

Regular Appropriation Bills Will Slip Through Easily—Finance, the Tariff, Foreign Affairs and the Pacific Railway. Special Legislation.

The Fifty-third congress as now constituted will again convene on Monday, Dec. 3, for its short and last session. There will be fun on that day—fun for the victors and such philosophy as they can summon for the defeated to stand the raillery of their political foes. And how will the congress act and what will it do at this short session? Well, deducting the usual Christmas recess, there will certainly not be more than 65 days for actual business, and there may be fewer. One-half of those at least will be days when special committees have the right of way, and much of the remaining time will be consumed in struggles for the floor and filibustering, so there will not be very much done of an extraordinary nature.

Nevertheless there will be many desperate struggles, and the majority will not be so manageable as at the long session. It rarely is, and this year the break will be worse than common. Many members have not been renominated, and many more will be defeated. So there will be at least 100, possibly nearly twice as many, who will realize that this is their last session. They will be frantic to rush through special bills and private claims left over from the long session. The re-elected members will naturally be more conservative, and the committee on appropriations will, as usual, be inclined to oppose specialties. There will be deficiencies, of course, and the usual fight for bigger appropriations. On an average some 40,000 claims are filed with the committee on claims of each congress. A few hundred bills are brought in by this committee, a few of them are passed at the long session, and on the rest comes the fight at the short one.

A few other bills are for crying necessities. That for a new public printing office, for instance, ought not to be delayed one hour. The present building is a daily menace of death to every one in and about it. Yet the long standing quarrel about the site has assumed the form of a difference between senate and house, as such things are sure to do if kept up long enough. With the prevalent bitterness there is too much reason to fear that the provision for a new printing office will go over to the Fifty-fourth congress. The Manderson award, giving damages in lump sums to those who suffered in the collapse of the old Ford's theater building, used as a government office, ought by all means to have been enacted into a law at the last session. Yet it may go over to the next congress.

Foreign affairs will be of more interest than for some time past. When the Fifty-third congress met, and for eight months thereafter, there was absolute peace throughout the world, for the first time since the beginning of Christendom. Last summer not only was there a worldwide peace, but so far as the congressional eye could see there was no sign of early trouble. Hawaii was the only region the administration and opposition factions could have fun about. The world has got bravely over its stagnation. The opposition will now fall fiercely upon the president and Secretary Gresham for waiting on Great Britain in the matter of changed relations with Japan, for their proposal to withdraw influence in Samoa, for not being more aggressive in dealing with Canada and for divers alleged laches in Central America and elsewhere. Chairman McCreary will have more lively work to do in defense of the president, and Mr. Boutelle will have several new points for his annual speech on the navy.

The whole matter of reciprocity will come up de novo and have to be dealt with substantially on a new basis. Spain, Germany, Brazil and Hawaii will each present us a different problem. The first is affected by our new tariff and now gains little or no special advantage as a return for admitting our flour to Cuba; the second kicks viciously at our special or differential tax on its bountied sugar and may retaliate by again excluding the American hog; the third has given notice of intention to terminate the existing arrangement, and with her Hawaii and possibly other countries' matters must be readjusted to fit our new tariff. Of course this measure itself will show defects by a few months' operation—has already shown them indeed—which must be remedied, and means must be voted for collecting the income tax. The sugar growers are now suing in the courts for the bounty on this year's crop and will besiege congress, of course, for special relief. And then there are the so called "popgun bills." So the tariff will still be a tolerably live issue.

It is taken for granted that the regular appropriation bills will slip through with very little friction, as everything is in good shape for them. The Indian business of the nation was settled at the long session, so far as that business can be permanently settled. All the tribes were located where they want to remain; all the reservations given up were provisionally disposed of, and there is really nothing particular to do in that line. Many of the military posts lately in the Indian country are discontinued, and it is the avowed policy of the government to station the regular army near the great cities. General Schofield, in his last report before retiring from the head of the army, repeats with more than the usual emphasis the old recommendation for a larger establishment, but it is as certain as anything in legislation can be that this congress will not heed him.

It is a safe prediction that the scenes at the opening of the session will be less rather than more exciting than usual at the short session. There will be heaps of flowers on the desks of favorites, cheers for members who come back with increased majorities, notably Tom Reed, Boutelle et al., and chaffing for the defeated, but there are no officers to elect, no committees to appoint, and business will be as if congress had but adjourned overnight unless it has to wait for the president's message. The new rules will greatly facilitate business. The Democrats hated to adopt them, but the majority can no longer get on without them. The house is now too large and heterogeneous a body to go on the old system.

Perhaps the greatest debate will be on the bill or bills proposed for settling the Pacific railway indebtedness to the government unless indeed congress thinks it too big a subject for the short session. Mr. Bailey declares it must be dealt with and on radical lines. The house committee has heard an immense amount of testimony and formulated a comprehensive measure known as the Reilly bill for refunding the debt and greatly extending the time for its payment; but four of the committee have submitted a minority report for a much more radical measure, and one, Mr. Harris of Kansas, wants the government to foreclose, take the road and run it as government property, a sort of object lesson on government management of the railways.

When the administration is defeated at the middle term elections, as it nearly always is—there have been but two exceptions in 60 years—there is always a great cry that its policy has been condemned by the people and a prophecy that said policy will be changed, but the oldest politician cannot remember a case when the prophecy was fulfilled. The party in power invariably goes straight on, and if it changes at all it is only to become a little more aggressive. Its leaders always assume that the last election was a mere freak on the part of the people and reason like that sinner in the old story who was up a tree when Noah's ark floated by: "Go on with your derned old scow. This is only a big freshet anyhow." As Lincoln grew more radical after losing the close states in 1862 and Grant more eager for resumption after the "landslide" of 1874, so it may be taken for granted that Cleveland will urge his views more forcibly next winter than last.

At the close of each long session there is the same outcry that this has been a do nothing congress; that the majority is incompetent; that expenses have increased and the general tone of public life has declined, and we have the same old house clerk's bill for popular orators to make fun with. The impression is created that congressmen just wallow in lemonade and rosewater, with whisky on the side, and an army of servitors. Some of the bills rendered for expenses at the capitol do look odd. Thus the wash account indicates that congress uses about 600 towels per day, and that $2,500 to $3,000 per year is paid for laundry account. Some years ago it was proved that the contract was let to a lady of considerable social standing, and that she got the work done for half what she received.

The report also indicates that soap, sponges, combs, brushes, cologne, bay rum and scissors are bought in enormous quantities. The item of "corset laces" always creates great fun, and the rural orator points out the particular members who wear them. As a matter of fact, they are used for fastening together the successive numbers of The Congressional Record and other publications which members keep on their desks for ready reference. Pocketknives are bought sufficient to supply 5,000 men. The member can get them at cost from the stationery clerk, and the rural constituent calling on his representative usually receives one as a present. Each member is allowed $125 per year for stationery, and if he draws less he takes the cash. There have been many cases where members used each less than $5 worth and took cash for the remainder. Some never use the congress paper at all, but buy paper with no printed heading.

The cost of burying a member is ordinarily about $1,500, paid for the fare of the escort party to his home and back and their expenses en route. The burial of Vice President Hendricks cost the house $1,437 and the senate a little over $4,000. Charges for meals and personal services for the nine men on the route to and from Indianapolis amounted to $84 per day. The story goes that when a member from the northwest was buried several years ago one of the escort telegraphed ahead: "Meet us at Detroit depot with four cases champagne, gallon best whisky, four boxes partagos and 50 pounds of ice. The corpse is doing well." These are items for the rural orator to have fun with, but let no one imagine that congressmen will worry thereat in this short session. When it is considered that our capitol is by far the largest legislative building in the world, 751 feet 4 inches long, covering four acres and containing over 1,600 rooms, the bill for taking care of it and paying salaries of all the members and employees seems small. It is only 8 cents a year for each citizen of the nation, and we love to think that our lawmakers are well fixed.

There will be this winter about the usual racket on silver, and if Mr. Walker of Massachusetts succeeds in getting his "comprehension bill" for a general currency system before the house the discussion thereon will be well worth hearing. As to all those able measures from Mr. Hatch's committee on agriculture and all those bills for education and labor—bills drawn with so much care and the subject of so many prayers—well, most of them have been put to sleep for this congress. They will appear in the next probably, as they have in each congress for, lo, these many years. The bankers have recently met at Baltimore and prepared a bill for congress to pass, the chief provision of which is that no more bonds are to be deposited, but each bank issue notes to the amount of one-half or three-fourths of its paid up capital and the government guarantee said notes. If any man should dream that this congress will listen patiently to such a proposition, that man should take salts in the morning and consult a physician at once.

Senator Morgan will make his usual effort to get favorable consideration for his Nicaragua canal bill, the chief feature of which is that the government guarantee the interest on the company's bonds to the amount of $87,000,000 or thereabouts, but otherwise the canal is to be a private enterprise. In other words, the company is to take no risk of loss and make as much as it can. It is claimed that by this guarantee the company will be able to market 3 per cent bonds at par. How long it will take to bring members from the farming states to the support of such a measure as that will probably be learned about the time we solve the long standing conundrum as to the assault on Mr. William Patterson.

Of course there will be a flood of bills to regulate everything and investigate everybody. Present appearances indicate that this is to be the hardest winter on railroads since 1874, and their enemies will literally catch them in the gate. About 150 great railroads are already in the hands of receivers appointed by United States courts, and by the latest construction of law this puts them under the protection of the United States army in case of strikes and riots. All this will give a fine opening for heated discussion, and only the shortness of the session will restrain it. To sum up, the regular appropriation bills, plans to reorganize the currency, foreign affairs, investigations and very general legislation will form the business of the short session. Its fun and fighting will come from the propositions on railroads and canals, the pressure to have claims allowed, the demands for special legislation and the tail end of the long tariff discussion. is a virtuous vice. The world is better for it. It makes men ambitious and it makes women careful of their personal appearance. It doesn't take much money to keep well-dressed now-a-days. Happy Surprise.

A delightful surprise party was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Bond of Elm street last evening. It was arranged by Miss Minnie Stiglitz and Miss Sadie Searing, and all the details of surprise were carefully carried out.

When Mr. Bond came home in the evening he found a merry crowd in possession of his home. Games and refreshments were much enjoyed. Mr Bond sang several solos which were greatly appreciated.

The guests included the Misses Etta Van Buskirck, Emma Wyckoff, Ada Wagner, Cora Burdick, Minnie Stiglitz, Sadie Searing and Miss Horton; Mr. Schaffer, Garrett Wyckoff, A. R. Johnson, Julius Wyckoff, Mr. Leland, Walter Gibbs, William Voebl, Ephriam Compton, and Mr and Mrs. Joseph Martin.

Dread Diphtheria.

A very sad case is that of the Wakefield family in the rear of Love's Building. A few days ago a little daughter died of diphtheria, and now Mrs. Wakefield is severely ill of the same disease; and the baby, and older child, and the servant girl, all have a touch of it. Dr. Adams's skill is bringing them through the crisis.

Little Nellie Gray of East Second street died of diphtheria this morning, aged two years and seven months. This is the second death of the disease in that family this week.

A NAUTICAL KNOT.

How It Differs From a Nautical Mile—Origin of the Word.

A nautical knot is frequently confounded with a nautical mile. The length of a nautical knot is 50 feet and 8 inches, no more nor less; that of a nautical mile sometimes as long as 6,107 feet and 10 inches and at other times as short as 6,046 feet, for a nautical mile has to conform to a line measuring one minute of arc of the earth's surface at sea level, and as the earth is not a perfect sphere the radii differ, and so must the arc. But the length of a standard nautical mile, according to the United States coast and geodetic survey, is 6,080 feet and 3¼ inches, that being the length of one minute of arc of a great circle of a true sphere whose surface area is equal to that of the earth.

In the earlier days of navigation the method of determining the distance a vessel sailed a sea was by what was called "heaving the log." A three cornered board, with lead attached so as to float on its edge that it might not drag through the water, was attached to a long line, and about 100 feet from the log or three cornered board a knot was made in the line, and when the log was thrown into the water as the vessel sailed away from it the line was drawn out of the vessel by the log, which remained stationary in the water. As soon as the knot passed out over the rail or stern of the vessel a half minute sandglass was turned to denote the time and the sand carefully watched until the last grain dropped into the lower bulb, and the log line was then instantly stopped at the rail, the distance was measured on the line as it was hauled in from where it was stopped at the rail to the knot before mentioned, and as a half minute glass denoted the one hundred and twentieth part of an hour, so the distance on the log line was the one hundred and twentieth part of the distance the vessel would sail in an hour. To make the computation more easy, knots were placed on the log line every one hundred and twentieth part of a mile of 6,080 feet, which placed the knots 50 feet and 8 inches apart, and the number of these knots which the vessel sailed in half a minute were therefore equal to the number of miles that the vessel would sail in an hour if she continued at the same rate. The knot received its name from a simple knot tied in the logline and is not equal to a nautical mile, but is the one hundred and twentieth part of it.—Detroit Free Press.

TWENTY YEARS

OF ONE WOMAN'S LIFE

Spent With and For the Benefit of the Women of the World.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

One woman's work has told for good in thousands of homes throughout the world.

What a record of helpfulness!

What happiness and comfort that work has brought to thousands of despairing women; what pains banished and how smooth the way was made for weary sufferers, no pen or tongue can ever tell.

Lydia E. Pinkham gave the best of her life to the women of the world, that through her the suffering of her sex might be relieved.

Her Vegetable Compound saves women from all diseases of the womb and kidneys. It has stood for twenty years against all cavil, and won the first place in the hearts of women.

Look at the picture of this New York woman, once confined to her bed by chronic female weakness, now able to follow her husband in the Adirondacks on long gunning tramps.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made this change in her life.

Just hear this one talk. It does one's heart good.

"Female sufferers, hear me!

"I was discouraged, broken-hearted. I was so ill with female trouble I could not walk or stand, and had to be assisted to my feet when arising from a chair. My head whirled, and my back ached; but worst of all was that awful crowding-down feeling in my abdomen.

"A friend of mine told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; her faith won mine, and now I am well. Oh! how can I return thanks to Mrs. Pinkham?

"Every woman troubled with uterus or womb troubles can be cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for it cured me, and will them."—Mrs. KERHAUGH, Juniata St., Nicetown, Pa. Every druggist has it.

REMARKABLE CURES

Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.

I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR. PETER G EYCK, OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:

For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

GOLDDUST AND HAIR GREASE.

The Use of One Aided In Acquiring the Other In Argonaut Days In California.

There is a very large but always very proper, even dignified, barroom in Union square which by some unexplained process of selection has for years been the refreshment place of numerous old time New York "boys"—that is, they were boys in the days of the pre-eminence of the old Sixth and Eighth wards.

They are gray haired or bald and too ample of girth to "run wid de machine," as every one of them did in the old days. They are all well dressed, generally ruddy faced and gray mustached, dignified of carriage and slow of speech, as if, since the glory of the old days has departed, there is too little to be talked about in these degenerate days to require hasty speech for the telling.

Well, such an old boy sat at a polished mahogany table in that barroom with two companions of the same type watching the barkeepers mix and serve drinks and then ring up printed checks for the amount due.

"Those barkeepers don't have the same chance for a rake off we had in California in the placer days," remarked the old boy thoughtfully, and his companions slowly directed their attention to him, anticipating a story.

"I tended bar in Sacramento and Marysville in the early fifties, when those two cities were the supply headquarters for nearly all the placer mining camps. Miners would come in with their golddust, and before selling it many of them would make the rounds of the saloons. After a round of drinks a miner would put on the bar a chamois skin bag of dust, from which the barkeeper would take a pinch, which was supposed to represent as many times two bits' worth of gold as there were drinks to be paid for. The dust was generally fine and looked like black sand, only now and then showing a dull glitter of yellow. This was where the barkeepers worked their little graft. They all wore long hair, saturated with grease. Before taking a pinch of dust we always ran our hands through our hair, carelesslike. The pinch was deposited back of the bar, but we'd wipe our fingers on a greasy cloth. That cloth grew very heavy during a busy watch, and when it was roasted in a little clay capsule it would leave a little button of gold. See?"

"Great graft, that," remarked one of the other old boys. "What was it worth?"

"Oh, according to the fineness of the dust and the amount of trade. A $10 button was a fair clean up. But those times lasted only a few years. Saloon keepers began getting chemists' scales to weigh the dust in, and storekeepers all began buying dust, so that the miners could change their dust into coin easily, but I cleaned up enough to buy a place of my own, where I made enough to get back to God's country and live."—New York Sun.

AN OUTLAW FORTRESS.

The Cliff From Which the Sizemore Band Shot Down Travelers.

On the left bank of the Holston river, in Hawkins county, Tenn., is a cliff which has some local fame. It is of solid stone, perpendicular from the base up and is something over a hundred feet high. From the top of it the country is visible for miles and miles, affording a grand view of the hill, mountain and stream. A few feet back from the edge are still plainly to be seen the earthworks forming the rendezvous of the celebrated Sizemore and his gang of desperadoes.

From the top of the cliff they commanded a full view of a much used public road, together with two fords above and below, and a great number of hapless soldiers as well as private citizens who had lucklessly incurred their anger fell victims to their unerring rifle bullets as they attempted to pass all unconscious of danger.

Very near this cliff is a little cave at least a mile deep, on the sides of which are written the names of once prominent people who have long since passed away, the dates running back perhaps a hundred years. In one of the caverns is a perfect little table, formed of a flat rock. During the war this cave was used by some soldiers as a place for making saltpeter, the hoppers being still in a state of preservation, the earth looking as if it had been dug but recently.—New York Commercial.

The Elevator Sickness.

"Cases of elevator sickness are on the increase," said Dr. E. C. Knowlton of Chicago. "When physicians first began to claim that there was such a thing as elevator sickness their statements were usually discredited, but it is now becoming well defined. Its effects are found in an increased number of cases of brain fever and disordered nervous systems. Many have felt a sense of emptiness in their heads, a sensation as if they were falling when riding rapidly in an elevator, especially when going down. This creates a dizziness, slight it is true, but the constant repetition of which brings on headaches and often brain fever. If not so serious, then it is felt in the nerves. Those who habitually ride up and down eight or ten stories cannot fail to realize that it is bringing on a disordered condition of the nerves. For this reason elevators should be run slowly, especially when descending."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Cats In Drug Stores.

Who has not noticed the tendency of druggists to have a pet cat as part of the outfit of their establishment? Yet druggists are seldom troubled with rats. To be sure, they sell rodent exterminators to swains and maidens of suicidal tendencies, but then that isn't the fault of the cat, and it appears to be there for ornamental purposes only.

Altogether the apothecary cat is an interesting study. Possibly if Juliet's attention had been attracted to one when she entered the drug store she wouldn't have bought the fatal potion. In the pharmacies of Paris one sees the largest cats in the world—in fact, the cat is about the only pet a druggist can have. The feline representative can walk over a myriad of bottles and never upset one.—New York Herald.

Wild Potatoes In Maine.

A gentleman who claims to know declares there is a flavor in the potatoes that are raised in the clearings in the Maine backwoods not to be found in those growing in the open regions. It is to him like the wild flavor of venison as compared with tame meats. Whether from the new soil the quality comes he knows not, but he thinks as much of getting his wild potatoes when he goes a-hunting as his game, and he hopes the legislature will put no close time on them.—Lewiston Journal.

ABOUT NEW YORK.

Some Buffalo Women Would and Would Not Like to Live There.

There were three of them, and they were going down town together. They sat up at one end of the car and giggled and talked all the way.

"Jack," said the one in the middle, "had a perfectly lovely offer to go to New York and live, but I wouldn't go. I wouldn't live in New York."

"I'd rather live there than anywhere else," said the one nearest the door.

"I wouldn't live there at all," said the third one. Then a conversation like this ensued:

"Well, I wouldn't live in New York."

"Why wouldn't you? I'd just love to live there."

"Oh, you couldn't hire me to live there!"

"No; I wouldn't live there."

"I'd rather live in New York than anywhere else."

"Well, I just wouldn't live there."

"Neither would I."

"I think it's a lovely place to live."

"I don't. I wouldn't live there."

"Neither would I. I wouldn't like to live there at all."

"Why, Jack, my husband, had an offer there, and it was a lovely one. I wouldn't let him go."

"Well, if my husband had any kind of an offer of a position down there, I'd make him go."

"Well, I wouldn't live in New York."

"Couldn't hire me to."

"I'd rather live there than any place in the world."

This sort of thing kept up for two blocks more. Then the fat man who sat in the corner got up, yelled wildly at the conductor and dived for the rear platform.

"What's the matter?" asked the conductor. "Where are you going?"

"Going?" growled the fat man as he jumped off. "I'm going down to the home for feeble minded female children and get my faith in the intelligence of American women restored."—Buffalo Express.

Salt.

The other day the writer saw a young girl upset some salt at the table and then pick up a pinch and throw it over her left shoulder. She said that if she didn't she would quarrel with her best friend. It seemed silly to think that the spilling of the salt was going to make the quarrel, and it seemed just as silly to think that the tossing of some of it in a certain direction was going to help matters. But, like most old superstitions, there is some reason back of it.

Salt, as you know, is a great purifier. It prevents decay, is a tonic and strengthener and is necessary to the health and even to the life of men and animals. The ancients looked upon it as always pure and lasting and made it the token of friendship. Out of this undoubtedly grew the idea that when salt is spilled friendship is broken. The Arabs regard salt as sacred, and a Bedouin in the desert, who would rob and kill you perhaps otherwise, becomes your friend and protector against all enemies if he eats salt with you, his way of offering hospitality.—New York Times.

Free Wool and Fine Clothing.

If wool didn't cost a cent Fine Clothing would still be worth money.

The making of fine fabrics costs more than throwing together shoddy stuff.

Such trimmings as we put into our Suits and Overcoats are expensive.

But after all there isn't much difference between our prices and those asked for common clothing.

TWO-THIRDS MAJORITY

Republican Victory in the House Complete.

Many Prominent Democrats Failed To Be Returned—Morton's Great Plurality in New York State—Views of Prominent Democrats at the Capital.

New York, Nov. 8.—The democrats have not yet recovered from the crushing defeat administered to them by the republicans on Tuesday last. State after state was wrenched from their grasp and republican states simply became more republican.

Pennsylvania cast a great republican majority of over 240,000, the greatest in the history of the Keystone state. In Massachusetts and Ohio the republican vote rolled up to huge figures. Illinois and Wisconsin returned to the fold of the republican party while Kansas and Colorado repudiated the silver and socialist cranks.

The fifty-fourth congress will be republican. As corrected returns come in it becomes more certain that the free traders have been weeded out. So far as now known the next house will stand thus: Republicans 210, democrats 139, populists 7—total 356. Chairman Babcock believes there will be a majority of 80.

MORTON'S PLURALITY 149,000.

The Constitutional Amendments Have All Been Adopted.

New York, Nov. 8.—Official returns filed at county clerks' offices in fifty of the sixty counties in the stae and practically complete returns received from the other ten counties up to midnight give Morton a plurality over Hill of 149,066. In several counties the official returns cannot be obtained owing to one of the missing districts. The vote so far filed shows that the two lieutenant governors ran ahead of their tickets. Saxton by about 750 votes in the state and Lockwood by over 1,500. The increased vote for Lockwood over Hill was undoubtedly due to Lockwood's name being on the Wheeler tickets as well as on the regular democratic ballots. Haight and Brown, for judge of the court of appeals, ran a few votes behind Saxton and Lockwood.

Albany, Nov. 8.—Mr. Morton's election as governor places immense patronage in his hands. Already there are aspirants for many of the principal offices.

It is now in the power of the republican party to secure possession of every office in the state capitol, and in any case where there is a holdover not removable it is in the power of the majority to abolish the office.

All of the constitutional amendments have been carried. The complete figures will not be known until the full vote of each county is canvassed but there have been big pluralities for every one of the amendments all over the state. The approximate majorities for the amendments compiled from the returns received up to midnight are:

For apportionment, 36,100.
For canal improvement, 37,350.
For the revised constitution, 33,230.
For the Kings county judges, 19,800.
For the supreme court justices, 14,130.

There was a close vote on apportionment in the city but that was carried here by about 4,500 and in every county in the state by substantial majorities except Schoharie and Warren counties which went against it. The canal improvement amendment was carried in all except Schoharie, Tioga, Ulster and Yates.

AS VIEWED AT THE CAPITAL.

Prominent Democrats Express Their Opinions on the Result.

Washington, Nov. 8.—Secretary Hoke Smith was at the interior department bright and early. He refused, however, to be interviewed on the subject of the elections.

Postmaster General Bissell was still confined to his house on account of a severe cold, and could not be seen.

Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Maxwell has arrived from Batavia, N. Y., where he voted. He would not talk about the elections.

Assistant Secretary of the Interior Sims, of Mississippi, said: "Well, I suppose the democrats needed chastening at the hands of the people for the way they had worked at cross-purposes in congress during the past twelve months. But I didn't expect we would receive such a severe lambasting. Still democratic principles remain with devoted followers, and I feel sure will attract to them the great mass of democrats who will rally and unite with the party before '96."

President Proctor, of the civil service commission, said, tersely: "Had the party followed President Cleveland it would have been victorious."

Commissioner of Patents Seymour, of Connecticut, had this to say: "This defeat will lead to a very careful study of the causes therefor, and will result in again presenting the question of tariff reform to the people in 1896. As the temporary defeat in 1888 led to more radical reforms, so will this. It is not by any means to be regarded as a permanent conquest by the republican party."

A cabinet officer said: "Who else but Cleveland looms up to-day in the party who can lead with any show of success? He is stronger to-day than ever and the malcontents must come to him. I do not believe he wants the nomination in 1896. I believe he is tired of the presidency, but who is there to look forward to. At the present time no one but Cleveland."

Mill Hands Celebrate.

Little Falls, N. Y., Nov. 8.—For two hours all of the mill whistles in the city and in Dolgeville were blown in honor of the republican victory. The mill hands were allowed to leave their places and participate in a street parade. Last night the streets were illuminated with red fire. A torch-light procession was held and the streets were crowded with people.

McVeagh Lives in a Palace.

Rome, Nov. 8.—Hon. Wayne McVeagh, the United States ambassador to Italy, has lodged his family in the magnificent palace of Prince Plombino.

CHAIRMAN MANLEY SAYS.

The Republicans Must Act Wisely and Cautiously.

New York, Nov. 8.—Joseph H. Manley, chairman of the executive committee of the republican national committee, left the city yesterday for Maine. Before going away Mr. Manley was seen for a few minutes by the representative of the United Press.

"Chairman J. W. Babcock, of the congressional committee, has just telegraphed me that we shall have fully 75 majority in the lower house," said Mr. Manley, "and he shakes some delightful seasoning into his message by assuring me that Messrs. Springer, of Illinois; Holman and Bynum, of Indiana; Wilson, of West Virginia, and Tom L. Johnson, of Ohio, have been defeated. It must be a great surprise to those gentlemen to realize that in a few months they will be in the same condition that many of their constituents have been for the last year or two—out of a job.

"I think, outside of the triumph in New York, I take more pleasure in the fact that the solid south at last is broken. I believe it is the entering wedge and the dawn of reason to that section of the country, and that it will be many days before the southern states again cast a solid vote for the democratic party.

"The large majority which the republicans will have in the next house, and the present indications that the republicans, after March 4, will be able to organize the senate, places an immense responsibility upon the republican leaders in congress. The people of this country do not want any harsh or radical measures, and the lessons which the elections of 1890, 1892 and 1894 have taught us are that the people are quick to resent any improper legislation. We must act wisely and cautiously, and not throw away the opportunity which the voters by their verdict of yesterday have placed in the party's hands."

COLLISION ON THE B. & O.

Engineers, Firemen and Mail Clerks Killed in the Wreck.

Pittsburg, Nov. 8.—A disastrous collision between a passenger and a freight train, resulting in the loss of six lives, occurred at Rosensteel siding, 103 miles east of Pittsburg, on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, at 6 o'clock last evening.

The killed are as follows:

Engineer Henry Bush, of the passenger train.

Fireman McCarthy.

Engineer Browning, of the freight train.

Brakeman Manning, of the freight train.

Two mail clerks, names not known.

The trains wrecked were the Chicago express No. 5, west bound, and the first section of east bound train No. 54, a fast stock train.

The freight train had a time order to reach Pine Grove against the passenger train. Engineer Bush disregarded this order, and this caused the accident.

J. L. Pierce and J. G. DeGrains, two other mail clerks, were injured.

The railroad officials here could not learn the names of the dead postal clerks.

None of the passengers were injured.

Rioting Cloakmakers.

New York, Nov. 8.—A small-sized riot started last evening in Grand street, between the striking cloakmakers and cloakmakers employed by Meyer Jonasson & Co. The operatives, who left Jonasson & Co.'s place at Nos. 152-154 Grand street at 6 p. m., were met on the sidewalk by a crowd of strikers, who shouted at and intimidated the non-union workpeople, whom the company had recently engaged to fill the places of the union strikers. Several of the women came to blows and then the men joined in until about 100 men and women were engaged in a hand-to-hand struggle. A squad of reserves from the Elizabeth street police station made their appearance, however, and quickly dispersed the gathering.

Ex-President Harrison on the Result

Indianapolis, Nov. 8.—In an interview with ex-President Harrison regarding the result of Tuesday's election he said: "It is the most extraordinary political revolution the country has ever witnessed. Wherever there was a free ballot the vote of confidence given in 1892 to the democratic party, if one was given, has been recalled and a vote of utter and final repudiation substituted. The incoherence of the democratic party was revealed the moment power was given to it to deal with national affairs. The insincerity of its platform makers was exposed when 'be it enacted' took the place of 'be it resolved.'"

An Expert Will Decide.

Berlin, Nov. 8.—Germany has agreed to have the American cattle question decided by expert opinion. Translations of reports made by numerous American veterinarians are being prepared to be submitted to the German foreign office, and it is expected they will result to America's advantage, few favoring the theory of unlimited infection.

Shot and Killed by Hoodlums.

Chicago, Nov. 8.—Gus Coleandor, judge of election in the ninth precinct of the twenty-third ward, who was shot early in the morning by a crowd of hoodlums who attempted to steal the ballot-box at that precinct, died at the Alexian Brothers' hospital. The other wounded men are not in a serious condition.

Railroad Securities Go Up.

London, Nov. 8.—American railroad securities were higher on the London stock exchange yesterday. The improvement is attributed to the republican victories.

Cholera Riots at Huszth.

London, Nov. 8.—A dispatch to the Daily News from Vienna says that four were killed and twenty severely wounded in the cholera riots at Huszth.

Testing Explosive Shells.

Washington, Nov. 8.—The last of the Wheeler-Sterling 13-inch explosive shells were tested at Indian Head yesterday, with satisfactory results.

Missing Fishermen Rescued.

Cape May, N. J., Nov. 8.—The eight missing Anglesea fishermen who were carried out to sea, have all been rescued by passing vessels.

THE POPULIST WRECK

The People's Party Badly Broken Up.

Jerry Simpson, Tom Watson, Lafe Pence, Waite and Lewelling All Snowed Under—Populism, However, Has Not Wholly Disappeared. What Old Political Observers Say.

Washington, Nov. 8.—The problem now is what has become of the populists? Throughout the southern states the party seems to have been wiped out. Up to a few weeks ago the outlook was that the populists would poll a great vote especially in Georgia.

Instead of that the returns only emphasize the scarcity of the populists. Tom Watson, their long-winded champion, has been defeated for congress.

In Kansas Jerry Simpson, who seemed to have a grip on his seat in congress, is ordered to stay at home by a decisive majority.

Lewelling, the governor of Kansas, who made himself and the state the laughing stock of the world, is buried under thousands of votes, and Kansas is once more in the hands of the republican party.

Getting to the Rocky mountains the blatant Waite, the man who would wade his horse in blood up to the bridle, is defeated, and Lafe Pence, the dime museum congressman, will not need to stay around Washington after this winter.

The best explanation offered to account for the disappearance of the populist vote is that it had to all intents and purposes been absorbed by the democracy. Most democrats now declare that the old party under its new skipper and crew is now sailing a false course, and that it is all right for populists to be aboard, but no place for democrats.

This absorption, or alliance, is especially true in Kansas and Colorado; in Georgia it is probably due to the instinct that drives the white vote to the democracy in congressional elections.

Populism, however, has not wholly disappeared. Ragged edges showed up here and there in Nebraska, and in Chicago, Missouri and Wisconsin the party displayed some elements of strength.

These votes are probably cast by the old anarchistic element that carried Cleveland through in Illinois and Wisconsin and elected Altgeld governor of Illinois. They undoubtedly selected the populist ticket as the most extreme to be found this year.

Old political observers predict that the populists, as a party, will now practically pass out of existence, as the national greenback party did in 1880, after making a splendid showing in 1878.

Denver, Nov. 8.—In an interview regarding the result in Colorado Gov. Waite said:

"The woman vote was all against me. Our strength was in the mining districts and in those districts women are very scarce. Their influence was principally in the cities which so unalterably opposed me. I believe that is why their vote went so largely against the populists. The women must be educated up to think for themselves and not be controlled by money power as are the men."

"Do you think the populists party will ever be able to regain power?"

"I believe they will, but it may be some time. I do not know exactly how it will be done. I think we will have to do it right over their heads, however. I advocate this being done in a peaceful manner, if possible, a peaceful revolution.

"Of course, I believe the ballot is the proper method to be employed, but this has not proved efficacious in this state."

FOREIGN COMMENT.

Absurd Mistakes Made by the English Newspapers.

London, Nov. 8.—The merchants of Great Britain who may be effected by a change in the United States tariff form te class which takes the greatest interest in American elections. But they are unable to obtain any definite idea of the political situation, owing to the many absurd mistakes made on the subject by the English newspapers. The Star, for instance, says that it is "definitely known that congress will consist of 10 republicans, 133 democrats and 13 populists."

The Globe says, referring to the defeat of Tammany: "It was a particularly obnoxious form of despotism. The defeat of Tammany is a good sign that they are gradually progressing toward freedom and perhaps some day they may arrive at a real self-government."

The St. James Gazette uses the defeat of Tammany as the text of a sermon with which it warns Londoners of several instances having lately revealed that the county councillors were quite as bad as Tammany men. The St. James Gazette, however, says: "It is a far cry from Tammany hall to Spring Gardens, and we do not suggest that there is any sort of resemblance between the Tammanyites and the county councillors. But is desirable to check the faintest beginnings which might lead to similar jobbery here."

Crashed Into a Horse Car.

Philadelphia, Nov. 8.—A passenger train on the Philadelphia & Reading railroad from Chestnut Hill crashed into a horse car at the Nicetown lane crossing. James Connors, driver of the horse car, and William H. Tilton, a passenger, were seriously injured. The accident was caused by the watchman failing to lower the safety gates.

Fell Forty Feet.

Washington, Nov. 8.—A scaffold supporting four painters at work on a building belonging to Thomas F. Richardson and located in the northwestern part of the city, gave way yesterday precipitating the workmen forty feet. W. J. Thecker was almost instantly killed and Joseph O'Brien so badly injured that his life is despaired of.

Republic of Hawaii.

Berlin, Nov. 8.—Germany, through Emperor William, replying to President Dole's official notification, has acknowledged the republic of Hawaii.

Arrington, Nelson Co., Va.

DR. R. V. PIERCE: Sir—Allow me to offer my thanks to you for my good health since using your "Golden Medical Discovery." I was but the shadow of a person, so thin and haggard, without one moment's ease; had suffered for years with my stomach and liver, and this spring had a very severe attack of La Grippe. I then commenced using the "Discovery" and my recovery is wonderful. I am forty-five years old, and feel as well and strong as I did when sixteen years old; my sleep is as sound as an infant's. I remain,

Yours thankfully,

PAIN BANISHED SLEEP.

A RHEUMATIC TELLS A WONDERFUL STORY.

Less Than Half a Bottle of Munyon's New Remedy Restored Him to Health.

James Buckley, 215 Washington street, Newark, N. J., says: "I have been suffering from rheumatism for a number of years. The pains were exceedingly severe and I could not sleep nights. The remedies I obtained did me little or no good, nor did the doctors whom I consulted. This had gone on, each recurring attack being more painful and prolonged than the previous one. I could not get relief until I commenced taking Munyon's Rheumatism Cure. Less than one-half a bottle drove all the rheumatism out of my system and I am as well and strong as I ever was in my life. I consider the remedy a wonderful one and take pleasure in recommending it."

Munyon's Rheumatism Cure is guaranteed to cure rheumatism in any part of the body. Acute or muscular rheumatism cured in from one to five days. It never fails to cure sharp, shooting pains in the arms, legs, sides, back or breast, or soreness in any part of the body in from one to three hours. PEIXOTO WILL BE LOYAL

Would Not Assume the Role of Dictator.

Promises To Support the Administration of President Moraes, Who Will Be Inaugurated on the 15th of November—Reports of Trouble at Rio Exaggerated.

Washington, Nov. 8.—Minister Mendonca denies emphatically the reports from Rio Janerio that President Peixoto purposes setting imself up as dictator of the republic and will for that reason refuse to surrender the reins of office into the hands of the newly elected president, Mr. Moraes, on the 15th instant. If President Peixoto, Senhor Mendonca says, had any intention of playing the role of dictator he would not have consented to the election and would not have raised the state of siege throughout the republic, in order that every citizen might have a chance to cast his ballot. Moreover, Senhor Mendonca continued, the arrangements for the festivities in connection with Moraes' induction into the presidency are now in course of preparation, and the new president will be formally inaugurated one week from to-day.

Peixoto has promised the new chief magistrate of the republic his loyal support during the latter's administration. The confidence of the Brazilian congress in Peixoto is shown by the recent vote of thanks tendered to him by the lower house which was opposed by but twelve members out of the one hundred and thirty in attendance. It is to be expected, Senhor Mendonca says, that the military element of Brazil which has controlled the presidency during the five years succeeding the deportation of Dom Pedro, will dislike to see the reins of authority pass into the hands of a civilian. This element, however, will not attempt an overt act as a result of its dissatisfaction. Peixoto, who was the ranking member of the four field marshals of the Brazilian army before his accession to the presidency, will resume his place in the army as commander-in-chief.

The reported troubles between the military and the police in Rio, Senhor Mendonca says, are greatly exaggerated. Matters are tranquil in Rio as in all of the principal capitals of the republic, but every local disturbance no matter how trifling is distorted by the enemies of Brazil for selfish and political reasons.

TRADE PROSPECTS.

Industrial Operators Now Look for Better Times.

New York, Nov. 8.—The Iron Age to-day says: As the result of the elections an improvement in business is expected by the majority of those who control large industrial operations. That feeling alone may go far toward bringing it about. In calmer mood the somewhat extravagant predictions now current may be withdrawn. But there is very good foundation for the hope of better times to come.

All doubt is now removed concerning any unwise legislation on the currency question, a fact which will tell a good deal with the timid holders of idle money. Then there is the further assurance that there will be no further hostile action on the tariff for a long time to come. With these perplexing questions out of the way capital may begin to look about for a chance to earn good interest instead of being chiefly concerned with the safety of the principal. Many meritorious schemes have been lying dormant since the panic. The time seems to be approaching when some of them may be taken up. We heard lately of instances in which projects have had a hearing which is more than was granted a month or two ago. It is clearer that confidence is growing slowly, and it is the most important fruit of the elections that that process may be quickened in the near future.

Murderer Miles Resentenced.

Watertown, N. Y., Nov. 8.—Henry Miles, the murderer of Mary A. Ward, was brought from Auburn prison to Watertown yesterday and arraigned before Judge Vann, who resentenced him to death, the penalty for his crime to be paid at Auburn prison during the week of Dec. 16. Miles read a plea for himself in which he admitted shooting the woman, although disclaiming any intent to do harm. He wanted the court, the district attorney and the jury to sign a petition to the governor for a commutation of the sentence to imprisonment for life. Judge Vann told him that it would be well for him to prepare for the end, and Miles said he would try to do so.

Nebraska Claimed for Holcomb.

Omaha, Nov. 8.—The gubernatorial contest took on a different aspect at a late hour last night. Advices received gave Majors (rep.) a slight majority over the fusion candidate, Holcomb. When the Holcomb counties commenced to be heard from the Majors figures dwindled. Later the official returns gave Holcomb a plurality of from six to eight hundred in sixty-three counties. The republican committee refused to make a statement. The rest of the state ticket is claimed by the republicans anywhere from 5,000 to 15,000.

Bought 80,000,000 Feet of Lumber.

Duluth, Minn., Nov. 8.—One of the largest pine deals ever made in this part of the country has just been closed. The R. B. Richards Lumber company has bought from M. J. Clark, of Grand Rapids, Mich., all the timber in 48-16, just back of Duluth, amounting to between 80,000,000 and 90,000,000 feet, for $300,000.

Coleman-Drayton Divorce Suit.

Somerville, N. J., Nov. 8.—On Monday Hon. A. A. Clark filed a replication in the Coleman-Drayton divorce suit. The issue is now joined and testimony can be taken at any time the parties agree upon. The testimony will probably be taken in private before a special master in chancery.

Civil War in Peru.

Buenos Ayres, Nov. 8.—It is reported that Gen. Pierola, the leader against the Peruvian government, is making reparations to attack Lima.

THE NEW CZAR.

He Shows a Desire To Make His Reign Popular.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 8.—The Czar is showing great activity in answering the many telegrams of condolence and expressions of loyalty which he received, and the impression prevails that he is trying to demonstrate the fact that he is courteous and genial, and that Russia is extremely loyal. Replying to a message of sympathy and loyalty from the nobles of Moscow, the czar said:

"In union with you I shall find strength to fulfil the arduous duty which has fallen upon me so early, and I shall devote all my power to the service of my dear country."

Berlin, Nov. 8.—In an interview with a Lokalanzeiger reporter aboard the Lemberg-Berlin express Prof. Leyden said regarding the late czar's ailment:

"The post mortem examination established the accuracy of our diagnosis—chronic nephritis, with commencing atrophy of the kidney, secondary enlargement of the heart and sporadic inflammation of the left lung. The stomach was intact. The stories ascribing the czar's illness to poisoning are absolute fiction. I do not consider that Prof. Zacharin is in any way to blame for the result. The czar was perfectly cognizant of his true state, but he was a fatalist and he gave up too early. He performed his duties as ruler to the last moment. He died a hero. The czarina is prostrate, but she is in no danger and will soon recover."

Budapest, Nov. 8.—The lower house of the Hungarian diet has adopted by an overwhelming majority a resolution proposed by Herr Banffy expressing sympathy with Russia on the death of the late czar Alexander III. In the debate some of the left members supported Herr Thaly in opposing the resolution on the ground that Russia had suppresed Hungary's struggle for freedom.

WANTS MILLIONS.

Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt's Compromise With Her Husband.

New York, Nov. 8.—It is understood that an agreement has been reached between Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt whereby a certain sum will be set apart for the latter and suit for divorce begun in Rhode Island in a short time. Colonel William Jay is believed to have brought the negotiations to a final conclusion. He was in the city last week and Mrs. Vanderbilt came on from Newport to see him. She assented to the terms proposed by her husband.

The amount which is offered, and which she will accept in lieu of alimony and dower right, is $3,000,000. This is probably considerably in excess of any that the courts would allow, but as the wife of a modern Croesus it is held that she is entitled to a very large sum. She will also have the legal custody of the two younger children, though the older two are to be allowed to choose between their father and mother.

AMERICANS SEIZED.

Made Prisoners at Kobe by the Japanese.

Yokohama, Nov. 8.—The American passengers who were made prisoners at Kobe by the Japanese, who seized the French steamship Sydney, from Marseilles for this port, on suspicion that she had contrabands of war on board, transhipped from the British steamship Gaelic, from San Francisco, are Messrs. Howie and Brown, while the Chinese passenger is Cham Tam Moore. It is stated that the latter was recently interpreter to the Chinese legation at Washington.

The commander of the Sydney was informed that if he gave up his passengers he might proceed. He refused to do so and a strong force of armed Japanese marines was sent on board the steamship. In spite of the protest of the captain and the French consul the Japanese seized the passengers mentioned and conveyed them as prisoners on board a Japanese warship.

ROW WITH GERMANY.

She Stops Our Cattle—Can't We Stop Her Doctored Wine?

Washington, Nov. 8.—It is understood that Hoke Smith believes the president has authority to retaliate upon Germany for her retaliation in the matter of cattle. The idea is that adulterated food products are imported here from the Fatherland which the president has full power to prohibit.

Said the secretary: "In view of the reports as to adulterated wines which are constantly being shipped from Europe into the United States for the consumption by its citizens, why should it be unfair to require the governments of Germany and France to cause chemical analysis to be made of all wines, brandies and other liquors which are exported for use in the United States, the analysis to be certified to by the proper officers of those two governments?"

Arthur Gives Up.

Cincinnati, Nov. 8.—In the circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit P. M. Arthur, grand chief engineer of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, voluntarily dismissed his appeal from the injunction issued against him by Judge Taft to compel him to rescind his order to members of the brotherhood in the employ of companies to refuse to haul cars of the Toledo, Ann Arbor & North Michigan Railroad company, and restraining him from issuing any further order of the same kind to enforce a boycott.

Jersey's Overthrow.

New York, Nov. 8.—Complete returns from New Jersey show a total overthrow of democracy. About all that the party retains in the state is Gov. Werts, whose term does not expire until next year. The new congressional delegation will be solidly republican. At present the democrats have six out of eight members. The new congressmen, in order of their districts, are H. C. Loudenslager, J. J. Gardner, B. F. Howell, Mahlon Pitney, J. T. Stewart, R. W. Parker, Thomas McEwan and C. N. Fowler.

Preparing His Message.

Washington, Nov. 8.—The president did not come in from Woodley to the white house yesterday, but stayed all day at his country home engrossed in preparing his annual message to congress. Until this is completed he will deny himself to callers, coming into town only for cabinet meetings.

CHINESE IN A TRAP

Pi-Yang Squadron Caught in Port Arthur.

Japanese Advancing Rapidly in the Rear of the Port, and They Have a Strong Fleet Outside the Harbor—Correspondence Brought by the Steamer Belgic.

London, Nov. 8.—A dispatch to the Pall Mall Gazette from Chee-Foo says the Japanese land and sea forces made a simultaneous and vigorous attack upon Port Arthur. The Chinese fleet is inside the harbor.

The correspondent of the Central News at Shanghai says that rumors are persistently circulated there that the Pi-Yang squadron is in Port Arthur. If these rumors are founded on fact it must be that the fleet went there under orders received direct from Pekin, as Li Hung Chang would never have allowed the squadron to be caught in such a trap.

The Chinese report that the Japanese are rapidly advancing in the rear of Port Arthur, and that a strong Japanese fleet, including thirty torpedo boats, is outside the harbor. It is expected that Port Arthur and the Chinese fleet will fall into the hands of the enemy.

Japanese reports from New-Schwang state that deserters from the Chinese army are arriving there by fifties, and that a great panic exists among the Chinese, hundreds of whom are leaving by every steamship.

The Japanese flying squadron is reported to be a hundred miles off New-Schwang, and the Chinese there are reshipping their goods, considering it unsafe to remain there during the coming winter.

Tokio, Oct. 20, per steamer Belgic (correspondence of the United Press).

The Korean peninsula has now been cleared of Chinese troops from end to end. Japan, by a very striking object lesson has demonstrated the justice of her contention, that, so far as it concerned Chinese tutelage, Korea's security against foreign invasion was a myth. Ujina is a port five miles from Hiro-Shima, a town on the inland sea, where the emperor of Japan, as commander-in-chief of the military and naval forces, has established his headquarters.

Hiroshima was chosen for the purposes because it is the most southerly point to which the main trunk railway of Japan has been pushed. Troops and stores from every part of the empire reach it by rail. The harbor at Ujina is capable of accommodating fifty or sixty large steamers and between Ujina and Hiroshima a military railway has been built. On the 18th of October last a great flotilla of Japanese transports steamed out of Ujina. They carried a corps d'armee aggregating 22,000 combatants with all their equipment, ambulance, military train, artillery, etc. The flotilla, heading to the northwest, steered for the entrance of the Pechili gulf to attack simultaneously Port Arthur and Wei-Hai-Wei. At this moment, the flotilla is probably disembarking its freight. Port Arthur and Wei-Hai-Wei are China's only fortified harbors in the northern part of the empire. Their works of defense were planned by German engineers and they enjoy the reputation of being impregnable. Port Arthur has docks capable of receiving big iron clads and is an important naval depot. The Japanese troops will attack both places from the land side and it may be predicted that they will take them. In that case the gulf of Pechili and therefore the maritime approaches to Pekin will be completely commanded by Japan. Another contingency, too, is involved. The Chinese fleet will have to fight. During the early stages of the war the ships of the northern squadron lay secure under the big guns of Port Arthur and Wei-Hai-Wei. Once they were caught at sea, Sept. 17, when returning from the Yalu river whither they had convoyed a flotilla of transports, tey encountered the Japanese squadron and lost five of their number. The remnant escaped to Port Arthur and there underwent repairs. Now they must emerge once more to do battle and such of them as are not sunk or taken will have to choose between flying south and abandoning the duty of defending the route to Pekin or entering the gulf of Pechili and awaiting in exposed positions the attack of the Japanese squadrons. China is on the eve of a great disaster. The Japanese troops will have thirty-seven miles to march from their point of landing to Port Arthur. On the way they must capture Cin-Chin, a walled city and twenty-five miles farther on they will find themselves at the base of the hills overlooking the inlet at the head of which Port Arthur lies. The hills are from 350 feet to 650 feet high and their crests and passages are fortified with considerable skill. Within their encircling arms are twelve batteries equally distributed on either side of the entrance to the Port. These batteries extend over more than four miles of seaboard and are armed with forty Krupp guns together with rifled mortars. It is a tough nut that awaits the Japanese forces, but they will crack it. The Chinese prisoners of war have begun to arrive in Japan. They are distinguished by dirt and dejection. The Japanese crowds laugh at them as they pass but make no demonstrations of rancour. The wounded are tended with the utmost kindness and care and the treatment of the whole is markedly humane.

Murder Follows a Family Row.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Nov. 8.—Charles Baker and his wife, of Tivoli, had a quarrel at their home at that place yesterday afternoon when the husband caught up a double-barrelled shotgun and discharged both barrels at his wife, both shots taking effect. The injured woman ran out of the house and dropped dead. Baker was intoxicated. After committing the deed, he rushed out of the house and disappeared up the Hudson River Railway track, and at last accounts had not been captured. A domestic in the house was witness to the shooting. The murdered woman leaves several small children.

The WREN in Business

It is characteristic of the Wren that it will sneak in and occupy the nest made by another bird, in preference to building one of its own. This same trait is often seen in business. It is shown by the imitators of

COTTOLENE

No sooner has the wonderful merit of this new vegetable shortening, so much better than lard, created for it a remarkable sale and popularity, than the business wrens are ready to move upon the market with many worthless counterfeits. Any housekeeper can be easily and cheaply convinced of the value of COTTOLENE by simply giving it a trial. They will then be unwilling to go back to lard, or go down to fraudulent imitations.

THE UNDERTAKERS.

BY RUDYARD KIPLING.

[Copyright, 1894, by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.]

Once a ripple came to land
In the golden sunset burning—
Lapped against a maiden's hand,
By the ford returning.

Dainty foot and gentle breast—
Once across be glad and rest.
"Maiden, wait," the ripple saith;
"Wait awhile, for I am Death!"

"Where my lover calls I go—
Shame it were to treat him coldly—
'Twas a fish that circled so,
Turning over boldly."

Dainty foot and tender heart,
Wait the loaded ferry cart.
"Wait, ah wait!" the ripple saith;
"Maiden, wait, for I am Death!"

"When my lover calls I haste—
"Dame Disdain was never wedded!"
Ripple—ripple round her waist,
Clear the current eddied.

Foolish heart and faithful hand,
Little feet that touched no land.
Far away the ripple fled,
Ripple—ripple—running red!
—Translation.

"Respect the aged!"

It was a thick voice—a muddy voice that would have made you shudder—a voice like something soft breaking in two. There was a quaver in it, a creak and a whine.

"Respect the aged! Oh, companions of the River—respect the aged!"

Nothing could be seen on the broad reach of the river except a little fleet of square-sailed, wooden-pinned barges, loaded with building-stone, that had just come under the railway-bridge, and were driving down stream. They put their clumsy helms over to avoid the sand-bar made by the scour of the bridge-piers, and as they passed, three abreast, the horrible voice began again:

"Oh, Brahmins of the River—respect the aged and infirm!"

A boatman turned where he sat on the gunwale, lifted up his hand, said something that was not a blessing, and the boats creaked on through the twilight. The broad Indian river, that looked more like a chain of little lakes than a stream, was as smooth as glass; reflecting the sandy-red sky in mid-channel, but splashed with patches of yellow and dusky purple near and under the low banks. Little creeks ran into the river in the wet season, but now their dry mouths hung clear above water-line. On the left shore, and almost under the railway-bridge, stood a mud-and-brick-and-thatch-and-stick village, whose main street, full of cattle going back to their byres, ran straight to the river, ending in a sort of rude brick pier-head, where people who wanted to wash could wade in step by step. That was the ghaut whence the village of Mugger-Ghaut took its name.

"BUT THAT WHICH WE HAVE JUST HEARD IS WISDOM."

Night was falling fast over the fields of lentils and rice and cotton in the low-lying ground yearly flooded by the river; over the reeds that fringed the elbow of the bend, and the tangled low jungle of the grazing-grounds behind the still reeds. The parrots and crows, who had been chattering and shouting over their evening drink, had flown inland to roost, crossing the outgoing battalions of the flying-foxes; and cloud upon cloud of water-birds came whistling and "honking" to the cover of the reed-beds. There were geese, barrel-headed and black-backed, teal, widgeon, mallard and sheldrake, with curlews, and, here and there, a flamingo.

A lumbering adjutant-crane brought up the rear, flying as though each stroke would be his last.

"Respect the aged! Brahmins of the River—respect the aged!"

The adjutant half-turned his head, sheered a little in the direction of the voice, and landed stiffly on the sand-bar below the bridge. Then you saw what a ruffianly brute he really was. His back view was immensely respectable, for he stood nearly six feet high, and looked rather like a very proper bald-headed parson. In front it was different, for his Ally Sloper-like head and neck had not a feather to them, and there was a horrible raw-skin pouch on his neck under his chin—a hold-all for the things his pick-ax beak could capture. His legs were long and thin and skinny, but he moved them delicately, and looked at them with pride as he preened down his ashy-gray tail-feathers, glanced over the smooth of his shoulder, and stiffened into "Stand at attention."

A mangy little jackal, who had been yapping hungrily on a low bluff, cocked up his ears and tail, and scuttered across the shallows to join the adjutant.

He was the lowest of his caste—not that the best of jackals are good for much, but this one was peculiarly low, being half a beggar, half a criminal—a cleaner-up of village rubbish-heaps, desperately timid or wildly bold, everlastingly hungry, and full of cunning that never did him any good.

"Ugh!" he said, shaking himself dolefully as he landed. "May the red mange destroy the dogs of this village! I have three bites for each flea upon me, and all because I looked—only looked, mark you—at an old shoe in a cow-byre. Can I eat mud?" He scratched himself under his left ear.

"I heard," said the adjutant, in a voice like a blunt saw going through a thick board—"I heard there was a new-born puppy in that same shoe."

"To hear is one thing; to know is another," said the jackal, who had a very fair knowledge of proverbs, learned by listening to men round the fires of an evening.

"Quite true. So, to make sure, I took care of that puppy while the dogs were busy elsewhere."

"They were very busy," said the jackal. "Well, I must not go to the village hunting for scraps yet awhile. And so there truly was a blind puppy in that shoe?"

"It is here," said the adjutant, squinting over his beak at his full pouch. "A small thing, but acceptable now that charity is dead in the world."

"Ahai! The world is iron in these days," wailed the jackal. Then his restless eye caught the least possible ripple on the water, and he went on quickly: "Life is hard for us all, and I doubt not that even our excellent master, the pride of the ghaut and the envy of the river—"

"A liar, a flatterer and a jackal were all hatched out of the same egg," said the adjutant to nobody in particular; for he was rather a fine sort of a liar on his own account when he took the trouble.

"Yes, the Envy of the River," the jackal repeated, raising his voice. "Even he, I doubt not, finds that since the bridge has been built good food is more scarce. But, on the other hand, though I would by no means say this to his noble face, he is so wise and so virtuous—as I, alas! am not—"

"When the jackal owns he is gray how black must the jackal be," muttered the adjutant, who could not see what was coming.

"That his food never fails, and in consequence—"

There was a soft grating sound as though a boat had just touched in shoal water. The jackal spun round quickly and faced (it is always best to face) the creature he had been talking about. It was a twenty-four foot crocodile, cased in what looked like treble-riveted boiler plate, studded and keeled and crested; the yellow points of his upper teeth just overhanging his beautifully fluted lower jaw. It was the blunt-nosed mugger of Mugger-Ghaut, older than any man in the village, who had given his name to the village; the demon of the ford before the railway bridge came—murderer, man-eater, and local fetish in one. He lay with his chin in the shallows, keeping his place by an almost invisible ripple of his tail, and well the jackal knew that one stroke of that same tail in the water could carry the mugger up the bank with the rush of a steam engine.

"Auspiciously met, Protector of the Poor," he fawned, backing at every word. "A delectable voice was heard, and we came in the hopes of sweet conversation. My tailless presumption, while waiting here, led me, indeed, to speak of thee. It is my hope that nothing was overheard."

Now, the jackal had spoken just to be listened to, for he knew flattery was the best way of getting things to eat, and the mugger knew that the jackal had spoken for this end, and the jackal knew that the mugger knew, and the mugger knew that the jackal knew that the mugger knew, and so they were all very contented together.

The old brute pushed and panted and grunted up the bank, mumbling: "Respect the aged and infirm!" and all the time his little eyes burned like coals under the heavy horny eyelids on the top of his triangular head, as he shoved his bloated barrel body along between his crutched legs. Then he settled down, and, accustomed as the jackal was to his ways, he could not help starting, for the hundredth time, when he saw how exactly the mugger imitated a log adrift on the bar. He had even taken pains to lie at the exact angle a naturally stranded log would make with the water, having regard to the current of the season at the time and place. All this was purely mechanical, of course, because the mugger had come ashore for pleasure; but a crocodile is never quite full, and if the jackal had been deceived by the likeness he would not have lived to philosophize over it.

"My child, I heard nothing," said the mugger, shutting one eye. "The water was in my ears, and also I was faint with hunger. Since the railway-bridge was built my people at my village have ceased to love me; and that is breaking my heart."

"Ah! shame!" said the jackal. "So noble a heart, too! But men are all alike to my mind."

"Nay; there are very great differences, indeed," the mugger answered, gently. "Some are as lean as boat poles. Others, again, are as fat as young ja— dogs. Never would I causelessly revile men. They are of all fashions, but the long years have shown me that, one with another, they are very good. Men, women and children—I have no fault to find with them. And remember, child, he who rebukes the world is rebuked by the world."

"Flattery is worse than an empty tin can in the belly. But that which we have just heard is wisdom," said the adjutant, bringing down one foot.

"Consider, though, their ingratitude to this excellent one," began the jackal, tenderly.

"Nay! nay! not ingratitude!" the mugger said. "They do not think for others, that is all. But I have noticed, lying at my station below the ford, that the stairs of the new bridge are cruelly hard to climb, both for old people and young children. The old, indeed, are not so worthy of consideration, but I am grieved—I am truly grieved—on account of the children. Still, I think, in a little while, when the newness of the bridge has worn away, we shall see my people's bare brown legs bravely splashing through the ford as before. Then the old mugger will be honored again."

"But surely I saw marigold wreaths floating off the edge of the ghaut only this noon," said the adjutant. Marigold wreaths are a sign of reverence all India over.

"An error—an error. It was the wife of the sweetmeat-seller. She loses her eyesight year by year, and cannot tell a log from me—the mugger of the Ghaut. I saw the mistake when she threw the garland, for I was lying at the very foot of the ghaut, and had she taken another step I could have shown her some little difference. Yet she meant well, and we must consider the spirit of her offering."

"What good are marigold wreaths when one is on the rubbish heap?" said the jackal, hunting for fleas, but keeping one wary eye on his Protector of the Poor.

"True, but they have not yet begun to make the rubbish heap that shall carry me. Five times have I seen the river draw back from the village and make new land at the foot of the street. Five times have I seen the village rebuilt on the banks, and I shall see it built yet five times more. I am no faithless, fish-hunting gavial, I, at Kasi to-day and Prayag to-morrow, as the saying is, but the true and constant watcher of the ford. It is not for nothing, child, that the village bears my name, and 'he who watches long,' as the saying is, 'shall at last have his reward.'"

"I have watched long—very long—nearly all my life, and my reward has been bites and blows," said the jackal.

"Ho! Ho! Ho!" roared the adjutant.

"In August was the jackal born,
The rains fell in September;
'Now such a fearful flood as this.'
Says he, 'I can't remember!'"

There is one very unpleasant peculiarity about the adjutant. At uncertain times he suffers from acute attacks of the fidgets or cramp in his legs, and though he is more virtuous to behold than any of the cranes, who are all immensely respectable, he flies off into wild, cripple-stilt war-dances, half opening his wings and bobbing his bald head up and down; while for reasons best known to himself he is very careful to time his worst attacks with his nastiest remarks. At the last word of his song he came to attention again, ten times adjutanter than before.

IMPS AND FAIRIES.

Mother Goose and Much Music Make Glad a Dunellen Audience.

The entertainment in the Dunellen Presbyterian Church last night was largely attended, and greatly relished. The music, dialogues and tableaux were all good, fairies, imps and Mother Goose characters all being capitally impersonated. The Ladies Orchestra of Plainfield gave excellent selections between acts, and the leading parts were taken by the following: Sadie Tilton, Julia Dodwell, Lottie Carman, Maggie Van Arsdale, Lizzie Martine, Ethel Boice, Asa Huff, Willie Dealaman, Arthur Craig, Percy Abbott, Maude Benton, Marguerite Nelson, Edith Tilton, Helen Maire, Elsie Gillespie, John Tingley, Ernest Peters, Percy Ising, Michael Moynihan, Freddie Warden, Lizzie Hertich, Freddie Touzeau, Charlie Vliet, Grover Kratzel, Willie Beekman, Irving Martine, Herbert Wyckoff, Walter Bodine, Edna Vail, Eddie Huff, Willie Kennedy, Edna Coriell, Alice Apgar, David Kulidoshes, Fred Hyler, Pearlie Dodwell, Elsie Peters, Carrie Wyhueky, Mary Baldwin, Edna M. BORN NEAR PLAINFIELD.

On Her 100th Birthday, Mrs. Beckhorn is Hale and Chipper.

Mrs. Caroline Beckhorn celebrated her 100th birthday yesterday at the home of her granddaughter, Mrs. Robt. A. Pedrick, 73 West Kinney street, Newark. Mrs Beckhorn was born at Turkey, now New Providence, over the mountain, Nov. 8, 1794, and was the last of four children, all of whom died under 55 years of age. Mrs. Beckhorn lived in Brooklyn from the time of her marriage to Joseph Beckhorn in 1811 up to about twenty years ago, and nearly all of her relatives live in that city now. Of her surviving children Mrs. Mary Crane of Brooklyn is 82 years old. Mrs. Parker of the same city is 76, and her three sons are 64, 74, and 80.

There were fifty members of the family at the reunion last evening, and Rev. Dr. Frazer, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, which she attends regularly, made a long and entertaining address. Mrs. Beckhorn thoroughly enjoyed the reunion. She is as lively as a woman of 40 years, her hearing is good, and her sight only slightly defective. Her memory is so little impaired that only occurrences of the last two or three years are forgotten. She remembers many very trifling things which occurred in her earlier life.

Amendment, That's the Thing:

New York State has adopted the constitutional amendment that drives all the pool-sellers and book-makers and gamblers out of business. They will come over into New Jersey if they are not prevented, and the Elizabeth Journal gives timely warning that it behooves the people of the State to adopt a constitutional amendment like that of New York State. It may be said by some that this is unnecessary, since the courts have made strong decisions and the Legislature will not pass laws legitimatizing these pernicious acts. But it is much safer to have a constitutional amendment, for then the Legislature can't legitimatize the business even if they would, and if once such an amendment is adopted by the people they would never change it. So that such an amendment embodied in the Constitution would be everlasting, and no Legislature could change it. Let the amendment go before the people at the earliest possible moment. They are now in the spirit to make it a permanent part of the State's fundamental charter.

Blessed Indeed is Such a Memory.

It was with much regret that The Press announced the death of Mrs. Jane Ann Marsh, widow of the late Dr. Seymour N. Marsh and mother of Seymour Marsh late of this city. Mrs. Marsh passed away November 5, at the ripe age of 85 years to receive the reward of a consistent practical Christian life, and while earth is made the poorer by the loss of such a living example Heaven is made the richer; yet her kind words and good deeds will remain long in the memory of many whom she comforted and befriended. Mrs. Marsh left behind her here three sons and two daughters, one of whom is the wife of Edward L. Morris, late of Plainfield.

From Mariners' Temple.

Miss A. M. Collishaw from Mariners' Temple, New York, will address the Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist Church this evening at 8. It is the earnest desire of the speaker and of the Society that a large representation of the Christian Endeavor Societies and the King's Daughters Circles be present, and all interested in the work.

SCHOOL BOARD AN ISSUE

The People's Will Must Not Be Overthrown.

CANDIDATES SHOULD BE PLEDGED.

This Question Is of Great Moment to the Taxpayers, and Should Be Settled at the Polls in the Approaching Municipal Election.

The announcement exclusively made in The Daily Press last night that the School Board fight in which the people scored so notable a victory is likely to be gone all over again, caused a sensation among the citizens. It had been supposed that the Board had accepted the situation and would make no further opposition to the wishes of the mass of taxpayers as expressed through Mayor Gilbert, E. R. Pope, The Daily Press and others. The news given in The Press last night has awakened the public to the imminent likelihood of renewal of the conflict.

The Press stated yesterday that Messrs. Probasco and Lovell were the retiring members, and that an effort was being made by opponents of the new School Board law to have them re-elected. Feeling that the exact position of such good men ought not to be misunderstood, The Press last night sought interviews with them. Both were asked if they would pledge themselves concerning the matter.

Dr. Probasco would state nothing for publication, but said that the statement that he was anxious for reelection was untrue and that he regarded yesterday's publication as an outrageous attack on his personal character.

Mr. Lovell, however, made the following statement:

"Dr. Probasco is thoroughly acquainted with the needs of the schools. He has devoted a great deal of time to the care of their interests, so that he is familiar with the details of their operations. He has not only always been present at the meetings, but has visited the schools daily.

"One who has thus made himself thoroughly familiar with this particular work should not be replaced by a new man who would be obliged to learn all that Dr. Probasco knows and who after he learns would not be liable to render any better service.

As for myself, I have no particular desire in regard to the matter. While I am deeply interested in all educational matters and have found the work, so far as I have been able to attend to it, quite congenial to my taste, yet nevertheless I am not disposed to make an effort to retain the position I now hold in the Board. If there is any considerable opposition and I can ascertain that fact before the convention, I shall probably decline to permit my name to be used.

"The question of the constitutionality of the act passed has not been determined and until that question is decided the Board does not know what its action ought to be. No doubt if the law is found to be constitutional the Board will request the Common Council to make appropriations, to be expended either on the present buildings or in erecting a new one. If the bill is unconstitutional the Board possesses all the powers it has hitherto supposed belonged to it. It is not probable that the question will be decided until after the new Board is elected.

"The Board has an opinion from as good counsel as could be obtained that the act referred to is unconstitutional. There is no third member of the Board who can claim to be independent. Whatever action has been taken in the Board of Education has been by unanimous vote."

The Press has said nothing, and has nothing to say, personally against Dr. Probasco or Mr. Lovell, or any other member of the School Board. They are known as good men, but even the best men may be mistaken in a matter of public policy. The Press is in position to know the wishes of the people in the matter of the Wadsworth property and the High School mansion project, and knows that the victory of Mayor Gilbert and the other representative citizens who fought the proposed extravagance was a great public satisfaction and relief among the taxpayers.

It is therefore with alarm that the people view the prospect of having the project revived. The people of Plainfield feel their school system was a large expense last year and this. They feel that while they are undergoing the construction of sewers the mansion project can well afford to wait. The old claim is reasserted that the Wadsworth purchase was an unnecessary extravagance and that if more school room is needed the old buildings ought to be enlarged on land already owned, as was done so successfully in North Plainfield.

The Press has already told of the plan to make Mayor Gilbert's re-election unanimous. Casting politics aside in the best interests of the community, the Democracy was preparing to join with the Republicans in sustaining Mayor Gilbert's renomination because of his splendid public service. Mr. Gilbert made a brave and manly stand on the School Board issue, and won the fight and the people's gratitude. He established to the satisfaction of the New Jersey Legislature the policy which The Daily Press championed and which the other Plainfield newspapers opposed, and the bill for which he fought became a law. That bill in no way hampered the School Board in its administration of local educational matters. It merely restricted expenditures to a reasonable amount, and called for joint action by both School Board and Common Council in large appropriations. The people of Plainfield felt it to be a just protective measure. Mr. Gilbert had announced his willingness to put the question to popular vote; the School Board would not agree to this.

What The Press and the people want from all candidates for School Board membership is a pledge on this matter. Unless the regular Republican candidates are pledged to abide by the present law there will doubtless be a citizens ticket in the field, and the one issue before the people will be the School Board matter. It will be too bad if the pleasant prospect of good-citizenship union in support of the officials who merit re-election to complete their good work in public improvements is thus to be blighted by a revival of an issue the people hoped was settled.

That the School Board has in contemplation a reversal of the new law has been indicated from time to time to careful observers, and Mr. Lovell's own statement gives impression that the Board has all along been considering the successful evasion of the act and will strive to abolish it after election

If Messrs. Probasco and Lovell, who aside from this one issue would win favor for reelection from a large majority of the people, will not openly announce their willingness to abide by the popular victory as expressed in the new law, they and their friends must not be surprised to find this one issue defeating them.

The Enterprising Pennsylvania Plans a New Branch Road and Station.

Princeton, Nov. 9.—The College of New Jersey is at last to have better railroad facilities.

The old branch road from Princeton Junction has long been felt to be inadequate to the wants of the college, and agitation for a new road has been going on for a number of years. Surveys have now been completed, estimates are all in, and contracts will soon be awarded.

The Pennsylvania Railroad has determined upon this move, on account of the enormous increase in attendance of late years at football and baseball games and commencement exercises. Freight has also shown an increase of 50 per cent.

The new road will terminate in an elaborate and handsome new station, further south of the old site, at the lower entrance of the new Brokaw Memorial Athletic Field. The ground left vacant by the removal of the old station and car yard will be filled in and added to the west campus. The plan of the new road meets with the hearty support of both faculty and townspeople.

UNGALLANT JERSEY!

Since the State Has Gone Republican, Her Judges Say Women Shan't Vote.

Trenton, Nov. 9.—Justice Dixon of the Supreme Court yesterday handed down a decision in the Vineland school case, which involved the right of women to vote at school elections. The decision is that "school trustees are officers within article 2, paragraph 1 of the constitution, so that if they are made elective by the people only males can vote for them".

Justices Abbet and Reed sat with Justice Dixon in the case, and they concur in his opinion.

The Membership Committee presented the names of 41 persons who applied for regular or class membership.

The Room Committee reported that the rooms of the association had been used quite extensively for charitable purposes.

LEPIDOPTERA TEA.

EVEN THE ICE-CREAM WAS SERVED AS BUTTERFLIES.

Novel and Delightful Idea Charmingly Carried Out by Plainfield Society Women.

The elegant home of Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Herring was the scene yesterday of a Lepidoptera tea, and the event was a beautiful fulfilment of a novel idea.

In response to dainty invitations adorned with hand-painted butterflies, more than 100 women attended, representative of the leading families of the town.

Butterflies were thoroughly discussed. A paper on Lepidoptera by Mrs. Herring showed thorough knowledge of the interesting species. Prof Smith of Rutgers College made an edifying address, Mrs. Alexander Gilbert read a paper adding valuable knowledge to that already imparted, and Dr. Skimmer of Philadelphia told of the Lepidoptera of Pennsylvania.

The papers and addresses were followed by a social tea, at which the Lepidoptera idea was gracefully carried out by the serving of ice-cream in the form and color of butterflies.

KICKED BY A HORSE.

John Keiderling's Head Cut Open by an Iron Shod Hoof.

John Keiderling, who lives above F. A. Pope's stables on West Sixth street, narrowly escaped being killed by a horse at 4 yesterday afternoon. He was clipping Wm. T. Kirk's trotter at the time.

While he was standing in front of the horse it raised on its hind legs and began to paw with its fore legs. Before Keiderling could get away he was struck on the head and shoulders by the horse's hoofs. His head was badly cut and his arms and shoulders bruised. He fainted from loss of blood. Dr. H. H. Lowrie attended him and dressed his wounds.

This morning the clipping was continued by Keiderling and his helpers. The horse was thrown, and its feet were securely tied together before the men ventured to begin work.

Lawrence-Baldwin.

The wedding of Miss Carrie Napier, charming daughter of H. P. Baldwin, General Passenger Agent of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, to Warrington Gillette Lawrence of New York, took place at 7 Wednesday evening in St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Roselle, Rev. Dr. Goodwin, Chaplain at Governor's Island, officiating.

Frank Drake of Newark was the organist. Miss Marie Wolf of Roselle was maid of honor, the Misses D. Howe of Roselle and Marian Hitchcok of Scranton acted as bridesmaids, each carrying bouquets of roses. Dorsey Lawrence, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. The ushers were Charles Goodwin of Baltimore, Drew Thomas and Addison Woodhull of Newark, and Frederick Hayward of New York.

The church was prettily decorated with potted palms and chrysanthemums. A reception and supper followed at the home of Mr. Baldwin on Chestnut street. Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence will sail Saturday on the Fulda. On their return they will make their home in New York.

Snyder—Stites.

Last evening at the residence of the bride's mother, 528 West Front street, Miss Anna L. Stites and Frederick Snyder were united in holy matrimony, Rev. B. W. Hand officiating. John W. Vroom acted as best man, and Miss Sarah Perrine as bridemaid. After the marriage service the guests were invited to partake of a fine collation, and festivities were kept up until early morning. Henry Perrine and Jacob Overland furnished music, and everyone danced with the bride.

Don't Shoot Till Monday.

For the benefit of sportsmen who wish to keep within the law, The Press repeats that it is now illegal to shoot quail or rabbits except between Nov. 10 and Dec. 16. Those two dates are not included. Legal gunning cannot begin till Nov. 11, and as that date this year is Sunday hunters must be patient till next Monday morning. Then bang away.

Tract Board Meeting.

The next regular meeting of the Tract Board will take place in this city Nov. 11, at 2:15 p. m. The Publishing House interests will probably be under consideration, and the Board desire all the light and aid they can have in the final decisions as to location and management.

Red Men's Celebration.

It is expected that the warriors degree will be worked on three in Miantonomoh Tribe this evening. A representative will be selected to attend the convention in Trenton at which the date and place of the next Red Men's Day celebration will be selected.

What's the Matter with Winton?

The question that now worries Republican organs is, "Who will be the Democratic leader in the next House of Assembly in this State?"

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTISTS.

Their Yearly Meeting in New Market.

GATHERED FROM ALL JERSEY.

The Quaint Old Church Richly Decorated—Cordial Welcome by Pastor Peterson—Dr. Lewis Makes a Stirring Address.

In the quaint old church of the demonination in New Market this morning began the yearly meeting of the Seventh-Day Baptist Churches of the State. According to custom the meeting would open tonight, but this year a change was made and sessions for the discussion of Sabbath-school matters was arranged for today.

The decorations in the church were beautiful. The pulpit and the platform were covered with masses of the most exquisite chrysanthemums of every color and variety from the conservatory of Mrs. W. J. Davis of New Market. Mrs Davis and Miss Lulu Davis had arranged them very tastefully. Large rosettes of evergreen adorned the base of the gallery.

The morning session commenced with a short devotional service. Then the visitors were welcomed in a most cordial manner by the pastor of the local church, Rev. F. E. Peterson. Besides representatives of the various churches there were present the following pastors of the denomination: Rev. J. G. Burdick of New York, Rev. I L. Cottrell of Shiloh, Rev. J. C. Bowen of Marlborough, Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis of Plainfield, and Rev. F. E. Peterson of New Market; and also Rev. W. C. Kinsey of the local Methodist Church and Rev. Frank Fletcher of the Baptist Church.

Pastor Peterson's address was responded to by Rev. S. L. Cottrell. Reports from all the Sabbath-schools were informally made by the ministers present. A general realization of the importance of effective methods and faithful teachers was show by the speakers.

The address of the morning was made by Rev. Dr. Lewis on "The Training of Children". He spoke, in short, as follows:

The training referred to in the subject is, of course, the religious training of children. You all have heard what the late Dr. Holmes said when he was asked when the training of a child should begin, "at least a hundred years before he is born". This history of all religions shows the truth of this, the Protestant religion in a bad way.

The fathers of some of those present never had these advantages in Bible study that we enjoy until they founded the schools themselves. The heathen nations have always been familiar with their Scriptures. In the early days of the Christian church the study of the Bible was greatly neglected.

Then came the Catholics, who taught not the Bible but the catechism and much of tradition borrowed from the Pagans. But all the great religions are recognizing their duty to teach the child. The Hebrews stand first of all the denominations of the world in the training of children.

Dr. Holmes was right. The most important assistant of the church is the home. The schools are simply making better homes by making children better and thus making the parents of the next generation better. The child's training should begin early. We must recognize the fact that the child's heart should be educated as soon as his hand.

A few years ago 15, 18 or 20 years was considered early for young people to enter the church. It is changed now. I have received into the church from 8 to 12 years and if I had my way about it no children would pass their twelfth year without joining the church. Religious training should begin before the first year has passed. People say children cannot understand. But obedience is taught early and it is one of the fundamental principles of religion.

An important feature of child-training is the setting of a good example. If religion is never discussed in the home while other subjects are continually how can we expect children to become earnest Christians? It is the home that builds up the character of children, not the half-hour they weekly spend in Sabbath-school.

In the school also there is a great opportunity for training children, which is often neglected. Too much time is wasted in considering dates and historical happenings when lessons of religion should be taught. Let the geography and the history of the Bible give way to practical teachings on points which will serve to make your scholars better boys and girls.

The Bible is nothing to us except as it is a character building book. We do not care about when it was written or the details of its authorship so much as we do about extending the influence of what it teaches. No one can teach its lessons properly who does not in his or her own life show a good example to the boys and girls. Whatever your method, train the children wisely and well, and in the deeds and the lives of the next generation will be shown the results of your efforts.

After Dr. Lewis had finished speaking Mr. Bowen announced that the topics of the open parliament on "How should Sabbath-school teachers prepare for teaching the lesson" which had been postponed until this afternoon, would touch upon the importance of teachers' meetings, the question of bringing lesson helps to the class and the steady study of the lessons.

The session was then adjourned with pronouncing of the benediction by Rev. Frank Fletcher. The visitors were entertained at dinner by members of the congregation. The committee in charge of their entertainment consists of Mrs. W. J. Davis, chairman, H. V. Dunham, H. E. Boice, Miss Jennie Larkin, A. W. Vars, Miss Lulu Davis and Miss Lizzie Boice.

A BIG METEOR.

THAT'S WHAT MADE THE EXPLOSION WEDNESDAY NIGHT.

The Phenomenon Observed in Many Places Besides Plainfield, and Caused Alarm Everywhere.

The explosion which alarmed so many Plainfielders Wednesday night proves to have been caused by a meteor. The fog prevented most people from seeing the celestial visitor, only a general glare prevailing previous to the rumble. This glare was so bright that D. C. Skaden who, going home from a Baptist meeting, had just taken out his bunch of keys in the dark to unlock his front door, was enabled to see the keyhole distinctly by it.

Elder Bach and family, returning home from the German fair in Thorn's Block, saw the course of the meteor through a rift in the fog. It had the appearance of a yellow shaft of light, which darted nearly half-way across the heavens, and was followed by a fiery explosion, which was bigger and brighter and more variously colored than any Fourth of July fireworks they ever saw. This fiery explosion was followed in turn by a booming report, as if a ton of dynamite had been shot off in a blast at a distance of some miles.

B. T. Barnes was in his kitchen eating a late supper after bowling. The window shade was partly up. He saw two separate flashes, and had time to run up stairs before the report came.

People who were in their beds were awakened, and many thought the disturbance was due to something like a boiler having burst in their kitchen.

The flash which accompanied or preceded the disturbance was something like 15 seconds in advance of the effect of the explosion, which may give a basis for estimating how far in the air the explosion took place.

The heaviest shell for modern warfare would amount to no more than a firecracker alongside of such a terrific explosion as that which we have lived to experience.

From various parts of the State come reports of similar experiences. A majority of those who saw the light assert that it came first into view in its full strength, as if it had appeared from behind a curtain, and not faintly at first and gradually growing. It was visible through about 75 degrees of the arc from meridian to horizon, appearing a little below the former and bursting a little short of the latter. The path of the flight was illuminated by a brilliantly bright yellow light, but the explosion shot out flashes and flames of greenish yellow points, alternating with points of blue of the shade which is seen when a live wire is shooting sparks.

New York city was brightly illumined for a few seconds at 11:15 Wednesday night apparently by the same meteor. It shot straight out of the southern heavens and traveled clear across the zenith. It produced the effect of a big streak of fire "four feet wide", says one observer. The streak of fire broke in places, glowed a bright red for second or two, and then disappeared. After the illumination there was a succession of reports like the cannonading of artillery from the heavens.

Down in Newark they thought it was thunder. The Newark Evening News says: "Just before the rain and snow last night there was thunder and lightning. At 11:20 there were vivid flashes of lightning, which were of long duration. There followed thunder that was of a rumbling and mild sort, but which lasted fully a quarter of a minute. Some people who were indoors were convinced that it was an earthquake, and not thunder. Houses shook as is the case with earthquakes."

ABSOLUTELY PURE

City and Country.

Come back to your mother, ye children, for shame,
Who have wandered like truants for riches and fame!
With a smile on her face and a sprig in her cap,
She calls you to feast from her bountiful lap.

Come out from your alleys, your courts and your lanes
And breathe, like our eagles, the air of our plains.
Take a whiff from our fields, and your excellent wives
Will declare 'tis all nonsense, insuring your lives

Come, you of the law, who can talk, if you please,
Till the man in the moon will allow it's a cheese,
And leave "the old lady that never tells lies"
To sleep with a handkerchief over her eyes.

Ye healers of men, for a moment decline
Your feats in the rhubarb and ipecac line.
While you shut up your turnpike your neighbors can go
The old roundabout road to the regions below.

You clerk on whose ears are a couple of pens,
And whose head is an ant hill of units and tens,
Though Plato denies you, we welcome you still
As a featherless biped, in spite of your quill.

Poor drudge of the city! How happy he feels
With the burs on his legs and the grass at his heels!
No dodger behind his bandannas to share,
No constable grumbling, "You mustn't walk there."

In yonder green meadow, to memory dear,
He slaps a mosquito and brushes a tear.
The dewdrops hang round him on blossoms and shoots.
He breathes but one sigh for his youth and his boots.

There stands the old schoolhouse, hard by the old church.
That tree by its side had the flavor of birch.
Oh, sweet were the days of his juvenile tricks
Though the prairie of youth had so many "big licks!"

By the side of yon river he weeps and he slumps,
The boots fill with water, as if they were pumps,
Till, sated with rapture, he steals to his bed,
With a glow in his heart and a cold in his head.

—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

A Child.

Old signs are written in thy tender face,
Desires, regrets that thou hast never known;
Thou art the heir of thy aspiring race,
Heir of a troubled throne.

Of hope, that hardly dost portend the morn,
And sadness, that hast scarcely guessed at pain,
God takes the characters of fate outworn
And writes them fair again.

Those little feet, that scarce the light turf press,
Those little hands, so brown with wind and sun,
God grant they tremble not for weariness
Before thy course be done.

And thou shalt love, and learn what love is worth,
And thou shalt trust and learn to value men.
And all the sudden mysteries of earth
Shall open to thy ken.

* * * * * * *

What, wilt be flying? Am I then too staid?
Can I not smooth the meditative brow,
Flash through the sun and flutter through the shade,
As birds from bough to bough?
What, dost thou linger? Ah, my dear, how much
Thou givest couldst thou only understand
The kiss of childish pity and the touch
Of thine absolving hand.

Their Different Ways.

She sought her "rights."
Robbed by some cruel chance of life's delights,
With a dissatisfied and restless soul,
With a half logic which she counted whole,
Earnest, no doubt, and honest, not unsexed,
But hungering and querulous and vexed.
With starving instincts in a fruitless frame,
And with an itching for the sort of fame
Which comes from the mere printing of a name,
She clamored for her "rights," showed solemn craft,
And men,
Brute men,
They only laughed

* * * * * *

She did not seek her "rights,"
She dreamed not of some path to mannish heights,
But followed nature's way and deemed it good
And bloomed from flower to fruit of womanhood.
She loved the "tyrant," bore her noble part
In life with him and thought with all her heart
She had her rights. She held that something men and women meant
To be unlike, but each a supplement
Unto the other, 'twas her gentle whim
He was not more to her than she to him,
And little children gathered at her knee,
And men,
Brute men,
Would die for such as she.

Battles.

Nay, not for place, but for the right,
To make this fair world fairer still—
Or lowly lily of the night,
Or sun topped tower of a hill,
Or high or low, or near or far,
Or dull or keen, or bright or dim,
Or blade of grass, or brightest star—
All, all are but the same to him.

O pity of the strife for place!
O pity of the strife for power!
How scarred, how marred a mountain's face!
How fair the face of a flower!
The blade of grass beneath your feet
The bravest sword—aye, braver far
To do and die in mute defeat
Than bravest conqueror of war!

When I am dead, say this, but this:
"He grasped at no man's blade or shield,
Or banner bore, but helmetless,
Alone, unknown, he held the field;
He held the field, with saber drawn,
Where God had set him in the fight;
He held the field, fought on and on,
And so fell, fighting for the right!"

—Joaquin Miller.

A Philosopher Indeed.

He was ever contented
With friends and with foes.
If he signed, he repented.
If he fell, he arose.

When the weather was melting,
He thanked God for heat.
When the winter came pelting,
He praised God for sleet.

When fortune beset him
He thanked God for wealth.
When poverty met him,
He praised God for health.

And when fate bereft him
Of all that was best,
With death only left him,
He praised God for rest.

DISCRETIONARY POOL COMMENT.

It has been said that a fool is born every minute in the day. In view of the "discretionary pool" swindle in Pittsburg the aphorism appears to be sound.—Memphis Courier-Appeal.

The amazing thing is not that dupes by the thousands can be found to support such pluck me schemes, but that the Pittsburg authorities have not sooner intervened to protect them from their own avaricious folly.—Philadelphia Record.

"Discretionary pool" is another name for "blind pool," such as was played by or run by Ferd Ward of New York city several years ago, at the bottom of which dirty pool yawned the gates of the penitentiary for Ward.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

The "discretionary pool system" in Pittsburg has come to grief. The worst feature of the swindle is that it absorbed the money of the working people. The law ought to step in and shut up all such so called "pools" and "syndicates" as quickly as it would policy shops.—Minneapolis Tribune.

A get rich quick concern in Pittsburg has collapsed, and 40,000 people are out $5,000,000. As usual, the concern was run by strangers, and as usual nobody thought to ask for a guarantee or for some evidence of things valuable to show that the money put into the scheme was safely invested.—Harrisburg Telegraph.

A ROYAL FLUSH.

Every year the emperor of Italy receives a present of 10,000 picked Virginia cigars from the emperor of Austria.

The emperor of Germany is a proficient drummer and can give lessons to the best army drummers in beating the tattoo.

As a criterion of personal popularity the Princess of Wales may well rest upon the knowledge that 200,000 of her portraits were sold in England last year.

The empress of Austria is a great linguist. Her latest study is Greek, which she now speaks and writes fluently, although six years ago she was ignorant even of the alphabet of that language.

The empress of Japan is not only a very plain woman, but very intellectual, with great strength and beauty of character. Her particular hobby is the peeresses school which she has established in Tokyo.

TARIFF HISTORY.

DUTIES ON IMPORTS FREQUENTLY AN ISSUE IN POLITICS.

First Free Trade Measure, Passed In 1846, Proved a Success—Early Republicans Favored Free Raw Materials—What the Future May Bring Forth.

It is quite possible that the next tariff change may be made like that of 1857—with the consent of both parties and of all sections. It is worth while to recall the history of a period which it seems not unlikely may be paralleled during the next few years.

For a generation after the war of 1812 the tariff was one of the chief issues in our politics, often for considerable periods the question which divided parties. In 1824 Clay carried through the policy of what he called "the American system," by which higher duties were levied on imports than ever before. In 1828 the rates were made still higher, and after some slight reductions in 1832 and 1833 the policy of high protection was again enforced in the tariff of 1842.

In 1846 occurred the first radical change of tariff policy. In that year was passed what the protectionists styled "a free trade tariff," a measure which substantially stripped duties on imports of their high protective character. The protectionists had been voluble in their prophecies of ruin to the nation if such a measure should be passed. The low tariff men declared that they wanted a chance to apply the test of experience to their theory. A full opportunity was given for the application of this test.

There is now no dispute that the "free trade tariff" of 1846 worked well. Even Mr. Blaine was constrained to admit the fact in his "Twenty Years of Congress." After pointing out that the Whig victory of 1848 was not decisive enough to warrant any attempt to change the tariff if there had been a desire, he confesses that there was no desire. He proceeds in his record of this period as follows:

"The tariff of 1846 was yielding abundant revenue and the business of the country was in a flourishing condition at the time General Taylor's administration was organized. Money became very abundant after the year 1849. Large enterprises were undertaken, speculation was prevalent, and for a considerable period the prosperity of the country was general and apparently genuine. After 1852 the Democrats had almost undisputed control of the government and had gradually become a free trade party. The principles embodied in the tariff of 1846 seemed for the time to be so entirely vindicated and approved that resistance to it ceased not only among the people, but among the protective economists and even among the manufacturers to a large extent. So general was this acquiescence that in 1856 a protective tariff was not suggested or even hinted by any one of the three parties which presented presidential candidates. It was not surprising, therefore, that with a plethoric condition of the national treasury for two or three consecutive years the Democratic congress, in the closing session of Pierce's administration, enacted what has since been known as the tariff of 1857. By this law the duties were placed lower than they had been at any time since the war of 1812. The act was well received by the people and was indeed concurred in by a considerable portion of the Republican party."

The low tariff tendencies of the Republican party in its early history could not be more strikingly illustrated than by the fact that after ten years of the "free trade tariff" of 1846 still lower duties were voted for by both senators from Massachusetts, Charles Sumner and Henry Wilson, as well as by Republican senators from other manufacturing states like New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Connecticut and New York. It was during the discussion of this measure in 1857 that Senator Wilson made this defense of the policy of freeing raw materials, speaking particularly of wool:

"The manufacturers, Mr. Chairman, make no war upon the woolgrowers. They assume that the reduction of the duty on wool or the repeal of the duty altogether will infuse vigor into that drooping interest, stimulate home production and diminish the importation of foreign woolen manufactures and afford a steady and increasing demand for American wool. * * * The experience of England, France and Belgium demonstrates the wisdom of that policy which makes the raw material duty free. Let us profit by their example."

For the first time in nearly 40 years we now have again a tariff law which makes changes in the direction of lower duties. The test of experience will be applied to it for two years before another presidential election is held. It remains to be seen whether history will repeat itself. If it does, we shall see the Republicans discovering that the earlier position of their party was the wise one, and that its leaders in 1856, who did not even mention the tariff in the first national platform of the organization, were safer guides than those who made McKinleyism its ruling principle in 1890 and 1892, with such disastrous results.—New York Post.

Foreign Trade Increasing.

The flood of foreign goods with which the new tariff was to deluge the country has not made the faintest sign of its appearance. On the contrary, American manufactures are going abroad in increasing quantities in consequence of the impulse to trade.—Philadelphia Record.

Canada Hasn't Been Benefited.

There are more business failures in Canada just now than there were at this time last year. The enormous benefits which Canada was to derive from our modified tariff are not yet apparent.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

CONGRESS OF THE EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

Sixteenth Meeting to Be Held In Boston.

AN INTERESTING PROGRAMME.

Discussions Will Not Be Confined to Theological Subjects, but Will Touch Practical Problems—Several Important Papers—An Occasion of Great General Interest.

The sixteenth meeting of the congress of the Protestant Episcopal church in America, which is to continue four days in Boston, beginning Nov. 13, will doubtless be the most interesting of the series, and its proceedings will be well worth attention. They will illustrate how completely this church, like most others in the United States, has become assimilated to the form and spirit of our national government. The subjects for discussion will give the speakers range over the three great departments of religious thought—the active organization and work of the church as a religious body, its proper relation to the various reforms and great social movements of the day, and that subject of perennial interest, the alleged conflict between science and religion and the proper attitude of religious teachers toward the new theories so much talked about.

This is the most democratic and probably the most thoroughly representative of any of the regular organizations in this church. There are, of course, conventions in which only the clergy take part, meetings of bishops only, and a regular representative parliament or congress with a house of bishops and a house of lay delegates, but in this convention all Episcopalians may take part, and lawyers and men of science are often in special demand to supplement the ecclesiastical views by a large mixture of worldly wisdom. Of this nature will be the discussion on Nov. 16, "of the sixth main topic," "The Argument From Design as Affected by the Theory of Evolution," and it is scarcely an exaggeration to say that the highest talent of the church will take part.

Rev. Dr. William M. Hughes of Morristown, N. J., will read the leading paper, which will be followed with papers by Rev. Dr. Francis A. Shoup of Columbia, Tenn., and Professor Kelley of Johns Hopkins university. A general and critical discussion will follow, in which F. J. E. Woodbridge, Esq., of Minneapolis, Rev. Richard Harris of Brooklyn and others will take part. It is modestly claimed on behalf of the Episcopal church that more latitude of opinion on scientific topics is allowable in it than in any other. We find accordingly that among the clergy of the establishment in England there is a latitude of opinion utterly astounding to Americans who encounter it for the first time and cutting quite across the familiar distinction of high and low church. In both the historic divisions are well read clergymen ranging all the way from those who accept the latest conclusions of Darwin to those who hold the first chapters of Genesis to be substantially a literal history.

"It is not," said Phillips Brooks on this subject, "as if we hungered and thirsted for the ideally perfect in a belief. It is the life, the personal life, of Jesus Christ that carries conviction with it. Let my religion be a simple metaphysical truth, and I despair of making anybody receive it as I may have received it. Let it be a matter of law and organization, and I don't see why I should carry it across the sea. But if it be a living relation to a living Master I should go and lead my brethren across the sea in the way he has led me and mine."

And Bishop Whipple, in opening a previous convention, said: "Christians have been separated, and divisions have ripened into hatred. The saddest of all is that the things which separate us are not necessary to salvation."

It is quite a compliment to our profession that an entire evening session is to be given to a discussion of "The Sunday Newspaper." The appointed writers are Rev. Dr. Holland of St. Louis, Rev. Dr. George Currie of Baltimore and Rev. Dr. Alexander McKay-Smith of Washington. After such an array of names it would be superfluous to add that full justice will be done the subject on the clerical side, and this is to be followed by a free discussion led by Richard Henry Dana, Esq., of Cambridge, Mass., and William C. Van Antwerp, Esq., of New York. In the discussion on "The Proper Education For the Ministry," to which a whole day is to be given, only the clergy will take part, and the closing address will be by Right Rev. Henry C. Potter of New York. On the question, however, of "The Church's Duty In the Matter of Secular Activities" the laity may have a good deal to say, and their principal representative is Hon. Rathbone Gardner of Providence. Near akin to the preceding is the question, "How to Relieve the Poor Without Pauperizing Them," to which a day will be devoted. Probably no man in the church is better qualified to discuss this subject than the principal speaker, Rev. Dr. David H. Greer of St. Bartholomew's, New York city, for he has had great practical experience of the work from every side. He is a man of wealth and receives $15,000 per year from St. Bartholomew's, sometimes called the Vanderbilt church because that family are among its regular attendants and chief supporters. By a mere accident Cornelius Vanderbilt happened to enter Grace church, Providence, one Sunday a few years ago and was so charmed with the sermon that he at once determined to secure the minister for St. Bartholomew's, and so Dr. Greer was transferred to New York.

He has devoted his entire salary to works of mercy and practical reform of the condition of the poor and is recognized as the official dispenser of the Vanderbilt charities. The so called People's palace is practically his work, and the system adopted is that pursued in the People's palace of London, which was called into life by Besant's "All Sorts and Conditions of Men." By the latest report obtainable this London institution had assisted 204,647 persons in six months, while the issue of books amounted to 36,000, and 80,000 persons regularly used the Sunday library and reading rooms, and it can scarcely be doubted that the New York institution will do as well when fully established. The plan is to afford immediate relief to the needy and then put them in the way of helping themselves.

Dr. Greer was born in Wheeling in 1844, graduated from Washington, Pa., in 1862, was ordained in 1868 and after a brief pastorate in Covington, Ky., went to Providence. Although gifted with remarkable oratorical powers, he has rather avoided their display and has tried to make his life work the improvement of humanity, especially of the poor. His experience in the east side of New York city has led him to some very clear and positive conclusions as to the proper methods of extending relief, and his address is awaited with great interest. He is something of an athlete as well, and his superb physical condition has been no small aid to his work for the poor. During the hard times of last winter he made a special study of the poor of New York and the proper methods of relief, particularly the guarding against impostors, and it has been jocularly said that his abilities in this line fully qualify him to be a chief of detectives. Those who think preachers are easily imposed on could learn much in a brief talk with Dr. Greer.

At the Baltimore convention in October, 1892, there were many pressing questions as to church organization, statistics and the like, one of the most important being a proposition by Rev. Dr. Huntington of New York to incorporate the Lambeth declaration of Christianity into the constitution, which was adopted after one of the most brilliant debates in the history of the American church. The declaration in brief is that a belief in the Scriptures, the two creeds, the two sacraments and the historic episcopate is all that is required of those wishing to enter the church, and that any congregation having a duly ordained minister and accepting the substance of this declaration may be received as an Episcopal church and use any liturgical service it may prefer, provided the bishop of the diocese finds nothing objectionable in it. The obvious intent is to give the largest latitude in all the so called high and low church variations.

Another interesting discussion was over a proposition by Rev. Dr. Hamilton that the church use its influence to secure a sixteenth amendment to the national constitution forbidding any state to appropriate money to the use of sectarian institutions. The wording showed that it was especially aimed at denominational schools. Ministers are but men, and it was not surprising that a good deal of states rights doctrine cropped out in the discussion. In view of the important part taken in recent elections by the so called A. P. A. it is interesting to note that when the mover of the resolution stated that it was by request of an association for the protection of American institutions several members expressed surprise, this being the first they had heard of such a body. It soon appeared that the tender point was the aid extended to Indian schools in which denominational teaching was had, but the convention concluded that the evil, if evil it is, was not serious enough to call for so big a remedy.

One question often debated, which will be passed over by the convention of this autumn, is that of changing the name of the church, but to fully understand it one would have to read the history of Christianity from Luther to Bishop Brooks. It is of course known to everybody that Episcopalians claim a continuous succession from apostolic times and regard the Roman Catholic church as itself a secession or apostacy from the true line, but to compute the books and pamphlets written on this subject would fatigue the imagination. Suffice it to say that in the United States the matter has no such importance as it has in England, where the monarch is officially the head of the church and bishops sit in parliament by virtue of their ecclesiastical rank. Nevertheless it is of such interest that a few facts will aid in understanding the discussion.

It is admitted, on the one hand, that the word Protestant is in nowise necessary as a designation of the church, and, on the other, that it may be used descriptively as the church of the time of King Edward VI did protest against the errors of Rome. But it is charged that the use of a word embodying a mere historic fact is liable to be misleading. The word is popularly associated with the great protest of Luther and his followers, while the English reformers refused in express terms to depart from the fellowship of the church universal, and their best writers often declared that the pope might rightfully be recognized as the bishop of Rome and allowed a primacy among the bishops of Italy. In England a favorite phrase now is Anglo-Catholics. All this, however, is of general interest only and not applicable to the present convention. In October, 1889, the American church celebrated its one hundredth anniversary, dating from the convention of October, 1789, when the organization as separate from that of Great Britain was perfected.

Jealousy.

The Chinese have a character or characters which symbolize jealousy. It is represented by two women under one roof. It goes to show how universal that fling at the sex is. Even the Celestials can be unjust. It has even been declared it—jealousy, I mean—penetrated to insect life, and heretofore it has been looked upon as an established scientific fact, which could not be disputed by the most skeptical, that two queen bees could not exist in one hive. The appearance of a rival was the signal for a battle that only could end with the death of the intruder. To the Austrian bees belong the credit of rising superior to the traditional jealousies of their kind. A sensational exhibit has been made in Vienna by some patient scientist, who has spent a year or two watching the bees in order to verify his discovery before making it public. He has just exhibited a thriving colony of bees governed conjointly by two queen bees, who not only endure each other's presence, but show every mark of cordial affection for each other. Those bees live in a co-operative age.—New York Mail and Express.

Appendicitis.

A physician urges in an exchange the doing away with the fear that appendicitis is caused by a seed or a bit of hard food of any sort becoming lodged in the vermiform appendix. He has performed a number of operations and never found anything of the sort as the troubling cause in any one of them. "A small bit of digested matter," he says, "gets into the little sac, if the neck of it is open far enough to receive it. It may remain there for years and cause no trouble, and then again it may bring on appendicitis almost immediately."

He disclaims entirely any faith in the idea that grape seeds or any other seeds produce the disease and begs those timorous folks who have almost given up the use of small fruits, for fear of appendicitis, to banish the notion and enjoy the goods the gods provide without worry.—New York Times.

Humming Birds.

Humming birds can be domesticated and kept alive in cages by the curious expedient of making tubular paper flowers, at the bottom of which is placed a small quantity of sugar and water frequently renewed. They are thus enabled to take their nourishment in the usual way and soon become apparently contented.

Going to Tell It All.

(From The Dunellen Call.)

The sewer question has taken a rest for a few days. We however will bring it up again in our next issue, when some of Plainfield's best engineers will show why the filtration system is not the best for the Crescent City.

Realizing the Responsibility.

(From The Elizabeth Journal.)

The Republicans will have to act wisely and well if they wish to retain the trust which the people have placed in their hands by such overwhelming majorities.

Pleases Everybody.

(From The Westfield Leader.)

Those attending the State Baptist Convention were greatly pleased with the enterprise of The Daily Press in reporting it so fully.

Good Time on Grove Street.

Herbert Moore entertained a number of his friends at his home on Grove street last evening. The hours passed swiftly and pleasantly with dancing and amusing games, and to conclude the evening's fun refreshments were served.

Among the young people who were present were the following: Miss Eleanor T. VanDeventer, Miss Grace E Overton Miss Maud French, Miss Edna French, Miss Bessie Valiant, Miss Bertha Thorn, Miss Stella Swain, Miss Mabel Ladd, Miss C. Florence Barnes, John Van Winkle, Maxwell Honeyman, George A. Horne, Henry B. Drake, Frederick Bettman, Everett Peck, Arthur Peck and Robert Douglass.

A Physical Director Secured.

The Committee appointed to secure an instructor for the Physical Department of the Y. M. C. A., reported that D. A. MacPhie had accepted the call and would be on the field about Dec 1. The committee consider that they have been able to secure a man possessing unusual qualifications for this position. He is a college graduate and also a graduate of the Springfield Training School at Springfield, Mass. He has had large experience as a physical director, having had charge of two large and well-equipped gymnasiums, and is especially interested in the spiritual and physical development of young men. They believe he will be a popular man with the young men.

A Sly Young Trickster.

A little boy about ten years old, who said his name was Frankie Slade, and that his home was in Elizabeth, got off the train at Westfield yesterday afternoon and began to cry. He said that he was going to visit relatives at Aldene and had been carried past the station. Some kind-hearted persons at the depot gave him a ticket back to Roselle and a quarter to stop crying. An hour later he was seen at the Cranford depot working the same game, but one of the contributors at Westfield saw the boy and informed on him. He was put on a train in charge of the baggage-master and sent to Elizabeth with a warning not to repeat his trick.

A Delightful Time with the Men's.

An attractive programme was rendered last evening at the entertainment provided under the auspices of the Men's Association of Grace Church in the parish building, corner of Sycamore and Sixth streets. Mr. Elmendorf of Metuchen, the genial cashier of the Seaboard Lumber Company of New York, delighted the audience by his recitations, both humorous and pathetic.

The inimitable Will Runyon was in evidence, and at each appearance could have executed his entire repertoire and still have left his hearers unsatisfied.

The Messrs. George E. and James H Downey's clever work with the mandolin and autophone were repeatedly encored. George E. Downey gave an exhibition of sleight of hand work much to the delight of the little folks.

During an intermission ice-cream, cake and candy were served.

Mary Loses.

W. S. Angleman scored a notable victory in the Supreme Court yesterday, when he got decision for his client Noah W. Pike in the celebrated diamond ring case. Miss Mary VanRiper sued Noah W. Pike to recover the value of the ring she had loaned to Joseph his son. Judge Mosher gave her judgment. Mr. Angleman certiorarried the case, and won as stated, judgment being reversed.

Japanese folks have six or eight pockets cunningly inserted in the cuffs of their wide sleeves. These pockets are always filled with a curious miscellany peculiar to the droll little people. As common as twine in young America's pocket is the prayer amulet written on delicate sheets of rice paper and composed by the bonzes. In accordance with the abiding and funny faith of the Japanese women these prayers are swallowed, paper and all, like a pill, in cases of mental and physical distress. Another essential, never missing, is a number of small squares of silky paper, which is put to the most unexpected purpose—to hold the stem of a lotus or lily, to dry a teacup, wipe away a tear or blow the absurd little nose of the doll-like little woman. The very smartest people in Japan use this style of handkerchief for practical purposes.

PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

Fanny Jacobs has signed with Gladys Wallis.

Kate Oesterle, it is said, will be married shortly to Grant Stewart.

Katherine Clemmons is coming back from England. She does not say whether or not she will play again.

Mary Hampton's Rosamond in "Sowing the Wind" is the finest performance that young actress has yet given.

Next season Jefferson de Angelis will head a comic opera company under the management of Canary & Lederer.

Nat Goodwin had time offered him at a London theater this season, but he says that America is good enough for him.

Thomas Q. Seabrooke will let well enough alone and stick to the "Isle of Champagne" and "Tabasco" throughout the winter.

William Furst, composer of Seabrooke's "The Isle of Champagne" and Della Fox's "The Little Trooper," is at work on an Irish operetta.

Joseph Grismer and Phœbe Davies will continue to appear in "The New South" until after the holidays, when they will be seen in a new drama.

The New York is the name finally decided upon by Canary & Lederer for the theater they are to own and manage on upper Broadway, New York.

Julie Ring, formerly with "The County Fair," "Niobe" and Pauline Hall, has been engaged as ingenue for Sadie Martinot and Max Figman's support.

James O'Neill's manager, William F. Conner, will sail for England in April to complete negotiations for O'Neill's appearance in London and the provinces.

The youngest light opera prima donna on the American stage is Dorothy Morton. She is 21 and sings the title role in "The Fencing Master." Three years ago she was discovered by the Wilbur company.

Beatrice Selwyn, one of the beauties of the London stage, has been engaged by Mrs. Langtry for her forthcoming American tour. This seems to indicate that the Lily has not lost faith in her own facial superiority.

BECAUSE.

Boiled water tastes flat and insipid because the gases it contained have been driven off by the heat.

A burning gas jet is unhealthy in a chamber because one gaslight gives out as much carbonic acid gas as two sleepers.

Spontaneous combustion occurs in many substances because during fermentation heat is evolved and inflammable gases are engendered.

A plumb line by the side of a very large building inclines a little from the perpendicular because the weight is attracted by the mass of the edifice.

Woolen goods feel warm because wool is a poor conductor of heat, and the goods made of wool contain within their substance large quantities of air, also a poor conductor.

The horse's eye has a thick glutinous secretion because, his eye being large and much exposed to dust, the viscid secretion cleanses it more effectually than would a more watery agent.

White spots appear on the nails because the vascular tissue underneath is attached to the substance of the nail, but from some accidental cause, such as a blow, occasionally becomes separated.

Chimneys smoke because the carbon of the coal is disintegrated and drawn off by the heat instead of being consumed in the fire. A furnace properly tended would not smoke, as all the fuel would be consumed.

A cat is enabled to send out or to retract her claws because the bone to which the claws are attached has a rotary movement on the bone above, and a powerful ligament draws the former down and exhibits the claw.

The oil glands of the skin are most numerous in races living under the tropics because the oil is nature's protection against the heat of the sun. In hot countries its action is often assisted by the application of vegetable or animal oils.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

REMARKABLE CURES

Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.

I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR. PETER G. EYCK, OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:

For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

PETER G. EYCK,
Bissell, Hunterdon Co., N. J.

EVENTS IN NEW YORK.

MRS. GEORGE GOULD IS PROBABLY THE CITY'S BEST DRESSED WOMAN.

The Young Millionaire's Wife is Ambitious for Social Distinction. Two Sharps Fool Themselves. Heyward McAllister and Mrs. McCall. Other Events.

The unceasing rivalry among New York women of fashion for the name of being the best dressed woman in the city may not be settled definitely; but just now Mrs. George Gould seems to hold the place. This interesting lady, although laurel laden from her social campaign in England, has set out to conquer the New World, and as one of her implements is making dress very effective. The new gowns she has brought over are declared to represent a larger money investment of that sort than has ever been made. Mrs. Gould is certainly coming to be recognized as a most powerful social leader, rather to the confusion of the Knickerbocker element, which had heretofore set its face against the family of the late Jay. Mrs. Gould appeared at an elaborate social function every night during a recent week, and on each occasion was differently attired, yet her costumes represented a small fortune in every case. It is related of Mrs. Gould that she has vowed to overthrow the social prestige of a well-known land owning family, and to all appearances she is proving at least a formidable competitor. The lady, by the way, is reputed to have a personal income of $200,000 a year, being the interest of various sums settled upon her by her husband. This money is absolutely hers, and at her death it seems likely she will leave an enormous fortune.

A strange complication ensued from the publication in a morning newspaper of a personal saying:

"Will widow (46) please meet honorable gentleman at Post Office at 5 o'clock P. M. Full particulars."

Two conscientious reporters were detailed by city editors to obtain stories of the proceedings. One was a young woman, who compensated by ambition what she lacked in experience, and the other was a veteran city newspaper man. Both took their stations in the Post Office corridor at the appointed hour and awaited developments. It was not long before their eyes met. Then at once it flashed upon the woman reporter that this solitary man was the "honorable gentleman," whose advertisement was her assignment. Otherwise, why should he be hanging about, eyeing each passerby so critically?

"A novel experience," she murmured. "I will interview him in the guise of a responsive widow."

"Ah, here's a designing widow," thought he, as she approached. "I will keep up the joke."

So they chattered together for nearly half an hour, each chuckling inwardly, and thinking how completely the other had been deluded.

Then they returned to their offices and she wrote a story of the event. He published nothing, for he knew the "honorable gentleman" hadn't appeared, but he told his friends that night of the huge joke he had perpetrated on an anxious widow. Both understand all now, and apologetic letters have been passed.

Ward McAllister, it is reported, has paid a sum of money, amount unknown, to Mrs. Lizzie McCall, who, as rumor has had it for a long time, has been engaged to be married to Heyward Hall McAllister, the son of the "400's" mainstay and support. The story has that fishy flavor, but it is interesting if true. Both Heyward and Mrs. McCall have histories. Young McAllister married in 1887 Miss Janie Champion of Savannah, Ga. The marriage for some reason was kept a secret, and only leaked out when another suitor for Miss Champion's hand appeared. On August 22, 1887, by lawyer's advice, a second ceremony took place in the Church of the Holy Apostles, in this city. This second marriage was kept a secret also, for nearly five years. Mrs McCall has had a career which, according to report, has been rather lively. She has been twice married, sued for divorce once and tried for manslaughter once, the charge being that she had caused the death of her husband, George Berry Wall, who was found one day in February, 1882 lying in his room shot through the chest, and with Mrs. Wall bending over him and weeping. She was arrested, indicted but was never prosecuted, although Wall died from the wound.

Albert E. Henschel, secretary of "The Greater New York" commission, issued an address recently showing how the evils of the tenement house system could be avoided. He said: "New lands must be added to our city and made accessible by bridges, tunnels, and railroads so that the poor man and the man of moderate income may live within convenient distance from his workshop or his place of business. New York is blessed with large suburban areas. It needs only a political consolidation to furnish the means of approach that shall make them accessible and open them up for settlement. In this way hundreds of square miles of beautiful and picturesque territory may be used for homes. Such an opening up of new lands will not only relieve the vicious and unhealthy overcrowding in our present city limits, but will give employment to labor in the construction of thousands of buildings, adding to the wealth and prosperity of the workingman, the mechanic, the skilled artisan, the contractor, and in fact, every other trade and calling.

A group of artists in this city were discussing the evil record of a certain man of prominence, the other day; and various methods of holding him up to obloquy were suggested, none of which, however, seemed to meet with general approval. Finally, one of them, in a moment of inspiration, exclaimed. "I have it, let a statue of him be erected in one of the parks." It was unanimously decided that this suggestion hit the bull's eye, since, in the opinion of those present, no greater punishment could be inflicted on a man than to put up a statue of him like some of the monstrosities already erected.

Mr. and Mrs. George Gould are expected to contribute to the gayety of the winter season by entertaining extensively. Their Fifth avenue residence will be very gorgeous when the splendid furniture purchased at the World's Fair is in place. They also brought over from Europe an extensive supply of handsome articles to adorn the interior. Miss Anna Gould remains over in the convent school at Auteuil to perfect herself in French and to study other languages, as she was still very young when she left Ogontz not so long ago.

THE TATTLER.

Mrs. Lease remarked at a recent meeting, "When I cannot talk, I want to be buried."

Miss Lizzie Darlington, a daughter of ex-Congressman Darlington of West Chester, Pa., is about to become a lawyer.

So far Miss Anna Gould has been engaged to three princes, one count, one banker and one actor. Money makes the gossips gabble.

Mlle. Dosne, a sister of M. Thiers, has a pearl necklace of several rows, which has taken her 30 years to collect and has cost her upward of £15,000.

Mrs. Jefferson Davis and Miss Winnie Davis expect to pass this winter at the Victoria hotel, which is the winter headquarters for the southern colony in New York.

When Mrs. J. W. Mackay wants to impress her European friends with her own importance, she invites them to dinner and sets them in front of a $196,000 silver service.

Miss Florence W. Jacques has resigned from her position as chief assistant to Colonel Thomas Wentworth Higginson, the military and naval historian of Massachusetts.

Miss Margaret A. Burke of Rochester is the latest feminine drummer. She sells parlor furniture on a route in New England and part of New York and, moreover, can always land her orders.

Miss Mary Sargent Hopkins of Boston, whose interest in the development of outdoor exercise for women has given her prominence, specially favors the bicycle as an inducement to women to keep in the open air.

Miss Edison, daughter of Mr. Thomas A. Edison, has been in Germany several months past and is now at Neu-Saiz recovering from a recent severe illness. There is a report abroad that she is engaged to a Saxon infantry officer.

Miss Virginia Fair might almost be taken for a Spanish girl, with her dark brown hair, flashing black eyes and brilliant complexion. Her features are pretty, but her charm lies in her bright, animated manner and her bewitching vivacity.

Signorina Theresina Labriola, the daughter of a well known Italian house, was recently graduated from the law department of the University of Rome, with the degree of doctor of law—one of the first to accomplish this result in modern Italy.

The French actress, Mme. Rejane, is now setting the fashions in Paris, having dethroned the divine if somewhat erratic Sarah Bernhardt in this regard. Rejane's hair is of a slightly brighter red than mahogany, and Parisian tresses are beginning to take on that hue.

Mrs. Cleveland's friends say she is much concerned about her increasing weight. Since the birth of Baby Esther she has been steadily gaining and now weighs 180 pounds. She has a decidedly double chin, and there is too much of the matron in her appearance for admirers of the aesthetic.

AS IT NOW STANDS

Republicans, 245; Democrats, 101; Populists, 10.

There Will Probably Be No Material Variation from These Figures in the Complexion of the Next House of Representatives—Dockery, of Missouri, Was Not Defeated.

New York, Nov. 9.—But few changes in the congressional table are reported, and the total number of republican representatives elected to the fifty-fourth congress remains about as it was given in these dispatches, 245. This is not subject to much variation, but the official count in several districts, notably in Nevada, Nebraska, Kentucky and North Carolina, may increase or diminish it slightly.

Representative Dockery, of Missouri, who conceded his defeat seems to have been elected after all, while Representative Bland, the famous silver advocate of the same state, has been defeated by a small plurality. Bell the populist congressman from the second Colorado district, according to reports, has defeated ex-Senator Bowen, who was running against him, and who was supposed to have been successful. The official returns may be necessary to determine the result. The same is true of the 4th, 5th and 6th districts of Nebraska, where the indications are that Messrs. Hainer and Andrews, the republican candidates have been elected in the first two districts and the populist candidate in the sixth. No definite news has been received changing the figures in Kentucky; one or two districts are in doubt, and the republicans claim that six and possibly seven of their congressional candidates have been elected.

Latest reports from North Carolina confirm the the estimate made last night in these dispatches of the result of the contests for congress—that one republican, three democratic and five populist candidates had been chosen in the state.

The democrats elect but one representative, Downing, 16th district, from Illinois; the republicans but one, Walker, 9th district, from Virginia; and the populists but one, Howard, 7th district, from Alabama. With these changes from the figures of last night, giving the populists one republican from Colorado and one from Nebraska, and the republicans all of the fifteen from Missouri, the total representation of each party in the lower house in the fifty-fourth congress will be republicans, 245; democrats, 101; populists, 10.

Arizona has elected N. O. Murphy, republican delegate to congress. This makes the body of territorial delegates stand republican, 3; democrat, 1.

"FATHER OF THE HOUSE."

Hormer, of Pennsylvania, or Culberson, of Texas.

New York, Nov. 9.—The sweeping nature of the changes effected in the composition of the house of representatives by the election on Tuesday is, probably, best shown in the fact that of the three hundred and fifty-six representatives chosen, considerably more than one-half will be new members. One hundred and seventy-nine make a quorum of the house, and according to the returns received but one hundred and sixty-seven members elected to the fifty-third congress have beeen returned to the fifty-fourth. The honors attached to the title of "Father of the House" will be claimed by the partisans of two members—Representative A. C. Hormer, of one of the Philadelphia districts, and Representative D. B. Culberson, of Texas. The former is now serving his eleventh term as congressman, but was not a member of the fourty-fourth congress, with which Judge Culberson's service began. So that while Mr. Hormer has been a member of the house two years longer than the Texas representative, the latter's continuous service extends over a greater period by two years. It is interesting to note in this connection that ever since Thad. Stevens brought the title into prominence, the "Father of the House" until the present term, has been a member from Philadelphia. Judge Holman, of Indiana, the well-known "objector" and "watch dog of the treasury," at present bears the honor and dignity of the position, although in length of continuous service "Silver Dollar" Bland, of Missouri, is at the head of the list with twenty-two years to his credit. Mr. Holmes will have served fifteen terms, or thirty years, when the fifty-third congress adjourns on the 4th of March next, but he failed of election in the thirty-ninth and forty-ninth congresses. He entered the house in 1858.

Japan's Ambition.

London, Nov. 9.—Mr. Uchida, Japanese charge d'affaires in London, said in an interview with a Central News reporter: "Japan could not accept, as an answer to her proposals of reforms in Korea, the maintenance of a Chinese army in the peninsula. The presence of Chinese troops in Korea meant merely a series of horrors such as are now perpetrated in Manchuria. Japan never menaced China's integrity. She did not intend to break up the empire, and certainly does not wish others to do so. The height of Japan's ambition is to see China consolidated, freed from corruption, prosperous and open to commerce and civilization.

Extension of Civil Service.

Washington, Nov. 9.—The president, in addition to his enlargement of the civil service law last week, contemplates and now has before him a plan which puts chiefs of divisions and messengers in the executive departments, storekeepers and gaugers and others in the internal revenue service in the civil service. Extensions in other directions are also contemplated.

Corrigan Will Case Dismissed.

Jersey City, Nov. 9.—Judge Hudspeth, in the orphans' court, dismissed the contest of Father Corrigan's will and confirmed the probate ordered by Surrogate O'Neil. Judge Hudspeth said that the contestants had utterly failed to prove that Father Corrigan had ever shown any signs of insanity, either when he made the will or at any other time.

NO PEACE FOR CHINA.

Rosebery's Attempt To Secure It for the Celestials Fails.

London, Nov. 9.—It is understood that the second attempt of Lord Rosebery to secure peace for China has met with a setback at the beginning.

Certain propositions looking to the payment of indemnity, etc., were submitted to Japan through its legation here. France and Russia were said to favor the purbarlers. The questions were cabled to Tokio, and it is said that the Mikado and his advisers have rejected the propositions.

China objects to the formation of the buffer state between her own empire and that of Japan, but the Pekin government was willing to pay reasonable indemnity. This is so much less than the Mikado intended to demand that there is no probability of any agreement.

In fact, at the Japanese legation it is stated with considerable emphasis that the war will go on until Pekin is captured, and that then Japan will make her own terms.

This looks like a long winter campaign, for the Chinese forces in the mountain passes leading to Tien-Tsin will be able to make a prolonged resistance.

Washington, Nov. 9.—Officials of the Chinese legation say that Mr. Moore, who was formerly an interpreter of the legation and was recentlyarrested with others in Japan on the charge of conspiring to blow up the Japanese navy by torpedoes, has not been acting under authority of the Chinese government or of the Chinese minister here.

At the Japanese legation it is said that Moore is in no danger of being shot or beheaded or receiving other summary punishment. They are not accused of being spies, and are therefore not subject to sentence of death. It is believed at the legation that the prisoners will be released after their purpose of "destroying the Japanese navy within eight weeks" has been effectually disposed of.

The Pall Mall Gazette prints a Yokohama dispatch saying that the Japanese are laying torpedoes at Port Arthur and are in other ways completing the traps they have been preparing for the Chinese.

The Central News has this dispatch from Shanghai: "The panic in New Chwang and throughout Manchuria continues. Numerous country people are arriving at New Chwang and two-thirds of the stores have been closed.

"Chang Chi Tung arrived in Nankin last evening with the remains of the viceroy of Liang Chiang. A war levy of $3 a head has been imposed in Hankow. The people will probably resist it."

COLLEGE FOOTBALL GAMES.

Several Teams Will Not Play on Thanksgiving Day.

Easton, Pa., Nov. 9.—As there will be no football game between Princeton and Yale in New York city on Thanksgiving Day this year, the managers of the field have been making an effort for a game to be played on that day between the Lafayette college and Brown university teams. The students at Lafayette favored such a game, but the faculty would not permit it, President Warfield explaining to the students that Thanksgiving Day, having been set apart by the civil authorities as a day for the public recognition of the goodness of God to our country, and having for many years been consecrated to the purpose, and as a family festival, it is highly improper that a college founded for the education of youth in the principles of good morals and good citizenship as well as sound learning and loyalty to the truth of God, should do anything to lower the traditions or undermine the public regard for such a day.

WOMEN CANNOT VOTE.

So the New Jersey Supreme Court Decides.

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 9.—The supreme court has decided the Vineland school case which involves the right of women to vote at school elections in this state under the statute. The court decides that "school trustees are officers within article 2, paragraph 1, of the constitution, so that if they are made elective by the people, only males can vote for them." The opinion is by Justice Dixon, Justices Abbett and Reed concurring.

The case was brought into court through a declaration by the county superintendent, that the election of school trustees in Vineland last July is void because women had been excluded from voting. The county superintendent appointed a new board and the collector refused to honor warrants issued by the old board. The decision compels the payment of the warrants.

Gen. O. O. Howard Retired.

New York, Nov. 9.—An event of importance to the officers and soldiers at Governor's island occurred at that military station yesterday. At noon Maj.-Gen. O. O Howard, who has for several years commanded the department of the east, with headquarters at Governor's island, retired from active service. He has reached the age limit of 64, and the army regulations say that he must give way to younger men.

Purists Win in London.

London, Nov. 9.—The appeal of Geo. Edwardes, manager of the Empire theatre, against the decision of the London county council, sustaining the action of its licensing committee not to renew the drinking auditorium license of the empire, has been dismissed, with costs, and the council's order, refusing a license to Mr. Edwardes, stands.

Denver Women Organize.

Denver, Nov. 9.—It having been demonstrated that the woman's vote in Denver in Tuesday's election was 55 per cent. of the total vote, the leading women, therefore formed a state organization of their own for the next national campaign, the purpose being to increase their political power and importance.

TRAINMEN CHAMPIONED

Attorney General Olney Says Labor Has Rights.

He Claims That Reading Men Should Not Be Discharged Because They Will Not Renounce Their Union. Labor May Strike, But It Must Not Intimidate.

Philadelphia, Nov. 9.—The controversy between the receivers of the Reading Railroad company and such of its employes as are members of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen has prompted an expression of opinion from Attorney General Olney, in the form of a circular letter to Judge Dallas, of the United States circuit court.

The difficulty between the two organizations reached a crisis on Aug. 15, when General Superintendent Sweigard summoned before him eleven employes and notified them that they should abandon the brotherhood as a condition of retaining their places with the railroad company.

Vigorous protests were made against this alternative, and the brotherhood urged the receivers to withdraw it, but in answer the receivers on Sept. 17 wrote: "The policy of this company is well known to be that it will not consent that persons in its service shall owe allegiance to other organizations which may make claims upon them which are incompatible with their duties to their employers. This position was taken advisedly, and we have no intention of departing from it."

Attorney General Olney's letter is an exhaustive discussion of the questions presented, and he reviews the various problems and the consistent solutions to be applied in every aspect.

In substance, he holds that labor unorganized is practically powerless; that in combinations such as this lies the only safeguard of the workingman in his dealings with organized capital; and that his right to belong to such a union—beneficial in intent and purpose—is a legal right which he cannot be deprived of.

Mr. Olney says: "The court, and not the company, is the employer of all persons engaged in the operation of the road. And hence the question is, will the court now lay down rules that members of the Brotherhood of Trainmen shall, because they are such members, be discharged from the service of the road.?

"The court, it is admitted, ought not, and cannot, lay down any such rule on the ground that either the purposes and objects of the brotherhood, or the means by which they are to be attained, are shown to be illegal.

"1. The general purpose and objects of the brotherhood are stated in the preamble to the constitution as follows: 'To unite the railroad trainmen, to promote their general welfare and advanc their interests—social, moral and intellectual; to protect their families by the exercise of a systematic benevolence, very needful in a calling so hazardous as ours, this fraternity has been organized.'

"Persuaded that it is for the interests both of our members and their employers that a good understanding should at all times exist between the two, it will be the constant endeavor of this organization to establish mutual confidence and create and maintain harmonious relations. Such are the aims and purposes of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen. Certainly these objects must be regarded as laudable in the highest degree and as deserving the approbation and support of every good citizen.

"If the means to these praiseworthy ends be now examined there is nothing in them to which the most captious critic can object, except the provision made for strikers.

"As to what a 'strike' is is not defined by the brotherhood constitution and rules; its precise nature must be determined by the court. And, as the brotherhood is entitled to the ordinary presumption of lawfulness for its methods as well as its objects until the contrary is shown, the court will hold the thing termed 'strike' in the brotherhood constitution and rules to be something lawful unless there can not be such a thing as a lawful 'strike.'

"A strike becomes illegal when to these necessary features are added others, such as a malicious intent followed by actual injury, intimidation, violence, the creation of a public nuisance, or a breach of the peace of any sort. But it is safe to say that the consideration of business policy impelling the court to the course suggested should be of the clearest and most cogent character.

"In considering the question of the business expediency of the employment of brotherhood men, such objection as there is to it must arise from the fact that under its constitution and rules the employes may engage in a strike—with all the natural and possible incidents and consequences. It can hardly be denied that otherwise the brotherhood organization is not only not objectionable but is salutary in its operation both as regards the employers and the employed."

Threaten To Kill the Sheriff.

St. Louis, Nov. 9.—A reporter in the field with the marshals chasing the Cook gang last night wired as follows from Muskogee, I. T.: "This place is wild with excitement over a reported uprising of Indians of the Choctaw nation against Head Chief Gardner, the trouble arising from the execution of Silon Lewis. The people of South McAlister have prepared an appeal to the secretary of the interior for troops to prevent the uprising. Friends of Lewis say that they will avenge his death by killing the sheriff of Toboxo county, who officiated at the execution."

Dog Bite Killed Him.

Philadelphia, Nov. 9.—George Frankle, aged 45 years, died in the Hahnemann hospital yesterday from hydrophobia, the result of a dog bite three weeks ago. He was the driver of a wagon, and while stabling his horses was bitten by a strange dog. His wounds were dressed and apparently healed, but a few days ago he complained of being ill. All day Wednesday he acted in a strange way, rushing about in a wild manner and staring blankly about him. His wife was much alarmed and sent for a doctor, who pronounced his malady hydrophobia.

TORTURED THIRTY YEARS.

His Suffering Ended After Using Munyon's Rheumatism Cure.

Mr. George Smith, of Tacony, Pa., says: "I suffered from rheumatism for 30 years, and had so many severe attacks that some of my joints were twisted out of shape. At times I suffered terrible pain, and, although I tried many remedies, I never obtained any permanent relief until I procured Munyon's Rheumatism Cure. The action of this remedy was wonderfully quick, and although I have only taken a small quantity, I consider myself permanently cured."

Munyon's Rheumatism Cure is guaranteed to cure rheumatism in any part of the body. Acute or muscular rheumatism cured in from one to five days. It never fails to cure sharp, shooting pains in the arms, legs, sides, back or breast, or soreness in any part of the body in from one to three hours. WAS REW MURDERED?

The Young Student's Father Says His Boy Was Killed.

He Disappeared Mysteriously from Cornell University on Oct. 2.—Believed To Have Been Drowned—An Increased Reward Offered for the Recovery of the Body.

Buffalo, Nov. 9.—"Positive evidence that my son was murdered has been secured."

This startling statement was made by E. B. Rew, father of Frederick C. Rew, who disappeared so mysteriously from Cornell university at Ithaca on Oct. 2.

Two days after young Rew disappeared, President Schurmann, of Cornell, telegraphed to Mr. Rew informing him that his son could not be found.

Mr. Rew took the next train for Ithaca where, after spending nearly a week, dragging Cayuga lake and searching the city, he gave his boy up as lost. Mr. Rew believed that his son had been accidentally drowned and offered a reward of $100 for the recovery of the body dead or alive, which amount was subsequently raised to $150.

A few days ago he had reason to change his mind. He received a telegram asking him to come to Ithaca at once. He went and was overjoyed to learn that traces of his lost son had been found.

Mr. Rew returned home and yesterday made the statement quoted above. Continuing, he said: "I went to Ithaca in response to a telegram from the chief of police, who informed me that Fred had not been drowned in the lake, that traces of him had been found eight miles from Ithaca. We learned these facts: Fred left his boarding house at 11 o'clock in the morning and went to the boat house where he tried to hire a boat. There was a great deal of excitement on account of two boys being drowned two days before and all the boats were being used by parties searching for the bodies. When he couldn't get a boat Fred went back to his boarding house, secured a lunch and went over the the hills, evidently on a chestnutting tour. In the afternoon he stopped at a farm house eight miles from Ithaca, where he bought a lunch. He told the farmer's daughter who he was and that he was attending Cornell. The girl was a school teacher and asked him many questions about his studies.

"There can be no mistake, the boy was Fred, for he mentioned his mother and myself. About 2 o'clock Fred said: 'Well, I must be going; I've got to get back to college at half past four o'clock to take a lesson in music.'

"He started out toward Ithaca and we have traced him within three miles of the place. He stopped at another farm house for a drink of water and about three miles from the city met a farmer whom he asked if he was in the right road. A short distance farther on he was met by somebody and murdered."

"Do you know this to be a fact, Mr. Rew?" asked the reporter.

"Yes, sir;" he replied.

Then the reporter said that it was hard to believe that the boy had been murdered, and Mr. Rew said:

"When I tell you he was murdered, I'm telling what I know to be a fact. The body has been moved since the murder."

Mr. Rew refused to tell anything further.

"The detectives will have it all cleared up in a few days and then I'll give you the whole story," he said.

The reward for the recovery of the body has been increased to $1,000, half of which is offered by the college at Ithaca.

DR. TALMAGE RESIGNS.

Would Not Ask His Old Congregation To Build a Fourth Church.

New York, Nov. 9.—It is announced that the association of the Rev. T. Dewitt Talmage with the Brooklyn Tabernacle has been formally severed. His resignation is due, he said, to the fact that he does not feel that he should ask his old congregation to build the fourth church for him.

He advises them to either join other churches or build for a new pastor.

Dr. Talmage's letter of resignation was dated on Monday and sent to the session. As to his future plans he says that he will either take a new pastorate or enter evangelistic work, "preaching the gospel to all people without money and without price."

The session met and formulated a letter to the Presbytery asking that they formally dissolve the pastoral relations between themselves and Dr. Talmage, and also expressing regret at his action.

American Cattle in Germany.

Berlin, Nov. 9.—The United Press correspondent was authorized to deny the correctness of German newspaper reports concerning an interview between Ambassador Runyon and Freiherr Marschall von Bieberstein, minister of foreign affairs. Neither one is responsible in any way for the published versions. It is untrue that Mr. Runyon told the German minister that the import sugar tax would soon be repealed. Nor did Marschall say that cases of infection with Texas fever had been reported by the American press. The negotiations are proceeding.

Murderer Baker Surrenders.

Tivoli, N. Y., Nov. 9.—Charles Baker the German gardner, who murdered his wife in a drunken rage at Clarendon house, the county seat of Millionaire Gerald Redmond, gave himself up yesterday. After shooting the woman Baker ran into the woods. Later in the evening he returned to the house and remained all night in the cellar. He did not know his wife was dead and he broke down completely at sight of the body.

Loyal Russian Hebrews.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 9.—Minister Count Vorentzoff-Dachkoff, acting for the czar and czarina, has thanked the Hebrew residents of St. Petersburg for their message of condolence upon the death of Alexander III. and for the loyal and patriotic sentiments expressed by them.

OWENS-BRECKINRIDGE FEUD.

A Bloody Tragedy Over the Result of the Election.

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 9.—A bloody political tragedy occurred in Lexington last evening when John Traynor, marshal of Athens, Ky., cut Lew Sharpe, probably fatally and shot Ike Davidson to death. Sharpe and Traynor were both democrats, Sharpe being a supporter of Owens and Traynor a Breckinridge man. They met in front of the Leland hotel. Sharpe accused Traynor of having voted for Denny, the republican. Traynor denied it, when Sharpe called him a liar. Traynor struck Sharpe, who is badly crippled as the result of having been shot in the knee during the war. The blow knocked Sharpe to the sidewalk, and before he could get up, Traynor drew a knife and began cutting the old soldier. Pat Toomey, a young friend of Sharpe, rushed to his assistance and knocked Traynor down. Ike Davidson jumped in and tried to separate them. Traynor scrambled to his feet and apparently trying to get away, went down the street with two pistols in his hands. The marshal turned and fired, the bullet striking Davidson in the stomach. He died in an hour. Sharpe was taken to the hospital where he is suffering greatly and it is more than likely he will die. Traynor was locked up. Davidson was a well known distiller. The origin of the bad feeling between the men dates back some time.

On election day John Green, who was Marshal Traynor's deputy, shot and fatally wounded George Toomey, a brother of the man who took part in the last affray. Pat Toomey, Sharpe and Davidson came to town to have Traynor arrested as an accessory to te shooting of Toomey, as the tatter is likely to die. Traynor had been arrested and released on bond when Sharpe met him in front of the hotel.

There is already a great deal of bad blood between the Owens and Breckinridge men here and it is feared that this will not be the last of the trouble. Green, who shot Toomey, was a Breckinridge man and Toomey an Owens follower. Sharpe is closely related to Stephen G. Sharpe, ex-treasurer of Kentucky.

"KING" KELLY DEAD.

The Famous Baseball Player Succumbs to Pneumonia.

Boston, Nov. 9.—Michael J. Kelly, familiarly known as "King" Kelly, well known ball player, died last night at the Emergency hospital from pneumonia, after a few days' illness. Kelly came from New York last Sunday night to fill an engagement, commencing Monday night, with a variety company at the Palace theatre, and was taken sick on the boat. Upon reaching here he went at once to the Plymouth house, where, on Monday, Dr. Galvin, who attended him, pronounced his sickness pneumonia. During Monday afternoon his condition became serious and in the evening he was removed to the Emergency hospital. Since that time he steadily grew worse and that night it was believed that he could not live through the night. He did, however, but during the next day he gradually sunk until about 10 o'clock last night, when death came.

His wife, who was in New York, was on her way to Boston, but did not reach his bedside before he died. During his illness members of the Boston lodge of Elks and other friends have been assiduous in their attentions, and doing all they could to add to his comfort.

Kelly was 37 years of age, a native of Troy, N. Y., and for 21 years has been a ball player, having been a professional since 1876. For the past two winters he has been on the variety stage, giving songs and recitations and was fairly successful. He had a fund of natural wit, was big-hearted and a great favorite among his fellow-players.

SEVEN DAYS OVERDUE.

The Rhynland Believed To Have Met With an Accident.

New York, Nov. 9.—The Red Star steamer Rhynland, which sailed from New York on Oct. 24, has not yet arrived at Antwerp, where she was due six days ago. The offices of the company in this city have been besieged by people who have friends or relatives on board. She carried 180 passengers of which number 163 were in the steerage. The saloon passengers were Allan H. Fuller, Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Sommerfelt, Dr. J. M. Huntington, Mrs. Annie S. Reed, Miss Eleanor L. Reed, Miss Mabel T. Reed and Miss B. C. Boudinot. In the second cabin were Mrs. Herman Boge and child, J. T. Chamberlain, Miss Alex Yaequest, Master Harry Chamberlain, Miss Rosa Foey and G. Casabo.

The Rhynland is a sister ship to the Belgenland, has a tonnage of 3,689 and is 423 feet long. Captain Mills was in command, with a crew of 150 men. The officers of the company think that she has broken her shaft or met with some other accident which has disabled her. They believe she will be heard from in a day or two.

Gov. Waite Disgusted.

Denver, Nov. 9.—Gov. Waite is going to leave Colorado. He is tired of the state and disgusted with his defeat. A well known populist said for the governor: He said that the latter is considering a proposition made to him to take up his residence in Illinois. The story is that the populists in Illinois have taken such a liking to the governor that they want him not only to reside among them but also to lead them to victory as their candidate for governor in 1896. The reception given Gov. Waite on his recent visit to the windy city pleased him immensely.

Pardoned by the President.

Washington, Nov. 9.—Pardons have been granted by the president in the following cases, to restore citizensip: David Eckel, sentenced in New York for three years for embezzling letters; A. E. Poirier, fined in New York for fraudulent registration; J. T. Sields, sentenced in New York to two years' imprisonment for embezzling letters.

Postmaster-General Bissell Better.

Washington, Nov. 9.—The condition of Postmaster-General Bissell, who has been confined to his home for the past week suffering from a heavy cold, is improved but not sufficiently so to enable him to leave the house during the inclement weather now prevailing. He hopes, however, to be able to resume his duties at the department early next week.

LOYALTY AND SORROW

Preparing for the Funeral of Alexander III.

Impressive Ceremonies at Livadia and Yalta—The Body Arrives at Sebastopol and Placed in a Railway Carriage Fitted Up as a Chapel—Guarded by Army Officers.

St. Petersburg, Nov 9.—The most solemn of religious services were held in the church at Livadia, to which the body of Alexander III. was removed. Masses were said in the presence of the body. The services were attended by Emperor Nicholas II., the czarina and the Prince and Princess of Wales, the representatives of various foreign powers and many others. The czar was deeply affected.

A dispatch dated at Yalta said: "The body has been taken into the chapel and lies on a gilded catafalque shaded with palms, directly under the dome. It is clad in the green and gold uniform of the first regiment. The hands are folded on the breast, which is strewn thickly with orders. The face and scalp have been enameled white. The figure has shrunk noticeably, but there is no change in the face, excepting the pallor of death. The feet are turned toward the altar."

At the mass in Livadia the Bishop of Simferopol officiated. He was assisted by all the district clergy in white vestments. The service was intoned with magnificent effect. The second service was attended by many army officers, whose brilliant uniforms set the chapel ablaze with vivid colors. At the end of the service the troops defiled past the body. They were followed by hundreds of civilians.

Throughout the march from Livadia to Yalta minute guns were fired by the warships off the coast, bells were tolled and muffled drums were beaten. After the service on the quay the czar and the grand dukes carried the coffin aboard the Pamiat Merkooria, which sailed at once for Sebastopol.

Sebastopol, Nov. 9.—The cruiser Pamiat Merkooria, with the body of Alexander III., arrived here in the afternoon amid the firing of salutes and the tolling of bells. The czar and the grand dukes carried the coffin ashore and placed it in a railway carriage fitted as a funeral chapel. The train started northward at once. High military officers will guard the body throughout the journey to St. Petersburg.

Moscow, Nov. 9.—This city is making ready to receive the body of Alexander III. with all the pomp of mourning. The streets have been hung with black. The fronts of many houses and shops have been hidden with black and white cloth. Flags wound with crape are seen in every window. On the corners and in the squares funeral arches are building with feverish haste. In the Kremlin scores of workmen are kept busy night and day. They have laid a wide board walk from the Cathedral of the Assumption past the palace to the Cathedral of the Archangel Michael, where the body will lie in state. The immense catafalque is almost done. It occupies nearly a half of the small floor. The Cathedral of the Assumption, which is used for coronation ceremonies, is much larger than the Cathedral of the Archangel Michael, but is not so beautiful, as the latter building has been filled with precious pictures and gems of gold, brass and wood carving.

The city is sparing nothing in its efforts to show its loyalty and sorrow. Subscriptions for a monument to Alexander III. in Moscow have been opened. The weather is bitterly cold, but clear and dry.

Religious Services at Washington.

Washington, Nov. 9.—The religious services at the Russian legation in memory of the late Emperor Alexander III. began this morning and consisted of a solemn requiem mass of which the celebrant was Bishop Nicolas of the Greek church of San Francisco. The president and his cabinet were invited to be present. Invitations were also extended through the French ambassador Mr. Patenotre, acting dean of the diplomatic corps, to the chief representatives of foreign governments now in Washington, and all who are in the city accepted. As the available space in the legation for the memorial services is not capable of seating more than 125 guests, the invitations were limited to the president and his cabinet and the diplomatic corps, and did not include judges of the supreme court and senators and representatives, as is usual on such occasions.

To Christen the St. Louis.

Washington, Nov. 9.—President and Mrs. Cleveland will leave Washington next Monday for Philadelphia, where Mrs. Cleveland will christen the new ocean liner St. Louis. They will leave on a special train over the Pennsylvania railroad, accompanied by all the members of the cabinet and the ladies of their families, except Postmaster General and Mrs. Bissell, the former being ill, and Private Secretary Thurber. They will run directly to the shipyards and at high tide the launching will take place, after which the party will partake of a luncheon returning to Washington in the evening.

Pennoyer Blames Cleveland.

Portland, Ore., Nov. 9.—Governor Pennoyer in an interview said: "Two years ago the people jumped out of the frying pan into the fire; this year they have jumped back into the frying pan. this election landslide is really an unwitting rebuke to Cleveland for adhering to the republican financial policy until the country is nearly bankrupt."

Sleighing in New York State.

Kingston, N. Y., Nov. 9.—A snow storm has been raging in this section since early morning. There is fully three inches of snow on the ground and sleighing is reported at Hunter and other places in Green and Delaware counties.

Polish Priests Arrested.

Berlin, Nov. 9.—Many Catholic priests in Russian Poland have been arrested for refusing to take the oath of allegiance to the new czar. At Lublin Bishop Jacdekski was arrested for reading the oath in Polish.

II.

The jackal winced, though he was full three seasons old, but you cannot resent an insult from a person with a beak a yard long, and the power of driving it like a javelin. The adjutant was a most notorious coward, but the jackal was worse.

"We must live before we can learn," said the mugger, "and there is this to say. Little jackals are very common, child, but such a mugger as I am is not common. For all that I am not proud, since pride is destruction; but take notice, it is fate, and against his fate no one who swims or walks or runs should say anything at all. I am well contented with fate. With good luck, a keen eye, and the custom of considering whether a creek or a backwater has an outlet to it ere you ascend, much may be done."

"Once I heard that even the Protector of the Poor made a mistake," said the jackal viciously.

"True; but there my fate helped me. It was before I had come to my full growth—before the last famine but three (by the Right and Left of Gunga, how full the streams used to be in those days!). Yes, I was young and unthinking, and when the flood came who so pleased as I? A little made me very happy then. The village was deep in flood, and I swam above the ghaut and went far inland, up to the rice-fields, and they were deep in good mud. I remember also a pair of bracelets (glass they were, and troubled me not a little) that I found that evening. Yes, glass bracelets; and, if my memory serves me well, a shoe. I should have shaken off both shoes, but I was hungry. I learned better later. Yes. And so I fed and rested me; but when I was ready to go to the river again the flood had fallen, and I walked through the mud of the main street. Who but I? Came out all my people, priests and women and children, and I looked upon them with benevolence. The mud is not a good place to fight in. Said a boatman: 'Get axes and kill him, for he is the mugger of the ford.' 'Not so,' said the Brahmin. 'Look, he is driving the flood before him! He is the godling of the village.' Then they threw many flowers at me, and by happy thought one led a goat across the road."

"THEY THREW MANY FLOWERS AT ME."

"How good—how very good is goat!" said the jackal.

"Hairy—too hairy, and when found in the water more than likely to hide a cross-shaped hook. But that goat I accepted, and went down to the ghaut in great honor. Later, my fate sent me the boatman who had desired to cut off my tail with an ax. His boat grounded upon an old shoal which you would not remember."

"We are not all jackals here," said the adjutant. "Was it the shoal made where the stone boats sank in the year of the great drought—a long shoal that lasted three floods?"

"There were two," said the mugger—"an upper and a lower shoal."

"Ay, I forgot. A channel divided them, and later dried up again," said the adjutant, who prided himself on his memory.

"On the lower shoal my well wisher's craft grounded. He was sleeping in the bows, and, half awake, leaped over to his waist—no, it was no more than to his knees—to push off. His empty boat went on and touched again below the next reach, as the river ran then. I followed, because I knew men would come out to drag it ashore."

"And did they do so?" said the jackal, a little awe-stricken. This was hunting on a scale that impressed him.

"There and lower down they did. I went no further, but that gave me three in one day—well-fed manjis (boatmen) all, and, except in the case of the last (then I was careless), never a cry to warn those on the bank."

"Ah, noble sport! But what cleverness and great judgment it requires!" said the jackal.

"Not cleverness, child, but thought. A little thought in life is like salt upon rice, as the boatmen say, and I have thought deeply always. The gavial, my cousin, the fish-eater, has told me how hard it is for him to follow the fish, and how one fish differs from the other, and how he must know them all, both together and apart. I say that is wisdom; but, on the other hand, my cousin the gavial lives among his people. My people do not swim in companies with their mouths out of the water, as Rewa does; nor do they constantly rise to the surface of the water, and turn over on their sides, like Mohoo and little Chapta, nor do they gather in shoals after flood, like Batchua and Chilwa."

"All are very good eating," said the adjutant, clattering his beak.

"So my cousin says, and makes a great to-do over hunting them, but they do not climb the banks to escape his sharp nose. My people are otherwise. Their life is on the land, in the houses, among the cattle. I must know what they do and what they are about to do, and, adding the tail to the trunk, as the saying is, I make up the whole elephant. Is there a green branch and an iron ring hanging over a doorway? The old mugger knows that a boy has been born in that house, and must some day come down to the ghaut to play. Is a maiden to be married? The old mugger knows, for he sees the men carry gifts back and forth; and she, too, comes down to the ghaut to bathe before her wedding, and—he is there. Has the river changed its channel, and made new land where there was only sand before? The mugger knows."

"Now, of what use is that knowledge?" said the jackal. "The river has shifted even in my little life." Indian rivers are nearly always moving about in their beds, and will shift sometimes as much as two or three miles in a season, drowning the fields on one bank, and spreading good silt on the other.

"There is no knowledge so useful," said the mugger, "for new land means new quarrels. The mugger knows. Oho! The mugger knows. As soon as the water has drained off he creeps up the little creeks that men think would not hide a dog, and there he waits. Presently comes a farmer saying he will plant cucumbers here, and melons there, in the new land that the river has given him. He feels the good mud with his bare toes. Anon comes another, saying he will put onions and carrots and sugar cane in such and such places. They meet as boats adrift meet, and each rolls his eye at the other under the big blue turban. The old mugger sees and hears. Each calls the other 'brother,' and they go to mark out the boundaries of the new land. The mugger hurries with them from point to point, shuffling very low through the mud. Now they begin to quarrel! Now they say hot words! Now they pull turbans! Now they lift up their lathis (clubs), and at last one falls backward into the mud and the other runs away. When he comes back the dispute is settled, as the iron-bound bamboo of the loser witnesses. Yet they are not grateful to the mugger. No, they cry 'murder,' and their families fight with sticks, twenty a side. My people are good people—upland Jats—Malwais of the Bet. They do not give blows for sport, and when the fight is done the old mugger waits far down the river out of sight of the village, behind the kikar-scrub yonder. Then come they down, my broad-shouldered Jats—eight or nine together under the stars, bearing the dead man upon a bed. They are old men with gray beards and voices as deep as mine. They light a little fire—ah! how well I know that fire!—and they drink tobacco, and they nod their heads together forward in a ring, or sideways towards the dead man on the bank. They say the English law will come with a rope for this matter, and that such a man's family will be ashamed, because such a man must be hanged in the great square of the jail. Then say the friends of the dead: 'Let him hang!' and the talk is all to do over again—once, twice, twenty times in the long night. Then says one at last: 'The fight was a fair fight. Let us take the blood-money, a little more than is offered by the slayer, and we will say no more about it.' Then do they haggle over the blood-money, for the dead was a strong man, leaving many sons. Yet before amratvela (sunrise) they put the fire to him a little, as the custom is, and the dead man comes to me, and he says no more about it. Aha! my children, the mugger knows—the mugger knows—and the Malwah Jats are a good people!"

"They are too close—too narrow in the hand for my crop," croaked the adjutant. "'They waste not the polish on a cow's horn,' as the saying is; and, again, who can glean after a Malwai?"

"Ah, I—glean—them," said the mugger.

"Now, in Calcutta of the South, in the old days," the adjutant went on, "everything was thrown into the streets, and we picked and chose. Those were dainty seasons. Now they keep their streets as clean as the outside of an egg, and my people fly away. To be clean is one thing; to dust, sweep, and sprinkle seven times a day wearies the very gods themselves."

"There was a down-country jackal had it from a brother, who told me, that in Calcutta of the South all the jackals were as fat as otters in the rains," said the jackal, his mouth watering at the bare thought of it.

"Ah, but the white faces are there—the English, and they bring dogs from somewhere down the river, in boats—big fat dogs—to keep those same jackals lean," said the adjutant.

"They are, then, as hard-hearted as these people? I might have known. Neither earth, sky, nor water shows charity to a jackal. I saw the tents of a white face last season, after the rains, and I also took a new yellow bridle to eat. The white faces do not dress their leather in the proper way. It made me very sick."

"That was better than my case," said the adjutant. "When I was in my third season, a young and bold bird, I went down to the river where the big boats come in. The boats of the English are thrice as big as this village."

"He has been as far as Delhi, and says all the people there walk on their heads," muttered the jackal. The mugger opened his left eye and looked keenly at the adjutant.

"It is true," the big bird insisted. "A liar only lies when he hopes to be believed. No one who had not seen those boats could believe this truth."

"That is more reasonable," said the mugger. "And then?"

"From the insides of this boat they were taking out great pieces of white stuff, which in a little while turned to water. Much split off and fell about on the shore, and the rest they swiftly put into a house with thick walls. But a boatman, who laughed, took a piece no larger than a small dog and threw it to me. I—all my people—swallow without reflection, and that piece I swallowed as is our custom. Immediately I was afflicted with an excessive cold that, beginning in my crop, ran down to the extreme end of my toes, and deprived me even of speech, while the boatmen laughed at me. Never have I felt such cold. I danced in my grief and amazement till I could recover my breath, and then I danced and cried out against the falseness of this world; and the boatmen derided me till they fell down. The chief wonder of the matter, setting aside that marvelous coldness, was that there was nothing at all in my crop when I had finished my lamentings!"

The adjutant had done his very best to describe his feelings after swallowing a seven-pound lump of ice off an American ice-ship, in the days before Calcutta made her ice by machinery, but, as he did not know what ice was, and as the mugger and the jackal knew rather less, the tale missed fire.

WHERE LEE WORSHIPPED.

Kings County's Oldest Episcopalian Church where Gen. Jackson was Baptized.

After sixty years of an existence marked by many a vicissitude, disturbed by many a troublous period, one of the salient features—a veritable landmark—in the ecclesiastical history of Long Island stands upon the point of being swept away into the regions where repose the things that have been. In a very short time St. John's Church, at Fort Hamilton, N. Y., the original, quaint old wooden building, will be torn down—happily only to make room for a handsome and more durable stone structure in which to carry on the traditions of the place where Robert E. Lee, the Confederate General, once worshipped and was vestryman; where "Stonewall" Jackson was baptized, and where many a gallant soldier and sincere Christian knelt during the six decades which it has seen.

It was in the summer of 1848, after a series of brilliant victories in Mexico, that the First artillery regiment was ordered to Fort Hamilton. Major Jackson, afterwards "Stonewall" Jackson, then in his twenty-fifth year, and already a major, rode in the lines in command of his men. A little less than a year later he received the sacrament of baptism.

In the list of vestrymen is the name, "Robert E. Lee," captain, Engineer Corps, vestryman. This is no less a person than the famous Confederate general. The government undertook to make great improvements at Fort Hamilton in 1844, and a corps of engineers, under Lee's command, was ordered down to the fort. Captain Lee leased a cottage from the administrators of the Corteiyon estate in what is now Fourth avenue. This cottage is still standing, though there has been an extra story added to it. By one of the curious turns in the wheel of destiny it passed into the possession of Levi P. Morton, and was by him sold to the present proprietor, who has turned it into a beer garden and restaurant.

Captain Lee was an active member of the Episcopal Church, having been confirmed in Christ Church, Alexandria, Va., the edifice in which Washington worshipped. After the ceremony the officiating bishop said, "Captain Lee, if you will serve God as faithfully as you have hitherto served your country I shall envy you your crown."

TRACTION PROGRESS.

Scotch Plains Citizens Discuss the Road.

COMPANY READY TO PROCEED.

All Citizens Glad to Have the Road Come, If It Passes Some One Else's Door—Ex-Judge Codington Gives Counsel—Sheriff Kyte Urges Enterprise—Another Meeting Soon.

The meeting of the Fanwood Township Committee last night was called to order by Chairman Miller. The reading of the minutes was dispensed with to listen to the voice of the people in the trolley-road matter. Clerk Hand read the proposition for the proposed route, and the meeting was open for discussion.

John Cook said he had some signers for the proposed Second street route, but not enough; that several of the property-holders had said they were in favor of it, and would come to the meeting, but they failed to come.

T. S. Young and the Warren Ackerman estate refused to sign for the Forest avenue route. Mr. Young said it would necessitate passing his house twice, as he lived on the corner, and that he was like all the rest, in favor of the trolley, but wanted it to pass someone else's door.

Mr. Stanbery asked Mr. Bethell, the representative of the company, whether the company would consider any route the people asked. He said that any other route than the Midway avenue would have to be left to the engineers of the company and would have to be advertised. He also said the company would buy no right of way, as it would create a precedent that would bankrupt any company.

John R. Marsh asked $300 to cross his property for the Second street route. Mr. Flanders said if the company could get the right of way up Forest avenue he thought the Court could be asked to open Second street as a public highway. Ex-Judge W. R. Codington, the Town Counsel, said it might take a year to open it in that way. T. S. Young proposed a route from North avenue (in Fanwood), to Forest avenue, to the village, and then to Plainfield by way of Mountain avenue. He said that route would be an accommodation the the people who wished to go to the Jersey Central station in Fanwood.

Mr. McKeown said the railroad people should be granted the franchise, as it seemed to be the only favorable route. The town had been trying for three weeks to get the property-owners on several routes to sign but had been unable to do so; now here was a company which had a route with the consent of the property-owners and they should either be granted or refused the franchise as there was no need in delaying the matter.

Mr. John wanted to know if they had had been granted a franchise in adjoining towns. Mr. Bethell said they had applied to Westfield, and it was to come up at their meeting next week. He also said they had the consent of over 51 per cent. of the property holders from Terrill road to Third street, Plainfield.

Sheriff Kyte said the only thing for the Committee to do was whether they would grant the franchise because it was not coming through the village, but was helping surrounding property. He said other towns were begging for railroads, and not putting things in the way to stop them.

Committeeman Downer said here was a company who wanted to come through the township; it is a sure thing; it will not hurt our town, and may eventually benefit it.

Counselor Codington said the Committee were the servants of the people. They were anxious to suit the people they represented, but there was only one favorable route before them, and that was the one of the company.

It was the wish of the Committee to adjourn one week and at the end of that time the people would have to show cause why the franchise should not be granted in some sort of petition of property owners. There would not be another meeting to discuss it pro and con, as there had been two meetings for that purpose now, and the Committee were as much at sea as ever.

Mr. Bartell said he would like to have the franchise granted tonight, as the company were anxious to begin work, and these adjournments were only setting them back. But if it was the final wish of the Committee he would meet with them and their counsel next Friday evening, and go over the ordinance together, and see if they could not arrive at a final conclusion of the matter.

Mr. Braker asked for a reading of the ordinance, and a discussion on its several sections separately. Town Counsel read the ordinance, but there was no objection to any of the sections but the one in which it says the company, in case they tear the road up and do not finish their road, the township shall have authority to sell all the company's materials such as wire, rails, etc. Some thought the company should furnish bonds, but Mr. Bethell said it would create a precedent that would make any company furnish four or five millions worth of bonds, and he did not think the company would do it. The matter was left to Town Counsel. Discussion was dropped, and regular business was taken up. The minutes of last meeting were read and approved. The treasurer reported a balance on hand of $371.56. The Registry Board and other bills were presented and ordered paid, and the meeting adjourned to meet Oct. 16, at 8 p. m.

ICE-CREAM AFTER VESUVIUS.

Epworth Leaguers and Their Friends Pleasantly Entertained.

Rev. Dr. C. R. Barnes entertained the members of the Epworth League of the First M. E. Church and their friends last night in Vincent Chapel, with a lecture on "Vesuvius and Its Victims", illustrated by stereopticon views. The stereopticon was ably managed by J. Hervey Doane of the Plainfield Camera Club. Dr. Barnes explained the pictures and told the story of his visit to Naples, Pompeii and Mount Vesuvius. After an hour of this interesting and instructive talk, the audience adjourned to the back of the room, where ice-cream, cake and coffee were served for a small charge. The management of the social part of the meeting was in the hands of Clifford A. McGee, who was ably assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Clark, Miss Trenham, Miss French, Mrs. J. R. Joy, Mrs. Krone, Miss Marsh.

The call for ice-cream was so great that a larger supply was sent for.

The Social Committee deserve great credit for their able management of the affair.

NEW PLAINFIELD INDUSTRIES.

A Chance for Machine Operators to Secure Employment.

In the Daily Press Want and Offer column today appears an advertisement of 50 girls wanted to work on sewing machines. The company advertising are anxious to start a large factory here, but do not feel justifiable in so doing unless the girl operators can be secured. Therefore if you want such a position write to the address given, and if a sufficient number is obtained the factory will be started.

Providing enough help can be secured, the third floor of the Dunlap Building, corner of Front and Somerset streets, will be used as a cloak manufactory by a firm from New York. The Want and Offer column of today's Press contains a notice for operators.

Surprise on Somerset Street.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Smalley of Somerset street was the scene last evening of a delightful surprise party. It was arranged by the young women of Mrs. Harned's boarding-house on Craig place. Mr. and Mrs. Harned went to call on Mr. and Mrs. Smalley early in the evening, and at 8 the other guests arrived in a body and unexpectedly greeted the host and hostess.

The evening passed away with games and other enjoyments. Miss Petrie conducted a very successful taffy pull, and thereby added greatly to the pleasure of the affair. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. James Harned, Miss Bigelow, Miss Petrie, the Misses Cutter, Mr. and Mrs. Will F. Williams, Miss Reynolds, and Miss Billings.

Guests of the Older Endeavorers.

Both the Senior Christian Endeavorers and the Juniors of the First Presbyterian Church joined in the enjoyment of a delightful evening in the chapel last evening. It was the night for the regular monthly sociable of the Seniors, and as special feature the children who are to become members of the society when they grow up, were entertained as guests of the older Endeavorers.

Games of various kinds and pleasant conversation were kept up during the evening. Refreshments of lemonade and cake were served to all and the whole affair was made one to be long remembered by the children.

Jarred by a Rock.

When the midnight express from Philadelphia bowled through Aldene on the Central Railroad tracks Wednesday night, the engineer was horrified to see a big obstruction on the tracks. He put the brakes hard on the train, but could n't stop in time to prevent running into the obstruction. The shock jarred some of the cars, and nearly shook sleeping passengers off the seats.

The obstruction proved to be a big rock that had rolled down from the Lehigh Valley elevation. The trainmen rolled the boulder off the track, and the train proceeded to its destination.

Checker Players Getting Together.

The more proficient checker players of Plainfield and the vicinity were to have met last evening at R. Boyce's hotel. Only a few assembled, however, and it was decided to wait until another night when more could come before deciding on holding a tournament.

Plainfield Musical Talent.

A Sunday-school concert will be held in the Bound Brook Presbyterian Church Sunday evening. P. L. Conde, Mr. Farrier, Horace J. Martin, and others from Plainfield, are expected to take part.

HARD DOLLARS.

Trinity People Tell of Their Earnings.

SELF-DENIAL IN A WORTHY CAUSE.

Personal Comforts and Luxuries Sacrificed for the Church—Good Humored Verse Descriptive of Pleasures Forsaken—Some Dollars Easily Won, Others Hard Earned.

The self-denial sociable in the lecture-room of Trinity Reformed Church last night afforded pleasure to the participants and profit to the church fund. The event was in charge of a joint committee of arrangements from Sunday-school and Christian Endeavor Society, the committee being H. C. VanEmburgh, Miss Louise Snediker, Mrs. Edward Cooley, Mrs. J. C. VanDyke, Miss Carrie Mehl, Miss Frances Mattison, and Miss May Sheppard. These seven did excellent service, under the efficient leadership of Chairman VanEmburgh.

Decorated for the occasion, the room presented a beautiful scene. The platform was deftly adorned by an artistic array of chrysanthemums, while others of the uncombed blossoms were woven into shades which softened the light of the piano lamps.

No admission fee was charged, but those who had earned or by self-denial had saved a dollar or portion thereof, handed their envelopes to Julius J. Williams at the door. The written statements of how the money was raised were passed to Superintendent E. E. Anthony, master of ceremonies, who read them with flashes of characteristic original wit.

The audience was large and appreciative. Besides this interesting readings, there was a fine programme. Ben La Vere played cornet solos, accompanied by Miss Nettie Mattison, who also accompanied the vocal solos of her sister Miss Fannie Mattison. Mr. Hyndman wrought music from the violin, and William Force from the banjo. Miss Snediker gave choice recitations; and a quartette consisting of Messrs. Bond, Holmes, Stevens and Cutter sang, accompanied by Miss Lillian Force. Master McKillop's violin solos were remarkably good for so young a performer, and of every selection on the programme an encore was demanded, and all acquitted themselves with much credit.

One of the enjoyable features of the evening was the parrot song which George Stevens was prevailed on to sing.

The varied ways in which the contributions were earned or saved, were interesting. Gloves, flowers and other articles of feminine finery, were denied; some walked and saved cab hire; a good lad helped his mother wash and iron; cake was baked and sold; a week's washing was done at home; "Mr. Nobody" drove a grocery wagon; election holiday was given up, and $3.60 was turned in as the earnings; one woman polished her own stove; at furniture repairing $1 10 was saved, and 25 cents earned by writing signs "Trespassing Forbidden" for a farmer; a long flannel nightshirt, home-made, saved a dollar purchase; one man, disguised over the signature D. B. Hill, stopped smoking one week; one woman polished her husband's shoes; making crullers and doing plain sewing was another method; one man used some medicine of his mother's instead of buying for himself, and another said he went to Willett's and saved a dollar on his pair of shoes.

Eloquent was the detailed statement of a hardworking man who gave a tracing on paper of the accompanying hard dollar and told of the manual labor he had done.

Some of the documents are worthy of production in full:

This dollar was earned by great self-sacrifice, as it necessitated first, my devoting my time to the work of making ten iron-holders when I wished to improve my time by reading "Heavenly Twins". Second, it was necessary for me to become an agent and go from door to door selling these articles. But the holders sold well, especially to some of the gentlemen of the congregation.

Good evening, ladies and gentlemen. I need no introduction as I am the First Lady of the White House, as you will see by my picture—and am sent to this church by a stranger who hears of the good you are doing in this city and your needs. She trusts that others may be prompted to follow suit. MARTHA.

I earned this dollar with hard work as I do all my dollars.

My wife gave me this dollar not to snore. (the only way I had of earning it).

This dollar seems like five to me for it represents one week of self-denial, viz: an abstinance from smoking for one long week.

I kept house for my mother while she went away a week. I do not know that I earned my dollar when I cooked the meals, for generally I forgot to put salt in the food, and when I did put salt in, I would get entirely too much in. Otherwise I worked hard enough to earn the money.

Mr. Q. could not deny himself so he kept Mrs. Q. from attending a place of amusemet, thereby saving a dollar. Mrs. Q. could not deny herself so she prevented Mr. Q. from going and thereby saved another dollar. So two dollars is sent herewith to the object for which the self-denial association was organized.

Several dropped into verse:

Here I lie,
The price of a tie.

Stitch by stitch
The table to array,
I earn my dollar,
The debt to pay.

"Be in the fashion or die",
Is a maxim I've oft heard quoted,
Though to fashion no slave am I,
To myself I am quite devoted,
So thinking this a fitting time
This same self to lay flat,
I will give to you this this money
And wear my last year's hat.

That "The pen is mightier than the sword",
Has been heard by every scholar;
I had no sword with which to work,
But my pen has earned a dollar.

My money earned, a rhyme I'll compose,
Though it will be brief as you may suppose,
And if you'll all listen and hush
I'll tell you I let my sweet "whiskers rush".

Cigars, candy, haircut, shave,
And an awful dirty collar,
On such things I've had to save
To make this mighty dollar.

In this way $84 42 was realized. It is believed that many would-be contributors were kept away by the bad weather. Any such may leave their amounts with Chairman VanEmburgh.

EAST AND WEST WON.

EXCITING COMPASS WHIST AT THE PARK CLUB.

Crack Players of the Town Meet Together in Lively Contest—North and South Lose by Only Four Points.

Exciting and interesting were the games of compass whist played at the Park Club smoker last evening. The playing continued until 10:30, when refreshments were served. The scores were announced and then the participants in the games amused themselves in various ways.

The East and West scored an average of 119 and thereby defeated the North and South by four pins. Of the victors the partners with the highest score were Howell and Townsend, while on the North and South side the high men were Ladd and Broadway.

The players were:

East and West—Wadsworth, McCutchen, Douglass, Hallock, Beebe, Mason, Mumford, Buehnell, Leonard, Drayton, Schoonmaker, Pinto, Scott, Waring, Lyman, Reed, Howell and Townsend.

North and South—Haviland, Peck, Northrop, Conklin, Ladd, Broadway, Kirchoff, Barrows, Whiton, Abbott, Perkins, Dumont, Matthews, Brown, Wells, Depew, Walz, Sandford.

IMPROVED FIRE BOXES.

Three Additional Locations for Giving Alarm.

The three new boxes which are to be added to the city's fire alarm system arrived yesterday. Chief Doane has set them up in the battery-room to test them.

The mechanism is of an improved pattern, the door cutting off all connections with the batteries when it is closed instead of a part of them. This makes the door safer as far as lightning and crossed wires are concerned and prevents waste of battery power.

The boxes will be placed in position next week. No. 21 will go to the corner of Watchung avenue and Third street, No. 35 to Fifth street and Arlington avenue and 46 to Second and Liberty streets. These localities have long been in need of connection with the Gamewell system.

Of Course We Will.

In connection with a portrait of Assemman Somers the Bound Brook Chronicle publishes the following:

"Last week the Somerville Messenger and the Plainfield Daily Press each printed a picture labeled the next Assemblyman of Somerset County. It was that of a gentleman somewhat advanced in years, with flowing beard and features resembling those of Andrew Lane, a 'first, last and all the time Democrat'. On Tuesday, however, a great change came over the aspect of things. The next Assemblyman got his whiskers shaved off, a luxuriant mustache appeared on his upper lip, and kind Father time rolled back the years a quarter of a century for him. In fact the next Assemblyman looks decidedly like Bound Brook's favorite son, Frank W. Somers, whose portrait appears above, and who deserves to sit in the Speaker's chair of the House of Assembly next Winter. Will The Messenger and The Daily Press please copy?"

Busy With Bargains.

One of the busiest places on Front street these days is White's department store. You will always find them busy selling the many good bargains that this house is noted for. And in these times when you want your money to go as far as possible and to make every cent count it will pay you to visit the store.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL MODELS

Helpful Ideas Gleaned from the Yearly Meeting.

SEVENTH-DAY SPIRITUAL PROGRESS.

How Teachers Should Prepare the Lessons—Increasing Interest and Efficiency Among the Bible Students—God's Providence in Dealing with Men.

With true Christian spirit and helpful results was continued the annual meeting of the New Jersey Seventh-Day Baptists in the New Market Baptist Church, fully and exclusively reported in The Daily Press last night.

Sunday-school work was made the subject of parliaments and discussions at the afternoon session yesterday. The open parliament omitted from the morning's programme—"How should Sabbath-school teachers prepare for teaching the lesson"—was conducted by Rev. J. C. Bowen of Marlborough. It proved to be a most interesting part of the meeting, nearly everyone taking part.

The different lines of preparation for teaching were brought out by short expressions of opinions. The teacher should be adapted to the class. He should study the pupils and thus learn what particular points claim special attention in building up the character of the scholars. He should prepare himself by prayer for God's help and have a love for the work and a love for the souls of those he instructs. Dr. Lewis talked about the need of having a thorough understanding of the lessons, and Pastor Peterson made brief remarks on the special application of the lesson to the class.

The second parliament was led by Rev. I. L. Cottrell of Shiloh. His subject was "How may the interest and efficiency of our Sabbath-schools be increased?" It was very helpful to all in the audience. Mr. Cottrell showed two pictures in crayon, one of a happy child, and the other of an old man in prison, which illustrated a poem that he read. It told of the painting in Florence of a child's portrait and the investigation years afterwards when the subject was found to have become a criminal and was imprisoned in his old age.

The matters specially considered in the parliament were: how to get the old people into our Sabbath-schools, how to keep the young people there, what can be done for the infant department and ways of improving our schools. All were thoroughly discussed before the parliament was declared closed. The address expected from Rev. J. G. Burdick of New York was not given because of lack of time, but Mr. Burdick's participation in the discussions made up for the omission.

Mrs. Reune Randolph conducted a very successful "normal class", taking the congregation as scholars and going through the teaching of a lesson in a model way. The lesson selected was that for November 17, a part of the sermon on the Mount according to St. Luke. Pastors and teachers and general church workers were in the "class", and the consideration of various points of Christ's great discourse was thorough and interesting. The session came to a conclusion with a short prayer by Rev. Mr. Bowen.

In the evening a splendid sermon was preached by Mr. Bowen. His text was Hebrews xi: 24-25, "By faith Moses, when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter; choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season".

God's providence, shown in His ways of dealing with man's welfare and how He brings out great results from small causes, were the themes of the sermon. A sympathetic, forcible preacher, Mr. Bowen held the close attention of the congregation. After the discourse a conference in the form of a prayer and experience meeting was conducted by Mr. Burdick. With it closed the services of the day.

Not to Be Trifled With.

Trifles may be "light as air" and yet lead to grave results; a trifling weakness of the sight, for instance, may lead to permanent impairment and probable loss of vision, if not attended to at once. At the first indication of failing sight you should go to Collier's, 103 Park avenue, and get expert opinion as to the true condition of your eyes. Examinations free.

Miss Bradford to Speak.

The regular meeting of the Council of the Citizens Organized Aid Association, to be held in the parlors of Crescent Avenue Church next Monday evening at 8, will be addressed by Miss Cornelia F. Bradford, Superintendent of the University Settlement in Jersey City. All persons interested are invited to attend.

Undaunted in Defeat.

J. E. Martine has received letters from Messrs. Oliver, Green, Cook and Clauss, thanking him, and through him the Democrats of Plainfield, for their loyal support in the late campaign. They say: Though defeated, the principles for which they contended are as worthy of battle and vindication as ever.

SATAN'S CENTRAL.

A Young Woman From That District Speaks to Plainfield.

The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the Park Avenue Baptist Church held a special missionary meeting last evening in the lecture-room of the church. The leader of the meeting was Miss Adelia Runyon. After singing several hymns, Rev. J. W. Richardson led in prayer, a Scripture reading by the leader followed, and a quartette, composed of Miss Elma Runyon, Miss Adelaide Runyon, William Stimpson and Thomas A. Cuming, rendered the selection "Our Country's Voice is Pleading".

Miss A. M. Collishaw, a worker in the Mariners' Temple, was then introduced. She told of the field and methods, in short, as follows:

The Mariners' Temple is situated just off Chatham Square, New York, in that district known as "Satan's Headquarters". Our workers go out In His Name surrounded by all sorts of sin. Every Sunday we have fourteen services, four of which are open-air services held by bands of workers who go about the streets for that purpose. They have done a vast amount of good in reaching men who cannot be reached otherwise.

There is dispensary in connection with the Temple open every day from one to three with physician and trained nurse in attendance. A kindergarten and a day nursery are open every day for the children. A temperance meeting is held every Monday evening for girls and boys, followed by a temperance rally for men. Tuesday we have meetings for Jewish people, and industrial school sessions for Jewish girls. Wednesday comes the regular mid-week service. The Boys Brigade meets Thursdays. There is a class in physical culture and a meeting especially for the Italians. The industrial school for girls meets Friday afternoons, and in the evening of that day, the Christian Endeavor Society meets, and a special service is held for boys.

The Jewish services and Sunday-school are conducted Saturday. The tenement house work is a very heart-breaking task, and is difficult to describe, "Come and see for yourselves", said Miss Collishaw. In the Summer we have a flower mission and fresh air work.

After more remarks by Miss Collishaw on their financial condition and the ways in which they needed help, a collection was taken up while the quartette sang "Pass along the invitation". Another hymn was sung and then Pastor Richardson dismissed the meeting with the benediction.

THE TEAMS NOW TIE.

Last Night's Game Was a Victory for the Potters.

Much interest was manifested in a game on the Arlington alleys between Potters and Scotts last evening. Potters won by 212 pins, and thereby tied with Scotts in the series of games played at the Arlington. Of the seven games rolled each team has now won three and tied in one.

NOT THE MAYOR'S FAULT.

Can't Get Pipe Fast Enough, is the Contractor's Plea.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:

If Mayor Gilbert is to be retained in his present official position until the completion of the sewer system, he has many years of service before him. The council has given the work of construction to a firm which in two months has built 3,000 feet of sewer. At that rate the present contract will not be finished until April of 1896. The two months they have been working are the best two months of the year for sewer construction. Between now and April of 1896 there will be about ten months unsuited to advantageous work, which added to the 16 months ahead of us means that the present contract will not be finished until some time in 1897. The work under contract is not one-quarter of what must be done. You may now do your own figuring and you will find that the 20th century will be well advanced before the work is finished. In fact unless Mayor Gilbert outlives the average expectancy he may not see the great and mighty work which is to be a monument to his glory completed.

SLEEPY TOWN.

He'll Do It.

People complain that several flagstones in front of a newly-completed house on Second street between Liberty and New streets were not replaced after they were taken up, and that a muddy section of sidewalk is the result. Street Commissioner Meeker promises to attend to it.

DEPOT DETECTIVES.

SHARP FELLOWS WHO HAVE INTERESTING EXPERIENCES.

Keep an Eye on the Crooks and Protect the Traveling Public—Spotters and Other Detectives Employed by the Railway Companies.

It was in the waiting room of a Jersey City railway station. People were flying to and fro for trains, and the scene was quite as animated as the rush of people around a circus ticket wagon. A smooth shaven, mild eyed man was standing near the door when people were pouring out for departing trains. The man, who was well dressed, seemed to be looking for some one about to leave. His eyes were fastened on the door, and each person who passed was subjected to his careful scrutiny. After a few minutes a stoutly built man, plainly dressed and wearing a black mustache, walked up behind the man at the door and tapped him on the shoulder. The man turned about, and the two men held a quiet but earnest two minutes' conversation. When it ended, the man with the mustache pointed toward the street door, and the other man, with an angry look, followed his direction.

"Don't come back," said the man, who gave what was apparently an order from one having authority. He spoke firmly, in a voice that could be heard several feet away.

It seemed strange that a man attending to his business should be ordered out and submit to the order. The reporter's curiosity prompted him to make an inquiry.

"What sort of a play was that?" he asked of the man with the mustache.

"What business is it of yours?" asked the man.

He seemed somewhat mollified when he learned that the inquiry was natural and was not caused by ulterior motives.

"Well," he said, "that innocent looking gentleman that you saw leave is one of the best known of the confidence men and thieves in the east. He is out of prison just now, but is watching out for his line of business. He sometimes hangs about on the ferryboats watching for victims on the incoming trains. I suspect that he was looking out today for the safe departure of some victim who has been finished up by the gang and would not squeal because he did not want his name in the papers. You see, we can't hold the crook, as we have no evidence. So we give him the run."

"And what is your business?" the reporter asked.

"Oh, I am a railroad detective, detailed here to protect patrons of the road." And the detective moved away.

Every railroad company has a small corps of detectives, bright fellows who do not win big reputations in big cases, but who are constantly employed in the hardest and most trying work. They are traveling from one end of the line to the other, looking up all sorts of depredations except the work known as spotting employees. That work is usually done by detectives hired from an agency. The reason is easily explained. The railroad detective, in order to carry on his work successfully, must have a large personal acquaintance with the employees of the road. It is a ten to one shot that if any one of them caught him spotting a friend he would be thenceforth useless. But there is no end of labor. The protection of patrons in large railroad stations from pickpockets and bunko men is a most important work. It requires a detective with a remarkable memory for faces and a most extensive acquaintance with sneak thieves. He must carry the rogues' gallery in his brain. It often happens, though, that a man possessed of the real detective intuition can come pretty near locating a thief by his appearance and manners.

For instance, while moving about in a crowd at a railroad station—a crowd that changes constantly—he will perhaps notice one man who remains there after the departure and arrival of several trains. That man is classified by the detective as a suspicious character. The detective watches him carefully, and then, if he is not quite sure, he politely asks the man whether he is waiting for a train. If the answer is unsatisfactory, the detective will observe that the waiting room is not a public loafing place, but is intended for passengers. In nine out of ten cases the experienced detective will know whether the man is lying. Station detectives, as they are called, must have a better knowledge of thieves than the average agency detective, for there is a great roar in a railroad office whenever a pocket is picked in a waiting room. It is to be said, however, that such occurrences are comparatively rare. The green goods man who goes to meet his victim waits outside the station or on the ferryboat. There is an end of the old days when bad men could play their work in waiting rooms, men like Grand Central Pete, who got his sobriquet because he was usually found hanging about the Grand Central station.

The railroad detective's work for the most part is hunting out freight thieves and employees who have destroyed property and in detecting thieves who make railroad property a mark. He is set on the trail of the man who draws a spike from the track or the small boy who throws a stone through a car window. When a switch is turned by an unknown hand, he investigates.

The theft of a ticket office calls forth talent which may have been wasted in profitless search for a boy who threw a stone at the locomotive.

A duty that keeps railroad detectives busy in times of labor troubles is the hunting down of writers of anonymous letters to railroad officers. Letters from cranks are thrown in the wastebasket, but letters containing threats to destroy railroad property are held for investigation. During strikes the detective corps is enlarged, the help being furnished by such agencies as Pinkerton's and Drummond's. Whenever a case involving large interests and requiring a special form of skill is to be handled, the agency is called upon.

Express companies usually employ two detectives unless a special guard is required for large shipments of money in sparsely settled regions. These men are principally employed to keep track of the messengers and to learn their records and habits and to trace out claims. Whenever a big robbery occurs, the company detective is in charge over all assistants that may be furnished. They do not come into conflict with railroad detectives unless there is a lawsuit between the two companies.

The railroad and express detectives are paid according to the requirements of the companies. In the far west, where freight stealing is often carried on by organized bands of highwaymen, men of nerve as well as brains are needed, and there they receive salaries as high as $250 a month. The ordinary railroad detective in the east receives considerable less, but enough for a good living.—New York Sun.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 11. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—How we may preach Christ.—II Tim. iv, 1-10.

In these words we have the solemn charge of the great Apostle Paul to Timothy, whom he had placed over the church at Ephesus, just before his departure from this life. It was fitting that at that particular time Paul should impress upon the mind of Timothy the importance of being faithful to his duties as a minister, for it is at the close of life more than at any other time that the solemnity and responsibility of life force themselves upon the human mind. Paul also realized the importance of faithfulness, for the reason that temptations would come to the people, and they would be led astray. "For the time will come," he says, "when they will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears, and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." There was this double reason, therefore, why Timothy should be faithful to his work. The same reasons exist today for all who are interested in spreading the gospel for faithfulness to their work, and whether ordained ministers or not, if we are interested in preaching Christ, for all can do that, we should be anxious to know how we may preach Christ that we may be faithful in the work. Paul lays down several principles to Timothy which may be of value as models and guides to us.

1. "Preach the word" (verse 2). This is his first injunction. Timothy was to preach the truth of God, as he expected to be judged by God for his work. The people might want sensationalism, but he was not to pander to their tastes. They might want false doctrines and fables, but he was not to satisfy them. His one duty was to preach God's word, and to preach all of it, and to preach it as the whole word of God. This is a timely warning for today. Many crave something else than the pure word of God, but they should not be pandered to. It is the gospel alone that is the power of God to salvation, and if we are anxious to save men we must magnify it.

2. "Reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long suffering and doctrine." This is the apostle's second injunction. Timothy was to reprove, or convince those in error of the error of their doctrines, and to rebuke the unruly and immoral. False doctrines must be reproved today and false lives rebuked.

"Watch thou in all things, endure affliction, do the work of an evangelist, make full proof of the ministry" (verse 5). This is the last injunction, still applicable. There must be watchfulness, adaptation to different lines of work and faithfulness in all things.

Bible Readings.—Ps. xl, 9; Isa. ix, 6; lii, 7; lv, 4, lxi, 1; Math. v, 16, xxviii, 19; Mark i, 4; vi, 10; Luke iv, 18, 43; John viii, 9; Acts ii, 14; iii, 12; iv, 8; Rom. x, 8, 9; I Cor. i, 17, 18; xv, 1, 2; Gal. i, 6-12; Heb. ii, 3.

Work of the Church Missionary Society.

The English correspondent of The Churchman supplies this summary: The annual report of the Church Missionary society shows that the society occupies 423 stations, of which 44 are in West Africa, 15 in eastern equatorial Africa, 18 in Egypt, Persia and Palestine, 178 in India, 22 in Ceylon, 10 in Mauritius, 24 in China, 14 in Japan, 41 in New Zealand, 48 in northwest America and 9 in the north Pacific. The society has on its European staff 339 clergy, 78 laymen and 428 women, of whom 275 are the wives of missionaries. There are also working in connection with the society 19 Eurasian clergy and the following native agents: 304 clergy, 4,145 laymen and 977 women. The native Christian adherents number 199,882, of whom 177,823 are baptized. The communicants number 52,343.

Spreading Biblical Knowledge.

A Baptist minister of Australia has been gathering statistics regarding the Biblical knowledge of young people. He finds, from his observations of quotations made by young people in public, that there is marked increase in their accuracy over former years. He assures us that the custom of marking Bibles is becoming more common, and that there is increasing familiarity with the revised version. For all of this encouraging progress the Christian Endeavor movement may modestly claim some share of praise.—Exchange.

Floating Endeavor Work In Brooklyn.

From Jan. 1 to June 30 75 meetings were held at the Brooklyn navy yard. Some member of the city union navy yard committee was present at each meeting. Sixty-six societies have assisted at different meetings. The total attendance of sailors was 8,284, the average being 110. The total attendance of visitors was 3,268, an average of 43 at each meeting.

Juniors Adding to Their Numbers.

During the last three months the net increase in the enrollment of the junior societies is 402 societies, now making a total of 7,211 junior societies, as against 6,809 at the time of the Cleveland convention.—Golden Rule.

Christian Endeavor Abroad.

The Christian Endeavor societies in the northern part of London have organized what is known as the North London Christian Endeavor union, having about 800 members.

One society in Tasmania, the Zeehan Wesleyan, has a most novel membership—20 young men, three young ladies. This society conducts mission services every Sunday.

The Pitt Street Wesleyan society, Auckland, New Zealand, with a membership of 90, does much work for the Master. The 12 committees are all hard at work, visiting the homes of the poor and the hospital and Old People's refuge and holding services in country churches as well as carrying on cottage meetings.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

GOVERNMENT BONDS.

It Is Stated $50,000,000, or More, Will Be Issued.

New York, Nov. 10.—It was stated on Wall street yesterday that there will be an issue of $50,000,000 or $100,000,000 five per cent. government bonds before congress again reassembles. When the last issue of $50,000,000 was made, and the public declined to take the bonds, a syndicate of bankers headed by John A. Stevens, president of the United States Trust company, and Edward King,, president of the Union Trust company, made the sale.

A banker who was actively interested in that movement makes the following statement:

"There will be an issue of bonds shortly. The president and secretary of the treasury have determined that the gold reserve shall not be further impaired. They have been advised that an export movement of gold will begin in a few weeks, and they accordingly have determined to take prompt measures."

When asked whether a syndicate would be formed which would be guaranteed a commission to float the bonds he replied:

"I do not know. That lies in the discretion of the authorities in Washington. This much is certain—the five per cent. bonds will be issued probably upon the three per cent. basis, as before. They will be offered to the public; but the same gentlemen who made the last issue a success have assured the president that they will carry through the forthcoming issue." The banker added that if $50,000,000 bonds was insufficient, $50,000,000 more would be issued.

MORE REPUBLICAN GAINS.

Rout of the Democrats Seems To Have Been Complete.

New York, Nov. 10.—The latest returns show that the democrats have been routed in all directions. The republicans have carried everything before them in almost every instance, and where they have not been successful the populists, or a fusion of republicans and populists, have accomplished the same results.

It is now settled for certain that Dockery has not pulled through in Missouri his republican opponent having defeated him by a small majority. In Virginia Peter J. Otey defeated J. Hampton Hoge.

In Texas the populists have made great gains. It now appears taht the Illinois delegation to congress will be republican when the official count of the ballotting is completed.

Downing, dem., concedes his defeat to Rhinaker, rep. The later advices indicate that the republicans have captured alll the congressmen.

In Tennessee the vote for governor is so close that it seems as if only the official canvass will decide whether the state has gone democratic or republican.

One of the Fortunate.

Baltimore, Nov. 10.—John K. Cowen, one of the few fortunate democrats to escape Tuesday's political revolution, is a close personal friend of President Cleveland and Hon. Wm. L. Wilson. It was because of their earnest entreaties that Mr. Cowen consented to run for congress in the 4th congressional district. He made an aggressive campaign on free trade lines and proved to be the bulkwark of democracy in this city. In analyzing the cause of Tuesday's landslide Mr. Cowen says that the commercial depression in the country during the past two years was responsible for much of the dissatisfaction with the democratic party; it was accentuated by the delay in the passage of the tariff bill and by a doubtful financial policy.

A Notorious Woman Arrested.

Muskogee, I. T., Nov. 10.—Bill Cook's famous sister Lulu arrived here in custody of Deputy Marshal Oliver Dobson. She was captured in Tahlequah. Her brother Jim who was present tore the warrant, which he grabbed from Dobson's belt and then looked into the muzzle of Oliver's six-shooter. He threatened if he ever got free to kill Dobson on sight for taking his sister away. Jim is under arrest at Tahlequah guarded by four Indian police who were stopping at the home of Lulu Cook. The woman is charged with selling whiskey to the Indians and harboring outlaws. She told Dobson that she saw her brother Bill Tuesday last, and that he would never be taken alive.

An English Training Ship Missing.

London, Nov. 10.—Much anxiety is felt for the safety of the training ship Calypso which, with the Active, Ruby and Volage, was caught in a gale during a voyage to the Canary islands. The Calypso parted from her companions at the height of the storm on Oct. 24 and has not been seen since. The Active, Ruby and Volage arrived at Las Palmas, Canary islands, on Wednesday. The naval officials at Devenport try to reassure all inquirers by recalling the experience of the Calypso two years ago. She then was missing for several days and came into port eventually under sail with der engines disabled.

Robbed the Red Men.

Camden, N. J., Nov. 10.—Andrew Hoey, a venerable looking man was sentenced by Judge Vroom, in the criminal court to two years' imprisonment at hard labor for embezzling the funds of a lodge of Red Men of which he was the treasurer. Mr. Hoey said he had taken the money to support himself while out of work, intending to replace it when he should obtain employment.

A Striker Convicted of Murder.

Woodland, Cal., Nov. 10.—S. D. Worden, one of the strikers charged with murder in connection with the wrecking of the train near Sacramento, July 11, which resulted in the killing of the engineer and four United States soldiers, was convicted of murder in the first degree. He will be sentenced Monday next.

A FAMOUS WOMAN.

THE WIT, BEAUTY, TALENT AND EXTRAVAGANCE OF MME. LE BRUN.

A Skillful Artist, and a Great Beauty Who Shone in Marie Antoinette's Fatal Court. Her Famous Seven Thousand Dollar Dinner.

The closing years of the reign of the unfortunate Louis XVI, were almost exclusively devoted by his court to the worship of pleasure. While the King himself was busily employed moulding horseshoes over the anvil in the royal smithy—for he was an amateur blacksmith—his wife and her fair ladies of honor used to dress like shepherdesses and receive the shepherds, chief of whom was Lauzun, the Beau Brummel of his day, in the Trianon, near Versailles, where dancing would usually be prolonged till the dawn. At that hour a visit would be paid by the Queen and her maids to the dairy, where they milked the cows, filling pitcher after pitcher which they would afterward present very graciously to the lips of their beaux cavaliers.

They enjoyed the sweets of these happy moments without ever dreaming that a revolution was in the air which would, with the cold steel of its guillotine, slit most of their dainty necks, or foreseeing that the fires of the Faubourg St. Antoine were preparing even then to scorch to death many of these scintillating moths that fluttered around a doomed crown and a tottering throne.

One of the favorites of Marie Antoinette in her more or less innocent merrymakings at the Trianon was Mme. Elizabeth Le Brun, a famous portrait painter of that epoch. The maiden name of this lady was Vigee. She was born in Paris, 1755, and early in life displayed signs of undoubted artistic talents, which she inherited from her father, who was himself an artist. Mlle. Vigee used in her girlhood to frequent the public galleries of the Louvre and Luxembourg, copying Rembrandts and Vandykes; as well as Greuze's female heads, with such skill that she soon was enabled to earn a comfortable competence for herself.

After some misfortune that followed her father's death she married Mr. Le Brun, a picture dealer, whom her stepfather considered wealthy. The marriage was an unhappy one and after a time they seperated. Then her success came, her bewitching beauty forming an important factor in the triumphs that attended the efforts of her brush. She reached the climax of her glory when she was specially invited by Queen Marie Antoinette to become a member of the French court.

La Harpe, the poet, wrote enthusiastic verses in her praise, while other bards penned sonnets to her eyebrows and delivered themselves of yards of exquisite gush on the fascinating charms of her person. The result was that she became the lioness of dainty aristocratic circles. Fashionable society used to attend her bi-weekly receptions. Her palatial home in the heavenly fields was the resort of nobles, artists, and literarians and their respective wives.

The apartments of her palace were heated with fragrant aloes wood, the fires being sometimes lighted with bank notes. Her table in the refectory was covered with gold plate, over which petits soupers were given, characterized by Attic taste and Parisian splendor, while on the balcony without, some of the most talented artists of the city soothed the ears of the guests with snatches of exquisite music. Prominent among the habitues of the mansion were the dandified Viscount de Segur and M. Delille, the parasite of the royal family, who afterward became one of the poetic glorifiers of the bloody reign of terror.

One day this poetical wag read for Mme. Le Brun tranlations of the travels of Anacharisie, in which that writer minutely described the courses and surroundings of an old Greek banquet. The fair artist was taken by the glowing description and she determined to have a feast under her own gilded roof in every particular similar to that given by Aspasia. The cook, having been furnished with recipes, for Greek sauces, proceeded to business immediately, and succeeded in serving a genuine Athenian dinner, consisting of eels and birds, garnished with honey, figs, olives, and grapes of Corinth, together with a score or so of other dainty delicacies of more or less classic origin. This feast was spread over an antique table surrounded with Grecian couches rich with draperies.

While the guests partook of the good things set before them, Delille, the poet, robed in royal purple, thrummed on a golden lyre, singing Anacreontic ditties and surrounded by a bevy of pretty young maidens dressed in tunics, with classic coiffures, representing the nine muses of Mount Parnassus, while two girl slaves served Cyprian wine in cups brought from Herculaneum. This gorgeous entertainment, that would have gladdened the soul, or rather the palate, of Lucullus, was the talk of Paris for weeks afterward, and cost the extravagant hostess the smart sum of $7,000.

Mme. Le Brun found herself the queen of the fashionable world, second only to Marie Antoinette. Just at that moment when this brilliant butterfly was enjoying herself to the utmost extent, flitting from rose to rose in the Parisian parterres of pleasure, her sovereigns were arrested and shortly afterward executed by order of the revolutionary committee.

A long list of suspected aristocratic names were drawn up by the same committee, hers being among the number. Most of these nobles fell victims to the guillotine; others escaped. Mme. Le Brun left Paris in the dead of night in 1793, disguised as a page, as she had heard that a warrant was issued for her arrest, and proceeded by slow stages to Naples, where she executed a portrait of the wife of Lord Hamilton, and the great friend of Nelson, the British war dog, in the pose of a bacchante reclining on the seashore.

Goethe was a great admirer of this and other pictures from the brush of this highly gifted lady artist. She subsequently lived in Vienna, where at the imperial court she was received and welcomed as the friend and companion of the hapless Marie Antoinette. From Vienna she went to St. Petersberg, where she was honored by Catherine II. and Paul I. Returning to France in 1808, she gave brilliant entertainments under the empire and the restoration.

Her worthless husband died in 1813. His widow survived him thirty years, dying in 1843, at the advanced age of 87. The sum total of her artistic work comprises 662 portraits and 200 landscape pieces. Her ability as a society woman was much greater than her fame as an artist. She was a stately, dignified woman, witty and brilliant in conversation, fascinating in manners, and shone to more advantage in a ballroom than perhaps she did in a studio.—Kate Field's Washington.

EVERYWHERE THE STOCK.

Pretty Girls are Devoted to these Clerical Velvet Collars.

The New York girl is devoted to the stock. She realizes how much the bit of bright velvet or soft crepe has to do with the effect of her gown. And she is buying stocks with a recklessness that only a typical American girl can show.

At present every day brings with it a new stock. The demand is so great for these adjustable collars that one novelty falls over the other in its hurry to be a success.

The stock which has bravely held its own amid a crowd of novelties is made of a band of velvet with two pert little loops at either side and a buckle in the centre. These stocks also come in crepe de chine, and soft rosettes take the place of the loops. They are made of striking colors like cerise, Lincoln green and blue.

The very latest stock is simplicity itself. It is merely a broad plain band of satin ribbon fastening at the back with a big butterfly bow. When made of some bright color it gives a stylish touch to a som bre waist. Another novelty is a combination of necktie and stock. Crepe laid in narrow folds is used for the stock. To this is fastened two loops of crepe partially covered with lace.

There is a vast number of chiffon stocks displayed in the shop windows, and the daintiest one of all is made of a succession of wee chiffon rosettes.

The stock collars joined to a yoke are also seen in great variety. Many of the yokes are formed of deep Van Dyke points, while others are of chiffon frills and lace combined. Tailor-made gowns are now worn with a chemisette of soft plaited chiffon instead of one of stiff linen. Soft effects are all the vogue. Linen collars and shirt studs are losing their popularity.

IN FASHION'S FAIRYLAND.

Costumes Which Even the New Woman Would Declare Dreams.

There are two entirely different styles in evening gowns this season. One is somewhat severe in design and made of costly fabrics. Velvets and heavy brocades are used for these gowns and jewelled trimmings combined with much gold passementerie. The other gowns are fairy-like creations. They have a skirt of taffeta, perhaps, or plain satin, with a little baby bodice all billowy with chiffon. Jewels arranged in a delicate tracery form a corselet or outline the square-cut neck. With these short chiffon bodices the ripple skirt is used."

HOW ONE GOES TO SLEEP.

Just Keep Awake Long Enough to Tally off the Parts that Sleep First.

"Order is heaven's first law," and the old truth is manifested even in the process of going to sleep. When a man drops off to sleep his body does not do so all at once, so to speak. Some senses become dormant before others and always in the same order. As he becomes drowsy the eyes close, and the sense of seeing is at rest. It is quickly followed by the disappearance of the sense of taste. He next loses the sense of smell, and then after a short interval the tympanum becomes insensible to sound, or rather the nerves which run to the brain from it fail to arouse any sense of hearing.

The last sense to leave is that of touch, and in some hyper-sensitive people it is hardly ever dormant. Even in their case, however, there is no discriminating power or sense of what touched them. This sense is also the first to return upon awakening. Then hearing follows suit, after that taste, and then the eye becomes able to flash impressions back to the brain. The sense of smell, oddly enough, though it is by no means the first to go, is the last to come back.

The same gradual loss of power is observed in the muscles and sinews as well as in the senses. Slumber begins at the feet and slowly spreads up the limbs and trunk until it reaches the brain, when unconsciousness is complete and the whole body is at rest. This is why sleep is impossible when the feet are cold

THE SUN'S FASHIONS.

HOW TO DRESS THE DEAR LITTLE GIRLS BECOMINGLY.

Simple Gowns for Misses Are in Good Taste, Luxuriant Dresses are Not. The Fashions of the Elders Should Not be Copied, Except, Possibly, in Sleeves.

It is a comparatively simple matter to dress little children in pretty, becoming gowns; but after the reign of gamp waists and Empire frocks has passed and the awkward period between ten and sixteen begins, girls' clothes are a puzzling uncertainty in consequence of a little habit they have of growing out of them. Because they are tall, undeveloped, and difficult to deal with in the matter of dress, mothers often make the mistake of dressing them too old, copying too closely their own style of gowns, which serves to make their imperfections more noticeable. Simple gowns are always prettier and safer, while elaborate costumes and costly materials are never in good taste. Cheviots, mixed tweeds, and serges are used for school dresses, and crepons, challies, India silks, and crepe de chine for more dressy gowns. Their skirts, except in very thin material, are made with a gored front and side breadths, and two back breadths with a sloped seam in the middle, and are three and a half yards around.

A blue serge dress, trimmed with braid on the skirt and made with a three-quarters jacket opened over a plaid silk blouse vest, is sure to be a successful gown. An afternoon dress for girls in their teens is made of blue-gray and white cloth; the latter is used for the skirt front and the plastron. Brown braiding decorates the skirt panel, and a brown velvet fold divides it in the middle and edges it on either side. The bodice turned back with lapels of brown velvet, and the belt and side knot are of the same.

A simple gown of plain magenta wool is made with a full bodice and pointed shoulder capes, trimmed with narrow black silk gimp; and a belt and rosettes of black satin ribbon give it a very stylish effect. Another one is of blue crepon, and trimmed on the shoulder drapery with white guipure. The gathered chemisette is of white surah, and the sash and belt of white ribbon. A dress of red and brown shot cloth has a bodice and puffs in the sleeves of shot surah. The lower sleeve is of cloth, trimmed with bands of red satin ribbon, covered with string-colored lace, and the waist band is of the ribbon, tied in two rosette bows.

A pretty model for a girl 10 years old has a yoke of cream silk covered with lace, and the cloth is laid in three plaits on either side of the front and back. Lace insertion over cream-white ribbon trims the shoulder capes, and rosettes finish them at either end.

A gown made of the new honeycomb cloth, in a pretty shade of brown, has a jacket effect arranged with double revers, one of cloth and an upper one of velvet in a darker shade of brown. The lower half of the bodice is draped with brown silk, and the yoke is of velvet edged with a band of guipure embroidery. A new edition of the old-fashioned white wincey is very soft and durable, and especially pretty for young girls' wear; and, as it washes without shrinking, it has much to recommend it for use.—N. Y. Sun.

Touching Curiosity.

Tramp—Would ye give a starving man some o' your old clothes to keep him from going naked, kind sir?

Cholly Chapleigh—Certainly, poor fellah. Here are a necktie and a pair of kid gloves, and though they are a trifle worn they are of the latest style—the very latest, I assure you.—Truth.

is a virtuous vice. The world is better for it. It makes men ambitious—and it makes women careful of their personal appearance. It doesn't take much money to keep well-dressed now-a-days. A Letter From a Taxpayer.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—Your articles of Thursday and Friday referring to the School Board have excited much interest among citizens irrespective of party affiliations. For the past month it has been generally understood that there existed no opposition to the re-election of Messrs. Probasco or Lovell. Both gentlemen have given general satisfaction. I am glad however that you have brought the matter up so early in the campaign, and given publicity to the alleged scheme of overturning last year's work. Let all the facts come out; and let it be thoroughly understood before election how the above-named gentleman propose to serve the people. To be consistent I cannot see how I can vote for them and Mayor Gilbert when I know that war will be declared between them after election on the school question, which I thought was settled for all time.

Mark Twain's New Book.

Mark Twain's most popular and successful books have been sold by subscription and the American Publishing Company of Hartford, Conn., announce for early publication his new book "The Tragedy of Pudd'nhead Wilson and the Comedy Those Extraordinary Twins". The Tragedy and Comedy were at first a dual story—two stories in one—and the author's account, as given in the preface, of the difficulty he had in writing the book, of the incompatibility of some of the characters and of his having to separate them by pulling one of the stories out by the roots and leaving the other—a kind of literary Cæsarean operation, is certainly one of the most original, breeziest and cleverest chapters—choice fun—that has been written for many a day. We are told that "There is a time to laugh" and The Churchman says, "The reader will begin to smile at the very first paragraph".

The book will be sold only by subscription and as it possesses, in a pronounced degree, the remarkable characteristics of the author's best works it is sure to have a large sale. Each page will be beautifully illustrated with marginal sketches, the work of one of our best artists, and the publishers have wisely decided to sell the volume at a popular price—bringing it within the reach of all.

J. W. Keeler & Co., of Philadelphia, Pa., have the exclusive right of sale in the States of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland and their advertisement for agents appears in another column. All applications for agencies in their field should be sent direct to them.

Evona Surprise Party.

Miss Sadie Giles of East Front street was surprised with a birthday party given by friends at the home of A. M. Wilson, Evona, last evening. She was invited by Mr. and Mrs. Wilson to visit them in their new residence and went there not expecting to find that preparations had been made to give a social in her honor.

Nearly one hundred people from Plainfield, New York, Dunellen and Evona were present. Dancing to Naylor's music, partaking of refreshments and playing games, the guests remained until 3 this morning. Miss Giles's birthday anniversary was remembered with many beautiful presents.

A Plainfield Girl's Triumph.

Miss Josephine Schaffer, daughter of Charles J. Schaffer of Liberty Street, filled the role of Leonora in the Italian opera, Criterion Theatre, Brooklyn, Thursday night. The Brooklyn citizen says: "Miss Schaffer covered herself with glory in the interpretation of Leonora. Her rich soprano voice rang out through the auditorium in round, full numbers, and her stage presence and acting were of a very high order."

Among the Plainfield friends of Miss Schaffer who attended were: Mrs George Thatcher and daughter, Mrs. M. S. Simpson, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Laine.

Alerts to Have a Team.

At the meeting of the Councilmanic Fire Committee last evening a committee of two, Foreman Charles C. Burnett and Abner Bartlett, were present from Alert Hose Company. They talked about the new horse they intend to buy to have a team for their apparatus and applied for various minor attachments for the better equipment of the wagon.

Exasperating Reason.

A friend of the poet Shelley says that he was most fanciful in his habit of forming some wild theory and then seeking confirmation of it in the events of everyday life. If they did not bear him out, he was naturally indignant. One particular encounter with a prosaic Englishman must have been somewhat astonishing to the man, who was not accustomed to poets and their modes of reasoning.

At one time Shelley saw the zodiac in everything, and as he was passing an inn with his friend he noticed that the house bore the sign of the "Horseshoes."

There were four on the sign, and he immediately came to the conclusion that they had been handed down from remote antiquity to represent the compartments of the zodiac. He stepped into the house.

"Your sign is the 'Horseshoes?'" he said to the landlord.

"Yes, sir.'

"This sign has always four horseshoes?"

"Why, mostly, sir."

"Not always?"

"I think I have seen three."

"I cannot divide the zodiac into three," said Shelley musingly, "but it's mostly four. Do you know why it's mostly four?"

"Why, sir, I suppose because a horse has four legs."

The poet bounced out of the house in great indignation, crying to his friend, "Did you ever see such a fool?"—Youth's Companion.

English In India.

The Times of India gives the following example of English as written in India. It is a copy of an application to become a volunteer: "I humbly crave the desired permission to join the Volunteer corpse under your honour's commandments. It is true that by some Bengalies are expected to be of a cowardly nature, but I can assure to your honour that I am of good bottom and have so much plucks that nothing fears me in day or night season. Therefore I may be considered accustomed to bravery. If I am only once teached drills and exercise of shooting and bagonet, then I fear no foe and am ready to expend my bloods in defence of earth and home in my fatherland. Hoping to receive early reply."

Tribute to Departed Worth.

"That man Ardup," said the man in the mackintosh, "was as good hearted a fellow as ever lived, but he was always in debt and always hounded by creditors. Poor fellow! He deserves a better epitaph than an unfeeling posterity will engrave on his tombstone."

"'Well dunned, good and faithful servant,'" suggested the man who had his feet on the table, and a deep silence fell upon the group.—Chicago Tribune.

Congratulation and Recommendation.

Mr. Lakeside—Old man, congratulate me. I'm engaged to that charming widow, Mrs. Van Wabasher.

Mr. Dearbornstreete—With all my heart! I never had a better wife than she was.—Chicago Record.

Free Wool and Fine Clothing.

If wool didn't cost a cent Fine Clothing would still be worth money.

The making of fine fabrics costs more than throwing together shoddy stuff.

Such trimmings as we put into our Suits and Overcoats are expensive.

It costs something to employ skilled labor, and that is the kind it takes to construct such clothing as we make and sell.

But after all there isn't much difference between our prices and those asked for common clothing.

REMARKABLE CURES

Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.

I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR. PETER G. EYCK, OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:

For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

The Zoology class is now working among dragon flies and other creatures of like nature. MARY A. TUPPER

IN A WOMAN'S PRISON.

Restored to Her Husband at Wilton, Me., After Months of Suffering.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Women's prisons are not always built of iron bars and solid masonry. It is easy to shut women up from the beautiful, joyous world without these means.

Mrs. Mary A. Tupper has been released at Wilton, Me., from the custody of extreme female weakness and nervousness which kept her a prisoner in bed, unable to walk.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound went to the root of her trouble, and gave her the liberty of health, so that after taking two bottles she was able to go out of doors and surprise her husband and friends by her rapid improvement.

She says: "Women should beware of dizziness, sudden faintness, backache, extreme lassitude and depression. They are danger signals of female weakness, or some derangement of the uterus or womb. Take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and be thankful for your life as I am. It only costs a dollar to try it, and the result is worth millions.—Ask some druggist about it."

HE'S A FAMOUS FIGHTER

General McCook Succeeds General Howard.

He Is the Oldest of Ten Brothers in the National Army—Col. James W. Forsyth, of the 7th Cavalry, Succeeds McCook.—He Also Has a Record To Be Proud Of.

Washington, Nov. 10.—Brigadier General Alexander McDowell McCook has been appointed major general of the United States army, vice Gen. Howard retired, and Col. James W Forsyth, of the seventh cavalry, has been promoted to brigadier general to succeed McCook.

Gen. McCook has been for the past year in command of the new army department of the Colorado with headquarters at Denver. During the riots in that city last March he had a famous altercation with Gov. Waite in which he demonstrated to that official that the laws of the United States and his own duty as commander of the federal forces and guardian of federal property was paramount to any authority that could be claimed by the state's executive.

Gen. McCook comes of the fighting McCooks, being the oldest of the ten brothers in the national army. He was until yesterday the fourth brigadier general in the army and by the president's selection is promoted over Generals Ruger, Merritt and Brooke. However he retires April 22, next year on reaching the age of 64 when the others will have a chance to reach the highest grade now authorized in the service. Gen. McCook graduated from the military academy in 1852 and was assigned to the third infantry, until he left the regular service in 1861 to accept the appointment as colonel of the first Ohio volunteers. He commanded his regiment in the first battle of Bull Run and was breveted there for gallant services. He was appointed brigadier general of volunteers the same year. He received successive brevets in the regular service and March 13, 1865, received that of major general for services in the field during the war. His regular commission as brigadier general dates from July 11, 1890.

Brigadier General Forsyth has a record to be proud of. Born in Ohio in 1835 and appointed to the military academy from that state, he graduated and became a second lieutenant of infantry in 1856. Five years later, just a month before Sumter was fired on, he obtained his first lieutenancy and at the close of the war had jumped up five grades to the rank of brigadier general of volunteers. His promotions to actual and brevet rank came in quick succession; In October, 1861, he obtained his captaincy; in September, 1863, he was breveted major for gallant conduct at Chickamauga; on April 7, 1864, the actual rank of major and assistant adjutant general of volunteers was conferred upon him; his lieutenant colonency came twelve days later; on Oct. 6, of that year, a brevet of that rank was given him for gallant conduct at Cedar Creek. He was made a brevet brigadier general of volunteers for gallant service at Opequan, Fisher Hill and Middletown, Va.

Gallant conduct at Five Forks was rewarded by a brevet colonency in the regular service on April 1, 1865, and eight days later he became a brevet brigadier general of the regular service for his conduct on the field during the war. Other brevets were also given him before he was mustered out of the volunteer service in January, 1866, when he was appointed a major in the tenth regular cavalry. He became colonel of the seventh cavalry in 1886. Since the war Gen. Forsyth served in various staff capacities and took part in the Bannock campaign of 1878. He has published a "Report of an expedition up the Yellowstone river in 1875."

Admiral Gherardi Retires.

New York, Nov. 10.—Rear Admiral Bancroft Gherardi will retire from the navy yard to-day. He is credited in the official register with twenty-five years of sea service, and his shore duty has embraced every form of employment. He was born in Louisiana in 1832, but was appointed from Massachusetts in 1846. He was made a lieutenant commander in 1862, and attached to the South Atlantic blockading squadron. He was in many engagements, among others the battle of Mobile bay, Aug. 5, 1864. He was commissioned commander in 1866. In 1884 he was made commodore, and in 1887 was made rear admiral. He had charge of the grand naval review at Hampton Roads and New York last year. He is a nephew of the historian, George Bancroft.

Rev. L. C. Lyman Resigns.

Round Lake, N. Y., Nov. 10.—A letter of withdrawal from the ministry has been received by the presiding elder of the Methodist church in the Saratoga district from Rev. Lyman C. Pettit, the young preacher of Cohoes who a few weeks ago left his charge and went to Cleveland, O., with a young woman of his church, and who was brought back by the police under the complaints of his wife. Pettit offers to surrender his credentials. If he does so the annual conference which meets next April may consent to drop him from the ministry without a trial, but his withdrawal will have all the force of an expulsion.

Sick from Disappointment.

Huron, S. D., Nov. 10.—News comes from Redfield that Judge Isaac Howe, the populist candidate in the late campaign for governor, is lying ill at his home in that city with small hope for his recovery. The excitement and and fatigue of the campaign were more than he could endure, and the tremendous majority against him is doubtless also a grivious disappointment.

Saved by the American Minister.

City of Mexico, Nov. 10.—The death sentence recently passed upon Edward J. Adams, of New Orleans, for the murder of a waiter in this city, has been commuted by President Diaz to twenty years' imprisonment. The American minister intervened in Adam's behalf.

WOMEN ALWAYS TIRED.

MRS. HENRY WARD BEECHER SAYS SHE HAS KNOWN.

But Half a Dozen Women Who Were Thoroughly Well—The Routine of Domestic Tasks Overdrains Their Nervous Force.

"Among all my friends—and the number of my acquaintances has necessarily been rather large," says Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher, "I can recall but a half a dozen thoroughly well women."

So many, in order to obtain the reputation of being good housewives, work from morning till night, cooking, sweeping and overhauling.

"What would the house look like," they ask, "if I were not constantly looking after it?"

It would certainly look a good deal more homelike if the wife and the mother kept her health and high spirits instead of growing old and careworn from the struggle with dust and the neglect of their tired, aching nerves, and pale watery blood that daily becomes more and more badly nourished.

It is not the healthy weariness of muscle and brain, so easily forgotten after a good night's sleep; but it is the weariness that remains till morning, and follows one through the day, that should cause anxiety and a desire for prompt relief.

When the nerves and the blood have thus become so badly nourished and the strength thus reduced, food—food appropriate for building up the nervous tissue—and rest, are the plain and simple means, in fact, the only means of restoring vigor and health. All the material so urgently needed by the million of exhausted nerve cells and by the thin, depleted blood are found in that remarkable invigorator, that food for the brain and nerves, Paine's celery compound. It fills the nervous and muscular tissues all over the body with the means of rapid growth, the blood gains new red corpuscles and grows ruddy and capable of thoroughly feeding the body. The strength returns, and headaches, dyspepsia, neuralgia and nervous debility disappear when the tone of the system has been thus raised and the body abundantly supplied with fresh, life-giving blood.

The very first week in which this perfect nerve food, Paine's celery compound, is conscientiously employed it will declare its tonic effect by the feeling of returning strength, a marked increase in the appetite, freedom from pain and depression.

Paine's celery compound cures radically and permanently rheumatism, heart weakness, diseases of the liver and the kidneys, and encourages the excretory organs to expel whatever impure humors there may be in the blood. This is evident by the healthier, clearer condition of the skin that physicians say invariably follows when they prescribe Paine's celery compound, as they so commonly do where the body needs building up and when recovery is slow after acute diseases.

Here is the experience of Mrs. E. L. Wing, of Putney, Vt., told in her own words:

"I had been afflicted with rheumatism and neuralgia for many years. In a year and a half I have taken eight bottles of Paine's celery compound and have not been so free from these troubles in 15 years as I am now. I advise all who are afflicted in any way with rheumatism or neuralgia to use Paine's celery compound.

"For the nerves and tired feelings, I think it is the best dose of ambition that I have ever found. Before I had taken one bottle I felt like another person. Other medicines have given me only temporary relief. But the compound has done me more permanent good than the doctors or any other medicine, and I can hardly feel grateful enough for the benefit that I have derived from its use."

Shiloh's Cure, the great cough and croup cure, is in great demand. Pocket size contains 25 doses, only 25c. Children love it. Sold by all druggists.

Karl's Clover Root will purify your blood, clear your complexion, regulate your bowels and make your head clear as a bell; 25c., 50c. and $1. Sold by all druggists.

Captain Sweeney, U. S. A., San Diego, Cal., says: "Shiloh's Catarrh Remedy is the first medicine I have ever found that would do me any good". Price 50c. Sold by all druggists.

Use it in Time.

Catarrh starts in the nasal passages, affecting eyes, ears and throat and is in fact, the great enemy of the mucous membrane. Neglected colds in the head almost invariably precede catarrh, causing an excessive flow of mucous, and if the mucous discharge becomes interrupted the disagreeable results of catarrh will follow, such as bad breath, severe pain across forehead and about the eyes, a roaring and buzzing sound in the ears and oftentimes a very offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles.

THE FATE OF CHINA

The Officials and People Seem To Be Indifferent.

It Is Said That Two American Torpedo Experts Have Contracted To Destroy the Japanese Fleet—The Japs Are Reported To Have Suffered a Defeat.

London, Nov. 10.—A dispatch to the Times from Chefoo, dated Nov. 7, says it is reported there that fighting had occurred on Nov. 4, 5, and 6 at Talienwan, but that it had not been decisive. A Tien-Tsin dispatch says that the responsible Chinese officials appear to be callous as to the fate of the empire. They attend chiefly to their personal interests, such as contracts for furnishing arms, etc. The people are also indifferent. In the vicinity of Moukden they suffer more from fear of the Chinese soldiery than from fear of the enemy. The dispatch adds that the Russian officers on the station have been instructed to conciliate their British colleagues. The Chinese men-of-war remaining outside of Port Arthur have been ordered to attack the Japanese fleet that is blockading that port and preventing the egress of a number of Chinese war ships now lying there. A Paris dispatch to the Times says that a paper in that city declares that Lord Rosebery, the British prime minister, intends to propose a collective landing of troops in China.

The Times has this dispatch from Yokohama: Two American torpedo experts have a contract with China to destroy the Japanese fleet. They have been promised $1,000,000 for each squadron destroyed and payment for each merchantman in proportion. At Chefoo it is reported that there has been three hard days' fighting at Talien-Wan without decisive results.

The Daily News hears from Odessa that Emperor William has ordered the German admiral in Chinese waters to place himself, in certain contingencies, under the orders of the British admiral, Freemantle. The Daily News also learns that France seems to favor a European conference to consider affairs in the far east.

Shanghai, Nov. 10.—The Chinese army of the north has retreated to the mountains, where the soldiers are reported to be starving and suffering severely from cold and exposure. The Japanese army is encamped at Feng-Whang-Cheng. The Japanese are pursuing some 15,000 Chinese, mostly raw recruits. Port Arthur is not expected to make a determined stand against the Japanese. Admiral Sir E. R. Freemantle, in command of the British fleet, considers that Port Arthur will probably be the scene of the last engagement of any importance between the Chinese and the Japanese. All the missionaries of the Presbyterian church who have been working in Manchuria have left the interior and have arrived in safety at New-Chwang. The Japanese have undoubtedly captured Talien-Wan, a short distance north of Port Arthur. The Chinese fleet is reported to have arrived at Wei-Hai-Wei.

Yokohama, Nov. 10.—Rumors are current here to the effect that the Japanese forces have suffered a reverse at Port Arthur.

TRIED TO GET PEACE.

Lord Rosebery Talks About the Japanese-Chinese War.

London, Nov. 10.—The new lord mayor of London, Sir Joseph Renals, gave a banquet at Guildhall last night. The principal speaker was Prime Minister Rosebery. He said he was strongly convinced that Great Britain should maintain her greatness abroad. The political sky was not entirely clear, but the barometer was not falling. The reason that the sky is not clear, he added, is the disastrous Chinese-Japanese war.

"We are determined to maintain a strict neutrality, but on the other hand we cannot forget that we have shown a striking and tangible proof of friendship with Japan by our recent treaty, which gave Japan what she had most at heart, while we have shown friendship to China in attempting to secure peace. Although our efforts have not met with success, we do not repent them. We acted throughout in accord with Russia.

"We would still be glad to join in any pacific means to secure a peace honorable to Japan and not disastrous to China. The newspapers have been advising the government to secure the opportunity now offering to enter into a cordial entente with Russia. That advice the government has already anticipated. (Cheers.)

"The frontier difficulties in Asia, which I hope are almost the last of a dangerous question between us, are now nearly terminated. The removal of this cause of Anglo-Russian distrust will be a great step toward universal peace."

MRS. LEASE TALKS.

"Treachery and Bulldozing Defeated Gov. Lewelling."

Wichita, Kas., Nov. 10—Speaking of the election Mrs. Mary E. Lease said: "The defeat of the people's party in Kansas is due largely to the disgraceful compromise with democracy two years ago and to the treachery perpetrated upon the people by the election of Senator Martin. I believe Gov. Lewelling would have been re-elected this year had it not been for Martin's letter and the bulldozing methods and treachery of State Chairman Breidenthal, who, to serve his own selfish ends, sacrificed the head of the ticket by endeavoring to fuse in legislative and congressional districts. As to woman suffrage, its defeat was assured when some crazy, irresponsible female seeker of notoriety accepted republican pay to foist her peculiar views upon the populist convention. When we get ready for a constitutional amendment in this state our people will look after it."

The New Civil Service Rules.

Washington, Nov. 10.—In several of the departments the question has arisen when the present order of the president extending civil service rules went into effect, and it has been definitely decided that the day it was signed it operated as a law.

RAPIDLY BREAKING DOWN

MRS. S BATES TELLS THE STORY OF HER SUFFERINGS.

How She Was Cured By Munyon's Little Pellets After Physicians Had Failed.

Mrs. S. Bates, of Cecil, N. J., adds her testimony to that of the thousands who have been saved from a life of suffering by Munyon's Remedies. She said: "I had suffered greatly with indigestion and stomach trouble. Everything I ate distressed me, I was nervous and fretful and rapidly breaking down. Physicians had failed to help me, nor did any of the many remedies I took relieve me until I began using Munyon's Dyspepsia Cure. The result was astonishing. After taking but three doses I felt greatly improved, and after taking one 25c. bottle I was entirely cured."

Munyon's Stomach and Dyspepsia Cure cures all forms of indigestion and stomach troubles such as constipation, rising of food, distress after eating, bloating of the stomach, palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath and all affections of the heart caused by indigestion. It soothes, heals and invigorates stomachs that have been weakened by over-eating, or where the lining of the stomach has been impaired by physic and injurious medicines. Price 25 cents.

Munyon's Homoeopathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

ALEXANDER'S FUNERAL

Will Lie in State at St. Petersburg Three Days.

The Body Must Be Buried Soon Owing to the Delay in Embalming. Thousands Hurry to the Towns at Which the Funeral Train Will Halt on Its Way to Moscow.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 10.—The funeral of Alexander III. will take place on Nov. 17. This date has been set definitely and the Russian ambassadors and ministers who had been notified that the funeral would take place on the 20th were requested to hasten their preparations to return.

Persons of all classes are hurrying by thousands to the towns at which the funeral train will halt for the celebration of masses. The body is expected to arrive in Moscow on Sunday.

An official order as to the period of mourning has been issued. The mourning will last one year. The czar and the grand dukes will be in full mourning to the end of the period. The czarina and the grand duchesses will be in full mourning for three months. At the close of every third month of the remaining nine months they will lay aside part of their mourning, thus resuming gradually their usual habits. High Russian officials are required to keep their rooms and houses draped for a year.

It was announced last evening that the body probably would leave Moscow on the 12th and would lie in state in St. Petersburg only three days. This haste is unprecedented, but it is stated that the funeral must be held soon owing to the delay in enbalming. Seventy foreign princes have given notice of their intention to attend the funeral. The space is so limited that the embassy staffs probably will be unable to enter the cathedral.

Nicholas II. intends to occupy the Empress Catharine's apartments in the winter palace. The rooms have not been used since her death.

London, Nov. 10.—The Daily News correspondent in Paris says: "While services were in progress in Protestant and Jewish places of worship the Catholic church stood aloof from the universal mourning. Cardinal Richard's silent disregard of the popular wish for a requiem mass in the Cathedral of Notre Dame prompted accusations of a lack of patriotism. The Catholics then threatened to ask the government to convert the Arc de Triumphe into a chapel and to invite the Russian popes to say mass at an impromptu altar beneath it. Cardinal Richard has now announced a service to be held at the Cathedral of Notre Dame on the 11th. He himself will officiate and will offer prayers for Russia and France, but not for the czar. Although the public think the cardinal has yielded, the exception shows that really he has not. Last night Cardinal Richard ordered prayers throughout the diocese."

Paris, Nov. 10.—The morning newspapers explain that Cardinal Richard's difficulty lay in the saying of mass for a schismatic. In the pastoral ordering the masses, he says: "We cannot renounce the hopes which the fraternal union of two peoples inspire in us for the peace of the world. We shall entreat the Lord to strengthen and bless the friendship of Russia and France. Although the prophetic desire of Leo XIII. for the reunion of christendom has not yet been accomplished, although we can not celebrate the solemnities of the Catholic liturgy on the occasion of the czar's funeral, we shall pray from our inmost hearts for the repose of his soul. The litanies of the blessed Virgin shall be chanted."

A Warsaw dispatch says that Gen. Gourko has commanded explicitly that the oath of allegiance must be taken in Russian.

Moscow, Nov. 10.—The funeral arches and other signs of mourning multiply from hour to hour. The streets of the city look as if they were cut between walls of solid black and white. Black-framed portraits of Alexander III. are seen in hundreds of windows. Several rich families have brought decorators from St. Petersburg to drape their houses. The United States consul is flying the Stars and Stripes wound with crape. The mourning shops are filled with buyers and the gold and silversmiths are working their men day and night to fill the orders for memorial wreathes. The Siberian Cossacks' corps will send to the cathedral a silver wreath eight feet in diameter, with crossed sword and sceptre, joined in the middle with a crown. The nobility and landed proprietors of Odessa and Moscow have ordered many silver wreathes with the palm branches crossed upon them. The Italian, French and English colonies of Moscow have ordered pieces of similar design.

The Grand Duke Sergius and a party of uniformed officials, their breasts ablaze with decorations, arrived at the station with several ladies of the court shortly before 4 o'clock. In anticipation of their coming the building had been covered with black and white. They were met by the principal officials of the city and, after a cordial excange of greetings, were taken to the palace.

A Bold Bank Robbery.

Gowrie, Iowa, Nov. 10.—The safe in the bank was blown open at an early morning hour by three robbers. The explosion awakened some citizens who were afraid to stop the robbers, they had only one revolver and the robber on guard stood them off while his partner proceeded to explode the steel chest, having blown open the other doors before the crowd arrived. The chest was drilled and bent out of shape by a charge of nitro-glycerine. It is not known whether the robbers secured any booty or not as they closed the door to the steel chest and it can not be opened. It contained $6,000 in money and valuable papers.

Priests Released.

Warsaw, Nov. 10.—Many Polish Catholic priests who were arrested for refusing to swear allegiance to Nicholas II. have taken the oath and have been released. The report that the bishop of Lublin was arrested for reading the oath in Polish has been denied.

PASKOLA VINDICATED.

Gross Ignorance Exposed.

ITS VALUE AND HEALTHFULNESS FULLY ESTABLISHED.

The results obtained by certain professed chemists in an attempt to analyze Paskola are so far from the truth that we have every reason to believe the perpetrators to be in the employ of rival manufacturers, (possibly people interested in preparations of cod liver oil), whose business has been injured by the merited popularity of Paskola. This suspicion is strengthened by the fact that the unthruthful reports as to the composition of Paskola have been widely circulated through the mails and otherwise. Among the things, the so-called "chemists" have stated is that Paskola was nothing but glucose and hydrochloric acid, the ridiculousness of which assertion will be made clear by the following experiment:

Take two pint bottles and in one place a tablespoonful of glucose and in the other a like quantity of Paskola; fill them with water shake thoroughly and add to each forty drops of muriatic or hydrochloric acid, in order to imitate the acidity of the natural gastric juice. Having previously finely minced a quantity of rare or raw lean beef, chicken, the white of hard boiled eggs or similar foods; put into each bottle one ounce. Immerse the bottles in warm water and carefully maintain the contents at a temperature of 100 to 105 degrees Fahrenheit, frequently shaking in order to thoroughly expose the food to the action of the solution.

In the course of a very short time the contents of the bottle containing Paskola will be seen to undergo a change, and in two or three hours the food will have become entirely dissolved or digested; wherers the contents of the other bottle containing the glucose and acid will show no change beyond a slight difference in appearance.

If you have neither the facilities nor the inclination to make the test for yourself, we have no doubt that your druggist will be glad to try the experiment. The tubes herewith show the results of a test made in our own laboratory, the cuts being from a photograph. No. 1 contained glucose and No. 2 Poskola. What are we to conclude? One of two things: either that the so-called "chemists" are ignorant or dishonest.

Glucose has no digestive properties. This is a well-known fact, whereas Paskola is giving relief to thousands of dyspeptics, a truth attested by the unsolicited testimonials that pour in upon us. The presence of digestive ferments in Paskola cannot be determined by chemical test. No one has ever seen digestive ferments in a pure form, and the only way to determine their presence is by observing the effects which they produce upon food. This is a fact recognized by every authority, and will be found stated in Foster's Physiology and other standard works.

Another thing which these ignorant and jealous rivals have said about Paskola, is that inasmuch as its basis is predigested starch, it is calculated to encourage diabetes.

We cannot better answer this charge than by quoting a paragraph from a report made to Mayor Gilroy, of New York, by Dr. Cyrus Edson, Commissioner of Health for the City of New York, and for the State of New York.

"Pre-digested starch is starch in the exact condition that we find it prepared by the digestive organs for assimilation. It is preeminently a fat-forming, heat-producing food. Under a diet of pre-digested starch or glucose, a man can perform more muscular work than under any other single article of food. Pre-digested starch not only is not injurious, but it is an essential article of food, without which in some form, man cannot enjoy life."

This letter from Dr. Edson was written in answer to an inquiry from the Mayor as to whether or not pre-digested starch was healthful.

Paskola contains a special form of pre-digested starch as well as digestive ferments, and is not alone a fattening food but it aids the digestion of other foods in the stomach, just as you may see in the above experiment. The tired, feeble stomach of the dyspeptic is too week to do its duty. It needs a little help; this help Paskola gives. Its use is at once followed by a sense of well being, strength, vigor and courage. The appetite improves and the sufferer can eat with comfort where before distress followed every meal. Paskola corrects emanciation and the pale, thin sufferers rapidly gain in weight under its use. Consumptives will experience a thousand times more benefit from it than from the use of disagreeable, nauseating cod liver oil, which often does more harm than good. Consumption need not prove fatal, if we can arrest the loss of flesh, for its victims virtually die of starvation.

Send for our interesting pamphlet, and learn about this wonderful preparation. We will gladly mail you a copy free, upon application. The Pre-Digested Food Co., 30 Read street, New York.

BUSINESS STIMULATED

Manufacturers and Merchants Encouraged.

Confident of Rapid Improvement in General Trade—Buyers Purchasing for Future Delivery—Prices for Iron, Steel, Wheat and Other Commodities Advancing.

New York, Nov. 10.—Bradstreet's weekly report of the state of trade says: Interest in the elections this week naturally tended to restrict the volume of trade, particularly south, where it interfered with mercantile collections. But within a few days the influence of more seasonable weather west and northwest, together with the emphasis with which political questions have apparently been settled, have increased the confidence of many merchants and manufacturers in a prospect for an increased rate of improvement in general trade in the near future. Chicago and St. Louis manufacturers and business men already report evidences of a tendency on the part of the interior buyers to purchase for future delivery, and from such iron centres as Philadelphia, Pittsburg and Chicago relatively greater steadiness is reported in quotations for staple brands of iron and steel than for months past. There is an increased shipment of anthracite coal both by lake and rail within the week, and a stimulated demand for shoes, hats and clothing. Foreign competition with domestic plain woolen dress goods is noticeable, free orders having been placed for delivery after January 1, and American fleece wools feel the effects of competition with Australian, and quotations continue easy. Print cloth stocks are reduced in volume and prices are steady. Domestic woolen mills are fairly well employed.

While prices for iron and steel shapes, for Bessemer pig and steel billets are practically steady, there is another net advance this week in prices for wheat and lard, and coffee and sugar have advanced fractionally also. There has been a further recession in quotations for corn and for oats, and general commercial conditions at the south continue to struggle with another decline of ⅛c. on cotton.

A hand-to-mouth movement of general merchandise continues in leading lines at Boston except in shoes, shipments from seven New England manufacturing centres aggregating about 93,000 cases this week, against 63,000 in the week a year ago. Philadelphia and Pittsburg markets continue as last reported, movements of merchandise being moderate in volume; collections not satisfactory, but prospects fairly bright. Demand for lumber and leather forms an exception, being more active. Baltimore reports a less satisfactory trade, political excitement there having interrupted business more than at other large eastern cities. The distribution of shoes appears as active as that of any other staple, business in other lines, except holiday goods, being quiet. Seasonable weather at Buffalo, better demand for and larger shipments of anthracite coal rendering the outlook brighter, although the season of lake navigation now closing has been unsatisfactory.

At Cleveland the general commercial and industrial situation is improved, although interruptions due to the election have checked business. These conditions also characterize the situation at Cincinnati and Louisville, as at Detroit, although colder weather has stimulated the movement of shoes and woolens. There is a moderate falling off in business at Chicago, but it is followed by a more confident feeling as to the prospects for the near future.

Charleston lumbermen report a fair business, but in other lines there is no change. Similar conditions prevail at Memphis, but at Nashville there is more activity in general lines, notably in receipts of California canned goods. The only material effect of election excitement on business is delayed collections. There is a seasonable activity in general lines at Atlanta. At Chattanooga and Birmingham, Ala., rather more activity is observed in business circles, while collections were fairly satisfactory. Wholesale and retail houses at Jacksonville report trade fairly satisfactory for the season, but at Savannah there is no special change, except that collections are satisfactory. Augusta's report is similar, except as to collections, which are slow. At New Orleans rather more of a check to business is noted, due to interest in the elections, but increased activity is expected soon. At Galveston trade is dull in all lines.

Manufacturers Organize.

Cincinnati, Nov. 10.—A call has just been issued by the combined manufacturers of this city and region, inviting a convention to be held in Cincinnati on Jan. 22, 1895, to form a non-political, non-sectional National Manufacturers' association. The purpose of this organization will be to look after wholesome legislation for the encouragement of manufacturing and to secure favorable trade relations with foreign countries. The invitation is without limit as to ratio of representation or number of delegates.

Killed by Dynamite.

Huntington, Ind., Nov. 10.—Fifty pounds of dynamite exploded on the Hallwood and Keffer contract. John Hartman and Norton Keffer were killed and John Flynn fatally injured. Residences in close proximity were badly wrecked. The damage amounts to many thousands. The men were warming the dynamite when it exploded.

Revolt in Nyaghur.

Calcutta, Nov. 10.—A revolt has broken out against Rajah Sihtel Otspueht, the ruler of the tributary state of Nyaghur, in the province of Orissa. A corps of infantry and a large force of police have been dispatched to the scene of the disturbance. Serious trouble is apprehended.

Indian Commissioner Russell.

Washington, Nov. 10.—William E. Russell, of Massachusetts, was appointed by the president a member of the board of Indian commissioners.

FELL TO HIS DEATH.

A Workman Plunges Headlong Down an Elevator Shaft.

New York, Nov. 10.—John Pauis, a German laborer, fell seven stories yesterday while transferring some elevator machinery in Arnold, Constable & company's dry goods store, and was instantly killed. Three other men who were working with him had a very narrow escape from death. Pauis with William F. McCoy, the foreman of the work; George Diffendale and Gus Piesth, fellow-workmen, were engaged in taking out the machinery of an old elevator preparatory to putting in a new one in the Fifth avenue end of the store. Pauis and McCoy were standing on a scaffolding which was laid from a window ledge in the elevator shaft to a temporary joist which was fastened to the elevator shaft. The other two men were standing on the floor of the seventh story, holding the ropes from which was suspended the large guide wheel of the elevator cables, which they were in the act of lowering.

In some way the wheel slipped and fell striking the scaffolding and breaking it in two. McCoy was thrown high into the air by the force of the blow and his body was propelled directly through a window in the shaft and he landed, none the worse for his terrific flight, on the floor of the room into which he was thrown.

Pauis was less fortunate. He also was thrown from the scaffolding and plunged headlong down the shaft. In falling he caught hold of a window ledge with one hand and for a moment swung in mid-air. Then, with a cry of terror, he let go his hold and fell into the awful depths of the shaft.

The other men after recovering their senses, made their way to the cellar. They found that the top of Pauis's head had been torn off. He was lying in a pool of blood, and his brains were exposed. He had evidently been killed instantly.

MISUNDERSTOOD INSTRUCTIONS

A Student Stands Blindfolded Until He Becomes Exhausted.

Boston, Nov. 10.—President Walker, of the Massachusetts institute of technology, has sent out a statement to the public regarding the case of alleged hazing of a student who, it is said, was forced to stand on Harvard bridge for seven hours blindfolded. He says that a certain student of the second class, having been pledged by one of the secret societies of the institute, was directed to take position near the Harvard bridge at 6 o'clock and there await the person who should conduct him to the society's hall. By 6 o'clock was meant 6 o'clock in the evening, but the student misunderstood his instructions and took station at 6 a. m. Being possessed of exceptional persistence, he remained there until his strength gave out. President Walker has no reason to fear that he will be any the worse for his experience and says the young man's present good condition as well as the entire innocence of the society men concerned are testified to in a letter received from the young man's mother.

Miners Will Resist a Reduction.

Pittsburg, Nov. 10.—The national officers of the United States have notified the secretary of the Railroad Operators' association of the Pittsburg district that any attempt of the operators to force a rate of less than 69 cents will be met with resistance by the miners. The letter states that any change in the price of mining would act injuriously to the entire coal trade and bring on an industrial warfare between employer and employe. The officials deplore the fact that several companies in this district are paying less than the scale rate but hope the other operators will put up with this inconvenience rather than disrupt the coal trade. The miners' officials are willing to attend a meeting of the interstate board and consider the price of mining in this district.

Killed by a Falling Building.

Montreal, Nov. 10.—Two men were killed and several others injured last evening by the collapse of the Montreal Street Railway company's seven-story stone building at the corner of Craig street and Place d'Armes Hill. The names of the killed are: Regis Pouge, of Montreal; Pierre Monnotte, a young Frenchman. It is thought that there are a number of others in the ruins. The fire brigade and a large number of policemen are searching the debris. There were twenty-one men employed on the building, and but fifteen have been accounted for The body of Joseph Marquis, another workman, has been recovered in the ruins. The work of searching the debris for others who are believed to be in the ruins has been suspended on account of darkness.

Tried To Murder a Whole Family.

Durango, Cal., Nov. 10.—Jesse Haller, who killed Frank Carpenter near Cortez last spring, started out yesterday, vowing to kill the whole Carpenter family. He met a brother of Carpenter and a man named Day, witnesses of the former shooting and opened fire, killing Carpenter and dangerously wounding Day, and killing their horses. A posse is in pursuit. The woman and children had a narrow escape from the bullets.

Not Much of a Haul.

Adams, Mass., Nov. 10.—The safe in the Adams postoffice was blown open but nearly all the valuables had been removed and the burglars only got three registered letters. A man was seen hanging around the office Thursday night and it is supposed that he is one of the gang. The burglars entered the office through the transom over the front door. They have not been captured.

III.

"Anything," said the mugger, shutting his left eye again—"anything is possible that comes out of a boat thrice the size of Mugger-Ghaut. My village is not a small one."

There was a whistle overhead on the bridge, and the Delhi mail slid across, all the carriages gleaming with light, and the shadows faithfully following across the river. It clanked away into the dark again; but the mugger and the jackal were so well used to it that they never turned their heads.

"Is that anything less wonderful than a boat thrice the size of Mugger-Ghaut?" asked the bird, looking up.

"I saw that built, child. Stone by stone I saw the bridge piers rise, and when the men fell off (they were wondrous sure-footed for the most part—but when they fell) I was ready. After the first pier was made they never thought to look down the stream for the body to burn. There, again, I saved much trouble. There was nothing strange in the building of the bridge," said the mugger.

"But that which goes across, pulling the roofed carts! That is strange," the adjutant repeated.

"It is, past any doubt, a new breed of bullock. Some day it will not be able to keep its foothold up yonder, and will fall as the men did. The old mugger will then be ready."

The jackal looked at the adjutant, and the adjutant looked at the jackal. If there was one thing they were more certain of than another, it was that the engine was everything in the wide world except a bullock. The jackal had watched it time and again from the aloe-hedges by the side of the line, and the adjutant had seen engines since the first engine ran in India. But the mugger had only looked up at the engine from below, where the brass dome seemed rather like a bullock's hump.

"M—yes, a new kind of bullock," the mugger repeated ponderously, to make himself quite sure in his own mind; and "Certainly it is a bullock," said the jackal.

"And again it might be—" began the mugger, pettishly.

"Certainly—most certainly," said the jackal, without waiting for the other to finish.

"What?" said the mugger, angrily, for he could feel that the others knew more than he did. "What might it be? I never finished my words. You said it was a bullock."

"It is anything the Protector of the Poor pleases. I am his servant—not the servant of the thing that crosses the river."

"Whatever it is, it is white faced work," said the adjutant. "And, for my own part, I would not choose a place so near to it to lie out upon as this bar is."

"You do not know the English as I do," said the mugger. "There was a white-face here when the bridge was built, and he would take a boat in the evenings and shuffle with his feet on the bottom-boards, and whisper: 'Is he here? Is he there? Get me my gun.' I could hear him before I could see him—each sound that he made—creaking and puffing and rattling his gun, up and down the river. As surely as I had picked up one of his workmen, and thus saved great expense in wood for the burning, so surely would he come down to the ghaut and shout in a loud voice that he would hunt me, and rid the river of me—the mugger of Mugger-Ghaut! Me! Children, I have swam under the bottom of his boat for hour after hour, and heard him fire his gun at logs; and when I was well sure he was wearied I have risen by his side and snapped my jaws in his face. When the bridge was finished he went away. All the English hunt in that fashion except when they are hunted."

"Who hunts the white-faces?" said the jackal, excitedly.

"No one now, but I have hunted them in my time."

"I remember a little of that hunting. I was young then," said the adjutant, clattering his beak significantly.

"I was well established here. My village was being builded for the third time, as I remember, when my cousin the gavial brought me word of rich waters above Benares. At first I would not go, for my cousin, who is a fish-eater, does not always know the good from the bad; but I heard my people talking in the evenings, and what they said made me certain."

"And what did they say?" the jackal asked.

"They said enough to make me, the mugger of Mugger-Ghaut, leave water and take to my feet. I went by night, using the littlest streams as they served me; but it was the beginning of the hot weather and all streams were low. I crossed dusty roads; I went through tall grass; I climbed hills in the moonlight. Even rocks did I climb, children—consider this well. I crossed the tail of Sirhind the waterless, before I could find the set of the little rivers that flow Gungaward. I was a month's journey from my own people and the river that I knew. That was very marvelous!"

"What food by the way?" said the jackal, who kept his soul in his little stomach, and was not a bit impressed by the mugger's land travels.

"That which I could find—cousin," said the mugger slowly, dragging each word.

Now you do not call a man a cousin in India unless you think you can establish some kind of blood relationship, and as it is only in old fairy tales that the mugger ever marries a jackal, the jackal knew for what reason he had been suddenly lifted into the mugger's family circle. If they had been alone he would not have cared, but the adjutant's eyes twinkled with mirth at the ugly jest.

"Assuredly, father, I might have known," said the jackal. A mugger does not care to be called a father of jackals, and the mugger of Mugger-Ghaut said as much—and a good deal more which there is no use in repeating here.

"The Protector of the Poor has claimed kinship. How can I remember the precise degree? Moreover, we eat the same food. He has said it," was the jackal's reply.

That made matters rather worse, for what the jackal hinted at was that the mugger must have eaten his food on that land march fresh, and fresh every day, instead of keeping it by him till it was in a fit and proper condition, as every self-respecting mugger and most wild beasts do when they can. Indeed, one of the worst terms of contempt along the river bed is "eater of fresh meat." It is about as bad as calling a friend a cannibal would be among human beings.

"That food was eaten thirty seasons ago," said the adjutant quietly. "If we talk for thirty seasons more it will never come back. Tell us now what happened when the good waters were reached after thy most wonderful land journey. If we listened to the howling of every jackal the business of the town would stop, as the saying is."

The mugger must have been grateful for the interruption, because he went on with a rush:

"By the Right and Left of Gunga, when I came there never did I see such waters."

"Were they better, then, than the big flood of last season?" said the jackal.

"Better! That flood was no more than comes every five years—a handful of drowned strangers, some chickens, and a dead bullock in muddy water with cross-currents. But, the season I think of, the river was low, smooth and even, and, as the gavial had warned me, the dead English came down touching each other. I got my girth in that season, my girth and my depth. From Agra, by Etawah and the broad waters by Allahabad——"

"Oh, the eddy that set under the walls of the fort at Allahabad!" said the adjutant. "They came in there like widgeon to the reeds, and round and round they swung—thus!"

He went off into his horrible dance again, while the jackal looked on enviously. He naturally could not remember the year of the mutiny they were talking about. The mugger continued:

"Yes by Allahabad, one lay still in the slack water and let twenty go by to pick one; and, above all, the English were not cumbered with jewelry and nose rings and anklets as my women are nowadays. To delight in ornaments is to end with a rope for necklace, as the saying is. All the muggers of all the rivers grew fat then but it was my fate to be fatter than them all. The news was that the English were being hunted into the rivers and by the Right and Left of Gunga we believed it was true. So far as I went south I believed it to be true, and I went down stream beyond Monghyr and the tombs that look over the river."

"I know that place," said the adjutant. "Since those days Monghyr is a lost city. Very few live there now."

"Thereafter I worked up stream very slowly and lazily, and a little above Monghyr there came down a boatful of white faces—alive! They were, as I remember, women, lying under a cloth spread over sticks, and crying aloud. There was never a gun fired at us watchers of the fords in those days. All the guns were busy elsewhere. We could hear them day and night inland, coming and going as the wind shifted. I rose up full before the boat, because I had never seen white faces alive, though I knew them well—otherwise. A naked white child kneeled by the side of the boat, and, stooping over, he must needs try to trail his hands in the river. It is a pretty thing to see how a child loves running water. I had fed that day, but there was a little unfilled space within me. Still, it was for sport and not for food that I rose at the child's hands. They were so clear a mark that I did not even look when I closed; and they were so small that though my jaws rang true—I am sure of that—the child drew them up swiftly unhurt. They must have passed between tooth and tooth—those small white hands. I should have caught him crosswise at the elbows, but, as I said, it was only for sport and desire to see new things that I rose at all. They cried out one after another in the boat, and presently I rose again to watch them. The boat was too heavy to push over. They were only women, but he who trusts a woman will walk on duckweed in a pool, as the saying is; and by the Right and Left of Gunga that is truth!"

"Once a woman gave me some dried skin from a fish," said the jackal. "I had hoped to get her baby, but horse food is better than the kick of a horse, as the saying is. What did thy woman do?"

"She fired at me with a short gun of a kind I have never seen before or since. Five times, one after another" (the mugger must have met with an old-fashioned revolver); "and I stayed open-mouthed and gaping, my head in the smoke. Never did I see such a thing. Five times, as swiftly as I wave my tail—thus!"

The jackal, who had been growing more and more interested in the story, had just time to leap back as the tail swung by like a scythe.

[TO BE CONCLUDED.]

"SHE FIRED AT ME WITH A SHORT GUN."

ANOTHER VERDICT FOR DR. KENNEDY

A Philadelphian Cured of Gravel.

(Philadelphia, Pa., Item.)

Since the investigations of the claims made for Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy by the press, they have received letters from every State in the Union, and find the remedy fails in few cases.

The opinion of the average physcian has been that kidney and urinary troubles could be cured only by a long and persistent treatment. Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy acts quickly, curing obstinate cases in a very short time.

One of our best known citizens, Mr. John J. Neill, of No. 2437 North Eighth street, was a sufferer from gravel, in speaking of his case said: "I had a very bad attack of gravel, and Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, taken about one month, completely cured me. I cannot say too much in its favor."

Favorite Remedy is prescribed with unfailing success for all diseases brought about by an exess of uric acid in the blood. In rheumatism, dyspepsia and nerve troubles, it has made many cures that were considered beyond the aid of medicine. Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy can be obtained of all druggists at one dollar a bottle, or six bottles for five dollars.

ASSAULTED BY NEGROES

Mrs. Maxson Dunham Clubbed Nigh Unto Death.

HER HUSBAND ALSO ATTACKED.

While One Negro Attempted to Overpower the Farmer at the Barn, Another Demanded Money at the House, and Beat the Defenceless Woman With a Cordwood Stick—Both Fiends Escape.

An outrage was committed by two negroes upon Mr. and Mrs. Maxson Dunham at their home on the borders of Plainfield Saturday evening at 6. The crime was near to murder, but by mercy both lives assailed were spared.

Mr. and Mrs. Dunham are honored citizens of Piscataway, and zealous members of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church. Their home is a pleasant white farmhouse on the road from Samptown to Stelton about midway between South Plainfield and New Market. It commands a fine view of the mountains, the lake, the rolling Middlesex farms, and Plainfield city.

Saturday being their Sabbath, and the Yearly Meeting being in progress in the old New Market Church, both Farmer Dunham and his wife drove to morning service. At noon they entertained two denominational guests at dinner, and Mr. Dunham drove back with them for the afternoon session, leaving his wife at home alone.

Returning home unattended late in the afternoon, Mr. Dunham put up his horse, milked his cow, and took the milk to the house for his wife to strain. He then went back to the barn, put grain in the horse's manger, and stepped out of the stable to lock it for the night. Darkness had fallen, and he did not notice a man standing behind the door.

As he reached to shut the door, however, he felt someone seize him. For the moment he thought it a neighborly joke. But as a pair of hands closed over his throat and he was forced to the ground, he felt that this meant business. Then he saw that his assailant was a negro, and he battled bravely for his life.

"If you holler I'll shoot you!"—snarled the brute. The sturdy farmer's sinews were toughened by sixty-five years of useful development, and while they struggled together on the ground he cast off the grip of the strangler. In the face of death he was not dismayed, and finding his voice he shouted "Murder!"

Three times that cry rang on the air, though the negro sought to smother it with his hands over the farmer's lips. Then the negro called out "Bill! Bill!"

From the house came running another negro, to where the two men still were wrestling on the ground outside of the stable door. There was a pair of bars nearby. He lowered these, ran across the short strip of meadow back of the barn, and plunged into the thicket on towards South Plainfield.

"I felt that I was getting the better of my man;"—says Mr. Dunham modestly—"and I guess he felt so too, for he broke loose, got up, and ran after the other fellow."

The farmer went to the house. He tried the back door; it was hooked fast on the inside. He tried the side door; it was locked. In response to his tapping he heard his wife's voice faintly ask "Who's there?". He told her and she recognized his voice and let him in.

He was horrified to see blood streaming down her cheeks, crimsoning her throat and dress.

"How badly are you hurt?"—he anxiously asked.

The plucky woman said "Oh, only considerably bruised".

He bade her lie on the sofa while he went for help. The nearest house was occupied by the Swaer family, Germans. Mr. Swaer is employed in the Pond Machine Tool Works, Plainfield, and was not at home. Mr. Dunham saw Mrs. Swaer.

"There's been near to murder done at my house;"—he told her—"come quick!"

The woman, escorted by her hired man, who armed himself with a stick, hurried to the Dunham house and ministered to the injured wife.

Mr. Dunham hastened to the home of Milkman John Powers, told the story briefly, and the news was quickly spread through the country.

He could not run, for his hip had been crippled by a fall five years ago, but as fast as he could Mr. Dunham went back home and hitched the horse to go for a physician.

Speedily Dr. M. J. Whitford was in attendance. He clipped Mrs. Dunham's hair and found seven terrible gashes in the scalp. There were welts, and cuts, and jagged holes, but luckily they were all of the flesh, and the skull was found not fractured.

Assisted by the good offices of Mr. Dunham and the neighbors, the surgeon tenderly dressed the wounds and skilfully sewed the scalp together. Mrs. Dunham bore the suffering unflinchingly, and was made as comfortable as possible.

She bore up with remarkable fortitude, and told her story.

Having strained the milk into the pans, she had started for the well in the yard to rinse the pail. At the back door she was met by a negro who struck her on the head with a club and said "Give me the money or I'll kill you!"

The blow staggered her, but she said "I have no money". He struck her again, repeating "I'll kill you!"

She struggled against his attack, and sought to ward off the blows. He was inside now, and in his movements knocked down a section of stovepipe.

"I'll call John"—she cried, hoping to scare him by the idea that there was a man in the house.

Then a more cruel blow than before was dealt, and screaming "John!" she sank to the floor. She was struck again and again, till she felt that consciousness was leaving her.

She must have been senseless but a moment, for just as she had rallied enough to realize that the negro was gone, and had swayed painfully from door to door, fastening them against further attack, her husband came.

The negro that beat Mrs. Dunham was short and lightweight. The one who assaulted Mr. Dunham was tall, lanky, and clad in a light suit. The tall one, it was remembered, had stopped at the farmhouse in the morning, peeped in a window, and asked for something to eat. Mrs. Dunham had fed him.

The negroes were strangers in the district, and two answering the same description were noticed two weeks ago in Dunellen.

Exciting stir among the people followed the spread of the news. C. T. Rogers immediately headed a searching party, and was assisted by Mr. Larrabee, the Carpenter brothers, Ephraim Pyatt, and others, in scouring the country.

Two colored men who seemed wrought up at having missed a train were arrested on suspicion in Dunellen, but they proved to be workmen for Henry Garretson and Peter Benward, and after Constable Warden had shown them to Mr. Dunham and he had said they were not the ones they were released.

All day Sunday watch was kept everywhere in the locality, and by wire through the State, for the fugitives. All day Sunday the Dunham farmhouse was visited by many friends with messages of sympathy and offers of help. Mr. Dunham's throat and face were blotched with red from the gripe of the negro's claws, but he was as spry and even-tempered as ever, and amiably told and retold his experiences. Mrs. Dunham, realizing the danger should erysipelas develop in her wounds, was nevertheless calm and cheerful. Her friends all said her excellent constitution, patient forbearance, sunny nature, and sublime faith, would pull her back to health. She is in good hands; for, besides her physician, her daughter, Mrs. J. C. VanDyke of East Front street, Plainfield, is in faithful attendance.

The weapon which came so near to killing Mrs. Dunham was found by the rear door where the negro had dropped it in his flight. It was a rough, round stick of stout white-oak from the woodpile; in length, sixteen inches; in diameter, two. The harsh bark had been bruised and torn away by the murderous blows on the woman's head, and locks of gray hair clung to it.

Chief of Police George W. Grant, who, accompanied by a Daily Press reporter, visited the scene yesterday and obtained this true story of the dreadful affair, brought the club to his office and held it as evidence against the negroes, should they ever be caught.

PLEA FOR DRUG CLERKS.

Pastor Herring Protests Against Their Sunday Hours.

Rev. Charles E. Herring of the First Presbyterian Church preached to young men yesterday morning from the text Acts IV:23. He thought that the churches should be made more attractive to young men and that nothing should be done to keep them away.

He referred especially to the drug clerks of the city, and recommended that efforts be made to have their Sunday hours, 9 to 1 and 4 to 9, changed to 9 to 10, 12 to 1 and 4 to 7. Speaking of the character of the city he said that Plainfield was not a paradise and that there were evidently evil influences here which should be investigated.

A Lively Leader.

(From the New York Journalist.)

The success of the Plainfield, N. J., Daily Press, under the managing editorship of Walter Irving Clarke, has led to its enlargement from a four to an eight-page form, and it has been otherwise improved. The Daily Press is now regarded as the handsomest daily in Union County, and is a lively leader in local affairs. Its venerable parent, the Weekly Constitutionalist, has followed in its example in changing from blanket sheet to modern form.

LIVE STOCK PERISHED.

Fourteen Cows and Five Horses Died in Flame.

MILKMAN GILES'S HEAVY LOSS.

His Barns Were New, Filled With His Season's Crops, and Were Uninsured When Destroyed Saturday Night—One of the Horses Was a $1,000 Trotter.

Nelson Giles is a milkman who has a farm on the road from New Market to New Brunswick half a mile across from Newtown. He built two new barns during the Summer and tore down the old one. He had intended to transfer the insurance from the old building to the new ones, but he did the carpenter work himself and did not have them finished in time to do this. Accordingly his new barns were not insured when they burned with their contents of live stock and hay Saturday night.

The fire broke out at 8 in the evening Mr. Giles and his son Randolph had driven to Dunellen at 6. Mrs. Giles and her two daughters and young son were in the farm-house reading at the time. The hired man was asleep upstairs in the house. The flames were discovered by Mrs. Giles at 8:15, and about the same time her brother-in-law ran over from his farm and dairy across the brook.

The barn in the rear, where the cows were kept, was then a mass of flames. Dewitt Giles opened the door of the adjoining barn and found it filled with fire and smoke. He was unable to enter and turned his attention to saving the wagon house and sheds a few feet away. The shingles caught fire in several places and he used his hat to smother the sparks until the girls brought water.

Neighbors arrived to help him after a few minutes. The barns burned to the ground and soon only the house and the carriage sheds remained in the farmyard. The owner and his son returned home at 9 and then learned what had happened.

Fourteen cows and five horses were burned to death. All that Mr. Giles has left is the horse that he drove to Dunellen with. The cows were valued at about $700. The horses included two colts which Mr. Giles was training. One, a trotter worth $1,000, belonged to Dr Mosher of Jersey City. The other was not so valuable and was the property of Michael Meyers of Bank street, Newark. The barn also contained six tons of hay, seueral sets of harness and various farming implements.

The general opinion among the neighbors is that the fire was the work of an incendiary who approached the place by way of the woods in the rear. The hay was all right, Mr. Giles says, and the hired-man has not been smoking lately. Randolph Giles was in the barn at 6 with a lantern, but he is sure the fire did n't start from that.

Crowds of people were at the scene of the fire yesterday. Eighteen young men walked from New Brunswick in the afternoon. The assault at Maxson Dunham's home became connected in the rumors with the fire, and many who visited the Giles farm had heard that two negroes had murdered the farmer and his wife and set fire to the buildings.

JOY WITH THE PARKS.

North Plainfield's Club Affords a Delightful Evening.

The opening Saturday night of the series of informal entertainments planned by the House Committee of the Park Club was a decided success. The aim of the committee, B. A. Hegeman, Jr., Charles A. Reed and J. E. Erickson, is to make Saturday evening always a club night with the Parks, enjoyable for every member of the families belonging to the club.

From 8 to 9 an impromptu musical programme was delightfully rendered by talent from among the members of the Club. Miss Florence Underwood sang several favorite ballads very sweetly. Will Runyon made a hit with comic songs. Fletcher Hallock played on the banjorine and piano in accompaniment to songs which afforded much amusement. W. E. MacClymont played on the piano and responded to enthusiastic encores.

The audience filled comfortably the main room of the building. Dainty decorations of white chrysanthemums, calla lilies and rubber plants added to the parlor-like effect of the room.

The Greatness of Christian Manhood.

Rev. B. W. Hand's sermon in the First Church of Christ last night was for the special benefit of the young men. The theme was "Two, Which" or "Ye cannot serve God and Mammon". He drew the line sharply between the Christian and the sinner, and emphasized the greatness of a strong Christian manhood.

Fun and Music.

An entertainment will be given under the auspices of Holy Cross Brotherhood in the parish building, Thursday evening, Nov. 22, at 8:15. A 50-cent ticket pays for a programme of mirth and melody, farce and pantomime.

END OF THE YEARLY.

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTISTS CONCLUDE THEIR MEETING.

Dr. Lewis Preaches the Closing Sermon, and Holds the Home to Be the Centre of Influence.

The Sabbath-day sessions of the Seventh-Day Baptist Yearly Meeting in the New Market Church began with a sermon by Rev. I. L. Cottrell of Shiloh on "Neglect", from Hebrews II:3. In the afternoon the Sabbath-school was taught by Superintendent W. H. Satterly, Mrs. Reune Randolph, Rev. J. C Bowen of Marlborough, Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis and Rev. I. L. Cottrell, each taking a part of the lesson-study.

The young people had a prayer-meeting after the school was dismissed. In the evening Dr. Lewis conducted a helpful question-box on "A Working Church" Rev. J. G. Burdick of New York then preached a sermon on "Faith".

Yesterday morning an hour was devoted to the Y. P. S. C. E. Miss Ernestine Smith of Plainfield read a paper on "The Greatness of Little Things". Miss Lizzie Fisher of Marlborough gave a reading entitled "Christ in the Home, a Dream". Miss Lena Burdick of New York spoke on preparation for Bible study. J. B. Cottrell of Shiloh presented a paper on the "The Victory of Youth". Another paper was on "The Reforms of the Day", read by Miss Anna Langthworthy of New York. Mrs. H. M. Maxson of Plainfield conducted an open parliament on "Work among Junior Endeavorers."

Dr. Lewis preached the sermon with which the meeting closed last night. He defined law by stating that God's thought is law and every law is a thought of God, and continuing, said: Law is everywhere. In human life it is the same as elsewhere, but there the individual will power comes in. Its place is subordinate to God's law.

Much of the lawlessness among the lower classes is caused by the sediment that filters through from the upper classes. Then there is theological lawlessness, or the idea that the laws of the Old Testament have all been done away with. The only cure for lawbreaking is the restriction of immigration. Men make republics, swords may make monarchies. Each home is a centre of influence. Let it be a powerful, lasting Christian influence. The sermon was an earnest, stimulating demand for better government and better citizenship.

SURPRISED A COLLEGE STUDENT.

Pleasant Incident of a Pennington Scholar's Vacation.

George Snediker of Grove street, who is home from Pennington Seminary for a few days, found on entering his house Saturday evening that it had already been taken possession of by a number of his friends. Miss Louise Snediker had cleverly planned this little surprise, which proved to be a big one for George.

Refreshments were served during the evening. Miss Hasbrouck furnished music for dancing in her usual excellent style until 12 o'clock chimed out that the Sabbath had come, when all bade the host and hostess good-night, each with "I have spent a delightful evening".

Among those present were Miss Lou Cox and Mr. Cox of New York; Mr. Hyndman of Pennington; the Misses Laura Emmons, Nora Williams, Georgie Fountain, Miss Schoonmaker, Miss Jane Schoonmaker, Miss Lillian Force, the Miss Freeman and VanEmburgh; and Fred Freeman, and Messrs. Howland, Dryden and Woltmann.

His Policy Outlined.

Mr. Martine, the "Farmer Orator", asked by a Daily Press reporter what he thought to be the best policy for the Democrats to pursue in the remaining lease of their term in Congress?—said, I feel it not only to be the duty but the best policy of our party to press the tariff fight—to make broader the tariff bill and place iron, coal, sugar, on the free list—this will mean commercial supremacy for the United States and busy mills and workshops. The benefits will be apparent by next Presidential election.

After Business, Refreshments.

The Netherwood Bowling Club will hold their first regular meeting Wednesday evening. They have engaged the Netherwood Hotel bowling alleys for the Winter.

The officers of the club are Anthony Dyett, president; Jacob Vandeventer, secretary and treasurer, and George W. Thomas, Jacob Vandeventer and William L. Brown, executive committee.

Refreshments will be provided by the feminine members.

Baptist Home for the Aged.

A public reception and donation visit will be given at the Baptist Home for the Aged, 285 Roseville avenue, Newark, from 2 to 5 tomorrow afternoon. All friends will be welcome. The Orange and Roseville street cars at Market and Broad streets carry passengers directly to Roseville avenue, within a few blocks of the Home.

ANTHONY'S CLOSE CALL.

Slept in a Room with Gas Turned on.

THE LEAK WAS AN ACCIDENT.

The Porter Burst in the Door and Found the Sleeper Nearly Dead—Dr. Davis Saves the Life by Heroic Treatment—Unlucky 24.

Samuel Anthony of Madison, a guest at Hotel Grenada, came near to death yesterday morning. He was almost suffocated in his room by escaping gas, turned on by accident.

Mr. Anthony has been in Plainfield several months. He is a single man of 35 years and has been making a good living by the use of a patent axle-thread cutter with which to make carriage wheels run right at the rate of $1 50 per set.

He went to his room as usual at 11:45 Saturday night. When he shut off the gas he evidently turned the valve too far, as the fixture was loose and the stop did not catch properly. It was the only defective fixture in the house and had not been noticed. The gas was left escaping at nearly full force.

John Anderson, the colored porter, was the first to notice that anything was wrong. He smelled the gas shortly before 8 yesterday morning and began to investigate. He found the odor the most noticeable in front of Mr. Anthony's room and as there was no response to his knocks decided that something had happened.

The door was burst in and the room was found filled with gas. The occupant was in bed unconscious. Dr. T. S. Davis was hurriedly summoned. He saved the man's life by his prompt and skilful action. All day he worked over the unconscious man and in the evening he thought he would recover, although his condition was decidedly dangerous. Had the man remained in the deadly atmosphere a few minutes longer he would undoubtedly have died.

Mr. Anthony awoke this morning. He knew he felt ill, but he had no recollection of what he had gone through. He thought today was Sunday and was astonished to learn what had happened. His rapid recovery is expected.

The accident occurred in what was formerly Room 24 and adds one more link to the chain of peculiar circumstances which follow the Miller Brothers in connection with rooms with that number. When they ran the Sheridan House in Elizabeth a man committed suicide and a baby died from an overdose of medicine in Room 24. While they were at Laing's Hotel a man died in Room 24 as the result of a carriage accident. Moving to Hotel Grenada they were met with the fact that while the late James H. Force was proprietor a suicide had been committed in Room 24. Accordingly they erased the number and labeled the room "No 5" and made another No. 24. It was in the old 24 that Saturday night's accident happened.

Wretched Fakers at Work.

The assault on Mr. and Mrs. Maxson Dunham was the subject of lying reports by some of the New York and Philadelphia papers this morning, causing needless alarm among friends of the couple who read such paragraphs as this from the New York Times:

"Mrs. Dunham's life is despaired of, as her skull is bruised in four places, and her scalp is badly lacerated. She has remained insensible ever since, with the exception of short intervals, and even then she does not recognize anyone."

Mrs. Dunham was not unconscious for any part of the time, and talked placidly with many friends yesterday. Her life is by no means despaired of.

The New York Sun gave a full and correct story, and other papers that used the United Press service were correctly informed. The Sun and United Press despatches were sent by reporters who carefully investigated; the others were faked on hearsay.

Schools Close Friday.

H. M. Maxson, superintendent of the Plainfield Public Schools, will lecture before the Union County Teachers Institute to be held in Elizabeth Friday and Saturday. The schools will close Friday to permit all teachers to attend.

Repairs Completed.

The Mt. Olive Sunday-school were able to meet in their church again yesterday. The repairs which have been going on compelled them to use Reform Hall the previous Sunday.

Episcopalian Good Fellowship.

Rev. T. Logan Murphy and the choir of the Church of the Holy Cross attended the services of All Saints P. E. Church, Scotch Plains, last evening, by invitation of Dr. True. The members of All Saints Church sent the largest Scotch Plains stage for the choir, who under command of Prof. George H. Hoskings's choirmaster, went in a body from Holy Cross church at 7. A second large stage from Huff's containing a large number of the leading members of the church with Rector Murphy and Superintendent B. R. Western followed shortly after. A beautiful choral service was rendered, and an able and interesting sermon was preached at the church, the latter by Dr. Murphy, to a large congregation. Dr. True read the lessons and prayers. A very cordial reception and kindly greeting was given by the members of All Saints Church to their visiting friends at the close of the service. The party reached home in good season.

The Plowman.

First in the field before the reddening sun,
Last in the shadows when the day is done,
Line after line, along the furrowed sod,
Marks the broad acres where his feet have trod.
Still where he treads the stubborn clods divide,
The smooth, fresh furrow opens deep and wide,
Matted and dense the tangled turf upheaves.
Mellow and dark the ridgy cornfield cleaves.
Up the steep hillside, where the laboring train
Slants the long track that scores the level plain,
Through the moist valley, clogged with oozing clay,
The patient convoy breaks its destined way.
At every turn the loosening chains resound,
The swinging plowshare circles glistening round,
Till the wide field one billowy waste appears,
And wearied hands unbind the panting steers.

These are the hands whose sturdy labor brings
The peasant's food, the golden pomp of kings.
This is the page whose letters shall be seen
Changed by the sun to words of living green.
This is the scholar whose immortal pen
Spells the first lesson hunger taught to men.
These are the lines that heaven commanded toil
Shows on his deed—the charter of the soil!

O gracious mother, whose benignant breast
Wakes us to life and lulls us all to rest,
How thy sweet features, kind to every clime,
Mock with their smile the wrinkled front of time!
We stain thy flowers—they blossom o'er the dead—
We rend thy bosom, and it gives us bread.
O'er the red field that trampling strife has torn
Waves the green plumage of the tasseled corn.
Our maddening conflicts scar thy fairest plain.
Still thy soft answer is the growing grain.
Yet, O our mother, while uncounted charms
Steal round our hearts in thine embracing arms,
Let not our virtues in thy love decay,
And thy fond sweetness waste our strength away. —Oliver Wendell Holmes.

My Creed.

I do not question school nor creed
Of Christian, Protestant or priest.
I only know that creeds to me
Are but new names for mystery;
That God is good from east to east,
And more I do not know nor need
To know to love my neighbor well.
I take their dogmas as they tell,
Their pictures of their godly good,
In garments thick with heathen blood;
Their heaven, with its harps of gold,
Their horrid pictures of their hell,
Take hell and heaven undenied.
Yet were the two placed side by side,
Placed full before me for my choice,
As they are pictured, best and worst,
As they are peopled, tame and bold,
The canonized, and the accursed
Who dared to think, and thinking speak,
And speaking act, bold cheek to cheek,
I would in transports choose the first
And enter hell with lifted voice.
—Joaquin Miller.

The Vine Has Grown.

Once upon a time
Women were the vine
That clung unto the fabled sturdy oak.
They say it's not the proper thing,
However, now to cling,
And this theory's doomed to be a joke.

The oak trees of today
Have such a selfish way
Of thinking that the earth is theirs alone.
The timid, trusting vine
To resent this doth incline.
She wants a foot of ground to call her own.

She knows that she was born
The oak tree to adorn,
But all she asks are light and room to grow.
Did not the same dear earth
Give both vine and oak trees birth?
It is hard to make an oak believe it, though.

Still I shouldn't wonder much
If this lately dreamed of touch
Of independence in a vine would yet effect
A change for much—nay, more,
Than the world's been looking for.
It may do more good than you or I expect.
—M. Muchmore.

New Every Morning.

Every day is a fresh beginning;
Every morn is the world made new.
You who are weary of sorrow and sinning,
Here is a beautiful hope for you,
A hope for me and a hope for you.

All the past things are past and over.
The tasks are done, and the tears are shed.
Yesterday's errors let yesterday cover;
Yesterday's wounds, which smarted and bled,
Are healed with the healing which might has shed.

Yesterday now is a part of forever.
Bound up in a sheaf, which God holds tight,
With glad days, and sad days, and bad days which never Shall visit us more with their bloom and their blight,
Their fullness of sunshine or sorrowful night.

Let them go, since we cannot relieve them,
Cannot undo and cannot atone.
God in his mercy receive, forgive them!
Only the new days are our own,
Today is ours, and today alone.

Here are the skies all burnished brightly;
Here is the spent earth all reborn;
Here are the tired limbs springing lightly
To face the sun and to share with the morn
In the chrism of dew and the cool of dawn.

Every day is a fresh beginning.
Listen, my soul, to the glad refrain,
And, spite of old sorrow and older sinning,
And puzzles forecasted, and possible pain,
Take heart with the day and begin again!
—Susan Coolidge.

Don't Throw Cudgels at Your Town.

Whatever failings you may have—and heaven knows all have some
That they should struggle day and night to try and overcome—
Ne'er stand within the market place, and as you coldly frown,
With all the strength that you possess, throw cudgels at your town.

Do not unceasingly complain about her streets and squares,
The failures her officials have, the parson's talks and prayers,
And do not in an endless plaint your small opinion give
Of how much better things were done where you chanced to live.

If things are not what they should be and ought to be improved,
Roll up your sleeves and go to work and have what's wrong removed.
But let me say, whatever line of action you pursue,
Do not destroy what you now have, till you can build anew.
—Boston Globe.

The Power of Giving.

A noble joy the hearts of those must fill
Who keep the struggling living,
And with that what happiness those hearts must thrill
Which have the power of giving!

Give arms of strength to aid the poor and weak;
Give strong hands to the friendless,
Kind, tender words, so short and sweet to speak,
Whose echoings shall be endless.

WHIP AND SPUR.

C. J. Hamlin thinks Merry Chimes, 2:08½, has as much speed as Robert J, 2.01½.

Domino partisans are conceding that Henry of Navarre is the greatest 3-year-old of the year.

Impetuous, rightly named, trotted two heats in 2:15¾ each at Nashville, a great performance for a 2-year-old.

J. J. Hyland stands at the head of eastern trainers, with McClelland, the shrewd owner of Henry of Navarre, second.

One of J. R. Keene's finest imported brood mares, Dimity, by Galopin-Sister Louise by Hermit, was killed by lightning.

Monk Overton, a jockey who once rated as No. 1, refuses to keep down his weight, and consequently does not ride enough to make money.

Transparent celluloid peaks to jockey caps are to be tried at Oakley track, Cincinnati. They are to be much larger than the regular peaks.

While the pacer Rubenstein was at Indianapolis he was left in charge of his groom, who got drunk and left the horse without food for 48 hours.

It is said that August Belmont will breed Lady Violet to Knight of Ellerslie when her racing days are over in the hopes of getting a Henry of Navarre.

Maid Marian made a new record for five furlongs when she covered the distance in 56¾ seconds. Dr. Hasbrouck and Correction formerly shared the mark of 57 seconds.

The Missouri pacer, Rowdy Joe, 2:08, 6 years old, was sold two years ago for $160, but was returned to the seller because of an alleged unsoundness. He is now held at $5,000.

The Maspeth track, near New York, recently tried a starting device in the line of a rising and swinging gate that aligns the horses, the jockeys being notified to break at the third sound of the gong. The device is said to have worked well.

THE STAMP OF STYLE.

Lace, passementerie and embroidery are appliqued upon silk and wool materials.

A jacket of velvet has the lapels and cuffs almost solidly covered with passementerie.

A new waist of silk is fitted in the back with quite full skirts and gathered in very full at the front.

New capes are three-quarter length and elaborately trimmed with bands of fur or feathers and narrow passementerie or braid.

Among the most attractive of the fancy waists to wear with plain or dark skirts are those made of bright, self colored india silks, with trimmings of ecru lace.

Short capes are still fashionable. One model has three capes, the upper one extending just to the shoulder points, the lower one falling some distance below the waist line.

A tight fitting wrap of plush has sleeves with very large puffs at the shoulders and open sections falling away from the arms. These sections are brought forward on the waist over the bust, giving the effect of a cape.

Strap finished seams are among the features of tailor made costumes. They have this advantage—that one can fit a cloth garment with much more ease by having the seam on the right side. These are then trimmed off and covered with bias bands of the material stitched down on either edge.

A long, close fitting wrap has the waist, collar and lower portions of the sleeves wrought in elaborate embroidery. There is an embroidered belt or girdle, with strips of similar garniture falling over the top of the skirt. These strips are eight in number and are fastened to the garment.

NEW TARIFF PROFITS

ADVANTAGES THAT WILL ACCRUE TO THE UNITED STATES.

Increased Foreign Trade Adds to Industrial and Commercial Prosperity—Markets of the World Invaded—Portent of What Awaits European Manufacturers.

The calamity organs are publishing extracts from English newspapers expressing a favorable opinion of the new tariff of this country. It would be strange indeed if English journals should entertain any other than a favorable view of legislation that approaches the policy which their own nation has deliberately adopted after long experiencing the mischiefs of protection. There is no doubt, however, that other countries will share to a greater or less degree in the advantages of the increased foreign trade of the United States under the new law. But the largest share of these advantages will accrue to American manufacturers, workingmen and farmers in securing them wider markets for their surplus products.

In the narrow conceptions of the protectionists, transmitted from the ages in which commerce was in its infancy, there can be no mutual benefit in the international exchange of commodities. Their ideas of trade do not rise above the notion that in these exchanges one side is sure to be cheated, as happens when schoolboys "swap" pocketknives or marbles. This mediæval conception of foreign trade is what has led to the erection of all existing Chinese walls against commerce. When Spain placed severe restrictions upon both import and export trade in her jealousy of foreign nations, she laid the ax to the industrial and commercial prosperity of one of the most highly endowed people on the face of the earth.

While foreign nations, including Germany and Spain, have no cause to complain of the new tariff, its substantial advantages remain with this country. In enlarging the list of free raw materials it places American manufacturers on an equal footing with their European rivals and enables them to extend the markets for their products to the remotest corners of the earth. This is what Chairman Wilson impressed upon the receptive minds of his London hosts, and for his proud and patriotic vaunt of the ability of his countrymen to distance competition when no longer handicapped he has been roundly abused by every calamity monger in the land.

But the foreigners already witness with apprehension the extent to which American manufacturers, consisting of the highest products of human skill and paying the best wages for workmanship, have invaded the markets which they claimed for their own. These annual exports of nearly $200,000,000 of manufactures of which the materials are free are not only a substantial reality, but a portent of what awaits English manufacturers as well as French and German manufacturers under the more liberal policy now inaugurated. Unpalatable as Chairman Wilson's boast may have been to a portion of his London audience, it is amply justified by the current facts of trade. But while the American people—manufacturers, workingmen, farmers, merchants and consumers—will appropriate and enjoy the chief benefits of the new tariff it is a pleasing reflection that the change will do no harm to the rest of the world. On the contrary, in bringing the nations into closer relations with each other, this liberal policy will redound to the progress and well being of them all.—Philadelphia Record.

The Republican Theory of Government.

In Wisconsin Governor Peck's Democratic administration, finding $700,000 or $800,000 surplus in the treasury, derived from Philetus Sawyer's refunded bank interest on state funds and from other sources, determined not to raise a state tax, but to use the surplus on hand for state expenses and the support of schools. And now a wandering Republican orator is declaiming up and down the state that it is unconstitutional for Governor Peck and his associates to use any money for the support of schools unless it is collected by taxation. Though there are hundreds of thousands of dollars on hand, the money cannot be transferred to the school fund because it is not money raised by a tax. That is the fundamental Republican theory. The sole object of government is to tax. Nothing is constitutional except a tax. It is unlawful to operate the schools without a tax, although there is money enough on hand not raised by taxes to pay all expenses. It is styled properly "the tax party."—Chicago Herald.

What Free Wool Saves the People.

It is rather an under than an over statement to say that $163,534,000 per year will be saved to consumers upon their purchases of the single necessary article of woolen manufactures in their various uses. This startling aggregate is only about $2.50 per head for our whole population, but the multiplicity of tariff exactions, if they should all be in the same manner laid bare to the public gaze, would be a matter of amazement. We carry about our weight of indirect tariff taxation as we carry the pressure of the atmosphere and are only made conscious of the load by demonstration.—Philadelphia Record.

Calamity Howlers Hard Pressed.

The high tariff men are having a hard time in trying to maintain their "calamity" claims. Wool, sugar and lumber have all been proved to be relatively stronger in the markets than they were before the reduced tariff went into effect.—Omaha World-Herald.

And His Politics Are Chinese.

A careful study of the physiognomy and figure of Thomas Brackett Reed irresistibly points to the conclusion that in a cue, a yellow jacket and a peacock feather he would pass the frontier successfully as Li Hung Chang.—Chicago Herald.

Dr Best, the old professor and king of the medical school was talking eagerly to a pleasant-faced elegant young student who stood before him. The young man had taken his degree and received his diploma only the day before, he had graduated at the top of the class and as Dr. Best had said to one of his fellows, as they sat together signing the diplomas, he was the only man in the class who really had a genius for his profession.

Dr Best was a New York physician of wide reputation and had kept his professorship in the medical school of one of the small inland colleges both because it was his own college and because the field work, which his lectures covered, gave him almost the only vacation that he could
